that, whatever is calculated to increase the burdens of icitating ourselves, therefore, upon the extinguishment of the national debt, and the prosperous state of cut finances, let us not be tempted to depart from those sound maxims of public policy, which enjoin a just adaptation of the revenue to the expenditures that are consistent with a rigid economy, and an entire abatinence from all topics of legislation that are not clearly within the constitutional powers of the Government, and suggested by the wants of the country. Properly regarded, under such a policy, every diminution of the public burdens strong from taxation, gives to individuenterprise increased power, and furnishes to all the members of our happy Confederacy new motives for patriotic affection and support. But above all, its most important effect will be found in its influence upon the enaracter of the Government, by confining its action to those objects which will be sure to secure to it the attachment and support of our fellow-citizens. Circumstances make it my duty to call the attention of Congress to the Bank of the United States. Crested for the convenience of the Government, that metitution has become the sc -urge of the People. Its interference to postpone the payment of a portion of the national debt, that it might retain the public money sppropriated for that purpose, to strengthen it in a pointscontest-the extraordinary extension and contraction of its accommodations to the community—its cor-ing and partisan losss—its exclusion of the public di-awaits the American People, should they be deluded sors from a knowledge of its most important proceeddent to expend the first in the proceedat to expend its funds in hiring writers, and procuring the execution of printing, and the use made of that authority—the retention of the pension money and books after the selection of new agents—the groundless claim to heavy damages in consequence of the protest ed, than to concentrate the whole moneyed power of the want of one, the debates in our Legislature are enof the bill drawn on the French Government—have, the Republic in any form whatsoever, or under any retirely lost to the People, and North Carolina is consithrough various channels, been laid before Congress. Immediately after the close of the last session, the Bank, through its President, announced its ability and read ness to abandon the system of unparalleled curtailment, and the interruption of domestic exchanges, which it had practised upon from the 1st of August, 1833, to the 30th June, 1834, and to extend its accommodations to the community. The grounds assumed in this annunciation, amounted to an acknowledgment that the gurtailment, in the extent to which it had been carried, was not necessary to the safety of the Bank. and had been persisted in merely to induce Congress to grant the prayer of the Bank in its memorial relative to the removal of the deposites, and to give it a new charter. They were substantially a confession that all the real distresses which individuals and the country had endured for the preceding six or eight months, had been needlessly produced by it, with the view of affecting, through the sufferings of the People, the leguiative action of Congress. It is a subject of congratulation that Congress and the country had the virtue and firmness to bear the infliction; that the energies of our people soon found relief from this wanton tyranny. in vast importations of the precious metals from almost every part of the world; and that at the close of this dous effort to control our Government, the Bank found itself powerless, and no longer able to loan out its surplus means. The community had learned to marage its affhirs without its assistance, and trade had already found new auxiliaries; so that on the first of October last, the extraordinary spectacle was presented of a National Bank, more than one-half of whose capital was either lying unproductive in its vaults, or in the To the needless distremes brought on the country

This sum constituted a portion of the estimated revenues for the year 1884, upon which the appropriations made by Congress were based. It would as soon have been expected that our collectors would seize on the customs, or the receivers of our land offices on the moneys arising from the sale of public lands, under pro-tences of claims against the United States, as that the Bank would have retained the dividends. Indeed, if the principle he established that any one who chooses to set up a claim against the United States, may, without authority of law, seize on the public property or money wherever he can find it, to pay the claim, there will remain no assurance that our revenue will reach the Treasury, or that it will be applied, after the appropriation, to the purposes designated in the law. The paymasters of our army, and the pursers of our navy, may, under like pretences, apply to their own use moneye appropriated to set in motion the public force, and in time of war leave the country without defence. This measure resorted to by the Bank is disorganizing and revolutionary, and if generally resorted to by private citizens in like cases, would fill the land with an It ma violence.

lt is a comment of provision, that "no money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in comment of appropriation made by law." The palpable object of this provision is, to prevent the expenditure of the pubic money for any purposes whatsoever which shall not have been first approved by the Representatives of the People and the States in Congress assembled. It vests the power of declaring for what purposes the public money shall be expended, in the Legislative Department of the Government, to the exclusion of the Executive and Judicial, and it is not within the constitutional authority of either of those Departments to pay it away without law, or to sanction its payment. Ac cording to this plain constitutional provision, the claim of the Bank can never be paid without an appropriation by Act of Congress. But the Bank has never asked for an appropriation. It attempts to defeat the provision of the Constitution, and obtain payment without an Act of Congress. Instead of awaiting an appropris ation passed by both Houses of Congress, and approved by the President, it makes an appropriation for itself, That the money had not technically been paid into the Treasury, does not affect the principle attempted to be established by the Constitution. The Executive and Judicinry have as little right to appropriate and expend the public money, without authority of law, before it is placed to the credit of the Treasury, as to take it from the Treasury. In the Annual Report of the Secretary of the Treasury, and in his correspondence with the President of the Bank, and the opinions of the Attorney General accompanying it, you will find a further examination of the claims of the Bank, and the course it

