

The mode is, that the Legislature shall propose amendments...

All Legislative authority is vested in the General Assembly...

The main question next occurs, suppose the vote so taken, and a majority is for the amendments...

When individuals agree to associate themselves together as a community...

All political power is vested in and derived from the people only.

It is usual to provide that constitutions shall not be altered or amended without the concurrence of two-thirds...

All Legislative authority is vested in a General Assembly elected in a prescribed manner.

In the Constitution of our State, there is no restriction upon the power to amend, and of course a majority may amend at any time...

The conclusion is irresistible, that the people may in their primary assembly amend the Constitution...
