IMPERISHABLE.

The pure, the bright, the beautiful,
That stirred our hearts in youth,
The impulse to a worldly prayer,
The dreams of love and truth;

The longing after something lost,
The spirit's yearning cry;

The striving after better hopes,
These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to aid
A brother in his need,
The kindly words in grief's dark hour
That proved a friend indeed;

The plea for mercy softly breathed,
When justice trembles high;

The sorrow of a contrite heart—
These things shall never die.

The memory of a chequing hand,
The pressure of a kiss;

All and the trifles sweet and frail

That make up life's first bliss;

If with a firm, unchanging faith,

And holy trust and high,

Those hands have clasped, those lips have met,

These things shall never die.

The cruel and the bitter word

That wounded it all,

The chilling want of sympathy,

We feel but never tell:

The hard repulse that chills the heart,

Whose hopes are bounding high,

In an unfaded record kept—

These things shall never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand

Must find some work to do;

Lose not a chance to waken love,

Be firm and just and true.

So shall a light that cannot fade

Beam on them from on high,

And angel's voices say to thee,

These things shall never die.

A CASE OF SMALL-POX ON THE STREET.—The Fat Man who Wasn't Going to Turn Out.—Yesterday morning a colored man was found lying on the pavement at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and 9th street suffering from sickness, which was afterwards ascertained by Dr. Nairn to be small-pox. The police were notified and stationed themselves at a safe distance around to warn off all passers. The man, after lying there awhile, got up and tried to gain admittance to the Central guard-house, but was prevented by the officers, and made to resume his former position, in the shade of a tree on the sidewalk, until conveyance arrived. Notice was sent by Lieut. Skippon to the Board of Health at 11 o'clock, but the ambulance was at the other end of the city and could not be readily found. In the meantime Dr. Verdi was apprised of the circumstances, on the street, where he at once drove to the place and summoned the sick man in his private carriage and took him to the hospital. He is a non-resident and came from Fauquier county, Virginia.

Though a very pitiable case, there were yet some laughable features about it. While the man was lying on the sidewalk, the police were obliged to exert themselves very actively to keep people from unwittingly approaching him. The peremptory order of the police, to go to the right or left was frequently resented by pedestrains who did not understand the cause as some new fangled infringement on their rights. One stout old chap who came sweating along, mopping his face, and looking in a bad temper anyhow with the awful heat, on being noticed by the police to turn into the hot street, replied wrathfully, "Go to h—ll!" and was proceeding on his course, when the sight of the pitted object before him, and the shout of "small-pox! small-pox!" caused him, regardless of dignity or his bulk, to spring about twenty feet sideways at one leap; and in the course of his rabbit-like jumps to widen the gap between himself and the small-pox case, he came in contact with a pile of building material with such force as to tumble him head over heels amongst the bricks and sand. He picked himself up in a twinkling, however