It seems due to the safety of the public funds remaining in that Bank, and to the honor of the American People, that measures be taken to separate the Government entirely from an institution so mischievous to the public property, and so regardless of the Constitution and Laws. By transferring the Fublic Deposites, by appointing other Pension Agents so far as it had the power, by ordering the discontinuance of the receipt of Bank Checks in payment of the public dues after the first day of January next, the Executive has exercised all its lawful authority to sever the connection between the Government and this faithless corporation.

The high-handed career of this institution imposes upon the constitutional functionaries of this Government, duties of the gravest and most imperative chafacter-duties which they cannot avoid, and from which experience, it cannot be dealted that simplicity in the character of the Federal Government, and a rigid economy in its administration, should be regarded as fandamental and excred. All must be emploised as fandamental and excredit that the gasteness of the public dobt, by rendering transition is also my readiness to discharge those which may rightfully fall on me. To continue any husiness relations with the flank of the United fittles, that may be avoided without a breach of the national faith, after that institution has set at open defiance the conceded right of the Government to examine its affairs, after it has attempted to define the clearly expressed will of the People, by turning against them responds to the People, by turning against them iberties, the obligations of which all portions of the the immense power intrusted to its hands, and by invol-Union cheerfully acknowledged, it must be obvious, ving a country, otherwise peaceful, flourishing, and happy, in dissentions, embarrassment, and distress-would Government without necessity, must be fital to all our make the nation itself a party to the degradation so hopes of preserving its true character. While we are sedulously prepared for its public agents—and do much to destroy the confidence of mankind in popular Governments, and to bring into contempt their authority and efficiency. In guarding against an evil of such magnitude, considerations of temporary convenience should be thrown aside, and we should be influenced by such motives only as look to the honor and preservation of the Republican system. Deeply and solemnly impressed with the justness of these views, I feel it to my duty to recommend to you, that a law be passed, authorizing he sale of the public stocks; that the provision of the charter requiring the receipt of the notice of the Bank in payment of public dues, shall, in accordance with the power reserved to Congress in the 14th section of the charter, be suspended until the Bank pays the Treasury the dividends withheld; and that all laws, connecting the Government or its officers with the Bank, directly or indirectly, be repealed; and that councils; and the corrupt state of the public press, prothe institution be left hereafter to its own resources and

Events have satisfied my mind, and I think the minds of the American People, that the mischiefs and dangers which flow from a National Bank far overbalance all its advantages. The bold effort the present Bank has wantonly created, the violence of which it has been the occasion in one of our cities fismed for its observance of into a perpetuation of this institution, or the establishment of another like it. It is fervently hoped, that, thus admonished, those who have heretofore favored the establishment of a substitute for the present Bank, will be induced to abandon it, as it is evidently better to in cur any inconvenience that may be reasonably expectstrictions

Happily, it is already illustrated, that the arency of such an institution is not necessary to the fiscal operations of the Government. The State Banks are found fully adequate to the performance of all services which were required of the Bank of the United States, guite as promptly, and with the same cheapness. They have maintained themselves, and discharged all these duties, while the Bank of the United States was still powerful, and in the field as an open enemy; and it is not possible to conceive that they will find greater difficulties in their operations, when that enemy shall cease to egulation of the Deposites in the State Banks by law. Ithough the power now exercised by the Executive Department, in this behalf, is only such as was uniformly exercised through every Administration, from the origin of the Government up to the establishment of the present Bank, yet, it is one which is susceptible of regulation by law, and, therefore, ought to be so regulated. The power of Congress to direct in what places the Treasurer shall keep the money in the Treasurer surv. and to impose restrictions upon the Executive at thorsty in relation to their custody and removal, is unlimited, and its exercise will rather be courted than discouraged by those public officers and agents on whom rests the responsibility for their safety. It is desirable that as little power as possible should be left to the President or Secretary of the Treasury over those institutions-which, being thus freed from Executive influ ence, and without a common head to direct their operations, would have neither the temptation nor the abslity to interfere in the political conflicts of the country. Not deriving their charters from the National authori during the last session of Congress, has since been add- ties, they would never have those inducements to med-

SALISBURY:

SATURDAY::::: DECEMBER 13, 1834.

