

POETRY.

FROM THE AMERICAN DEMOCRAT.
HARD BUT FAIR.
The life in town's a life of woe,
Of mischief, dread and care,

VARIETY.

Gratitude to God.—I esteem enjoyment the best proof of gratitude; nor do I think that we can pay a more acceptable duty to the Father of all Goodness, than by showing ourselves sensible of the favors he bestows upon us.

foundation on his own personal merit—and whether his mother was a queen or a washer-woman, it should not raise him one jot, or lower him one tittle in the estimation of a true American.

ON! It is stated that there is a project now on foot for bridging the Irish Channel, so as to connect Ireland and Scotland. The distance is only fifty miles.

Advance of Intellect. We find a lively remark on this subject in one of the English Magazines: "Ah, my dear, Mr. B. I fear this is all the good the march of intellect will do."

Unparalleled Parsimony.—Monsieur Vandeville was one of the most remarkable men in Paris for his avarice. In the year 1735 he was worth one million sterling.

Look and Learn.—A correspondent states that a well dressed woman accompanied by an apparently genteel man, was seen walking through one of the streets of Boston yesterday morning, in a state of intoxication.

"A Horse! A Horse!"—We have seen various anecdotes lately going the rounds of the papers, illustrative of the wonderful sagacity sometimes exhibited by several animals; but we think none are more remarkable than the following facts furnished by a creditable correspondent:

A farmer in Stafford Co. N. H., had a horse, which he ordinarily kept tied in the stable with a halter. He has frequently been known to unloose the halter with his teeth, open the stable door, which was fastened with a hasp on the outside, and get into the barn yard; then he would open the great barn doors, by disengaging from a bolt a stick four or five feet long, enter the barn and fill himself with hay.

Love and Murder.—A duel was recently fought in Texas, by M. Page and Laquerk.—They wasted three shots; Page was wounded, but death paid the doctor a visit, and he has retired from practice. It was a love affair. Strange how ferocious love will make a fellow!

Treatment of the sick.—Nothing can be more ridiculous, more detrimental, or more likely to prove fatal, than the manner in which efficient friends endeavor to injure the sick, by cramming them with what they foolishly call "light nourishing food."

"I have in the heart," exclaims the tender mother, "to refuse the child food when it asks me." In the majority of cases, by this course, the child is made sick, or its stomach is reduced to a condition in which it refuses every kind of plain and wholesome aliment; and though the cause of the malady is fully explained, and the necessity for rigid abstinence or for a proper selection of food is made manifest, yet still the vile practice of cramming it with unwholesome trash, and at all hours in the day, is persisted in.

Fashions.—The origin of many fashions was in the endeavor to conceal some deformity of the inventor. Patches were introduced to the English in the reign of Edward VI, by a foreign lady, who in this manner ingeniously covered a wen on her neck.

Paris Spectator. A farmer observing his servant, a great while at breakfast, said, "John, you make a long meal." "Sir, said John, 'a turkey of this size is not so soon eat as you think to!"

ACTAION. The famous story of Actaeon, the Hunter, who for looking at Diana whilst bathing, was changed by her into a stag, and devoured by his own dogs, is ascribed by Palpatius in his treatise "De Terribilibus Historiis" to the "circumstance that a certain man named Actaeon, paying too much attention to his dogs, was completely ruined, on which the neighbors said, (as is often done in modern times), 'that he was eat up by his hounds,' which saying being caught up by the poets, they arrested it as an actual fact.

Punctual hearer.—A woman who used to attend public worship with great punctuality, and took care to be always in time, was asked how it was she could always come so early; she answered, very wisely, "That it was part of her religion not to disturb the religion of others."
