A GRAND POEM.

The following poem is said to have been delivered by Miss Lizzie Doten, a spiritual trance peaker, whilst under the influence of the spirit of Edgar A. Poe. Whether its originality can be meribed to Miss Doten I know not; but its similarity to "The Raven"-so justly celebrated-is sufficient to claim the attention of all lovers of literature. Though devoid of an or-Linality of style, it nevertheless posseses merwhich should not be entirely ignored. As I have seen it appear in any but a Northern weekly, I have conceived the idea that its perusal in your columns might prove af some interest to the warm-hearted Southern people. Hence respectfully solicit space in your next issue.

From the throne of life eternal, From the home of love supernal, Where the angels make music o'er the starry floor, in the first Mortals, I have come to meet you; And with words of peace to greet you ; And to tell you of the glory that is mine foreyermore,

RUTH.

Once before I found a mortal Waiting at the Heavenly portal-Waiting out to eatch some echo from the everopening door; Then I seized the quickening being, Caused my burning inspiration in a fiery flood to pour.

Now I come more meekly human, And the weak lips of a woman, Touched with fire from off the altar, not with burning, as of yore: But in holy love descending, With her chastened being blending, I will fill your soul with music from the bright celestial shore.

As one heart yearns for another, From the golden gates of glory, turn I to the earth once more ; Where I drained the cup of sadness, And life's bitter, burning billows swept my burdoned being o'er.

Here the harples and the ravens, Human vampires, sordid cravens, Prefed upon my soul and substance, till I writhed in anger sore ; Life and I then seemed mismated