LETTER FROM RALEIGH.

RALESON, DECEMBER 4th, 1834. resolutions on Mr. Mangum's case were taken up in the Commons to-day. A motion to say them on the table was lost, 70 to 59. Dr. Potts, of Edgecomb, then addressed the House, in favor of the solutions. Mr. Craige, in reply, gave a compendious history of Gen. Jackson's Administration, exposing the nconsistency of the President's measures with his previously avowed principles; the means he used to acquire minusted power, and to defeat all the prescribed checks Albany Regency, and its influence upon the public duced by the new system of proscription on the one side and rewards on the other.

Mr. Craige was exceedingly animated throughoutanctimes very severe in his invectives, and bitter, though just, in his reproof of assumed and abused powmade to control the Government, the distress it has er. His speech was highly creditable to him, both as specimen of his talents for discussion, and of his intrepidity in defending the Constitution of his country. He spoke until he was almost exhausted; when, on motion, the House adjourned. He will conclude his remarks to-morrow. It is probable the balance of the week will be consumed by the House in this discussion. many other gentlemen are expected to speak.

It is regretted that we have no Reporter here :deres, abroad, as barren of eloquence as she is destitute

A few weeks ago I fondly hoped that North Carolina vas about to emerge from her apparently interminable lethargy, and assume her proper station in our Confederacy; but recent events have not tended to elevate my hopes. My motto, however, is, "Never despair of the Republic." We must increase our energy and our of considering himself "the State," and we see that his exertions in proportion to the magnitude of the obstacles we have to overcome, and success must altunately be the reward. In haste, your's truly,

The debate on Dr. Potts's resolutions was continue ip to the date of our last accounts from Raleigh-but the Register of Tuesday last expressed the belief that the question on their passage would be taken on the succeeding day, Wednesday.-Ed.)

> In regard to the first of these topics, the Message is exceptionable. The conduct of France towards our are circumstances which, in our opinion, excuse delay on her part :- for instance, the almost insulting letter of Mr. Rives, in which his vanity prompted him to say that he had overreashed the French Ministers in securing so large an award to our claims! The President, however, was evidently influenced by his naturally irritable passions when he penned the part of the Message relative to this subject. His concluding suggestion we think very ill-timed and injudicious.-It will be seen that he wishes Congress to invest him with discreupon the property of French citizens, in case the Chainber of Deputies should again neglect to make the necessary appropriation to settle our claims; and he argues the case to show that France should not consider this measure as a menace, and that she could not, under the laws of nations, make it a legal cause for war. But it is impossible to point out any instance in which such a proceeding has not led to a war, if the nations were any ways equally matched in strength; and we are therefore afraid that this recommendation of Gen. Jackson will have the effect to delay the action of the French Chamber, and thus embroil us in a disagreeable misunderstanding with that nation. War is to be deprecated even in the most extreme cases of National injury; but, when it is proposed to wage it for filthy lucre, and upon the nation which stood by us and fought our battles in the "times that tried men's souls," we consider it cruel and inhuman in the extreme. We look to the good sense of Congress for a repression of "our Military Chieftain's" desire again to "let slip the dogs of war" over our peaceful and happy country.

What shall we say to the President's "railing accusations" against the Bank! For the character of the station he occupies, we hope his charges are founded in truth; but, in the absence of proof, it appears to us that point of literary character, and of every shade in poli- they are more in keeping with the brawling partisans "pot-houses," than characteristic of the wisdom and moderation that should be exercised by the occupant of the National Palace at Washington. This body met on the 1st instant, and was organized by the election of Officers. In the Senate, the former peaker, George C. Drungoole, was re-elected, without opposition. In the Commons, Linn Banks, the former Speaker, and a friend of the Administration, was elected by a majority of two votes over Severn F. Parker, the opposition candidate. The "Richmond Compiler" says that seven of the opposition members were absent, and gives the names of eight who voted for Mr. Banks. We think the mme thing; but we see a course by which Gov. Lumpkin might have arrived at his aim is these cases without compromising his Anti-Nullification principles to such a fatal extent. The State of Georgia is the party cited to appear at the har of the Supreme Court :-- now, our notion is, that the Governor might have sent the Supreme Judges word that, seeing it was unpossible for the whole State to appear before them, the citation, of course, would not be regarded .-We don't my this would be the best course for one to take who had no horror for the name of Nullification we only suggest it to those who want to exercise the thing, under a different cognomen. Finding, afterwards, that one of the persons attacked had not been killed, the villains on the next night forced the house in which he lay, and deliberately murdered him, by cutting open the back of his head and taking out his brains?
