THE LEGISLATURE

This body is hammering away on the revenueday, election law, Ac. It is not had on the debt question. Perhaps it is best that impracticable matters are not undertaken. But then, Legislators, and their newspaper backers should not have made so many big promises last summer about this matter when it was desired to have the amendments adopted.

A bill increasing the power of magistrates will probably be adopted.

A resolution has been adopted to adjourn next Monday. It is to be boped this resolution will not be reconsidered; although there has been nothing, or next to nothing, effected by the present session of much practical importance or of public interest, and of transit mellow

The "Bank of North Carolina."

Some of the Stockholders of the Bank of North Carolina (which took the place of the old "Bank of the State of North Carelina," just before the war) would like to know how the affairs of that Institution have been managed and settled.
