

Don't forget the Building & Loan meeting next Monday night.

A Preacher's widow has turned actress in Brooklyn. This should not be a matter for astonishment, since Brooklyn is the Home of Henry Ward Beecher.

We have only space this week to call attention to the Bill authorizing the citizens of this county to vote on the question of subscribing to the Yadkin Railroad. This is a matter in which every citizen of the county is deeply interested and it is to be hoped that each and all will give the matter careful, deliberate consideration.

A fire broke out, on the 23rd instant, at New Orleans, among the steamers lying in the river near the city, which resulted in the loss of three steamers and many lives. Men, women, and children jumped into the water to escape burning, and it was impossible to rescue all. The scene is described as distressing in the extreme.

The funny paper, the Raleigh News, flies into a passion at our remarks about its railroad articles, and defends its present seal by saying that heretofore the matter being in Court it was not proper to speak of it. This is simply ridiculous to those who know all the facts, and we are surprised that so clever a paper as the News would attempt to screen itself behind such a subterfuge. We are not disposed to quarrel with the News, otherwise we would make it take water on this position.

Grant's Secretary Delano having been charged with fraud, public robbery, the President steps forward to say that he has perfect confidence in Delano. This was to have been expected. There has not been a prominent Radical thief or rascal convicted or charged with crime during Grant's administration, that has not been befriended by him. The greater the rascal the closer Grant sticks to him. It is almost conclusive evidence that a fellow is a scoundrel who is endorsed or protected by Grant.

The Nominations for Commissioners, made at the meeting last night, is, we think, as good as could be had made; and the best thing is that they are all in favor of the Railroad, opposed to the hog law, and to well diggers. They are selected from among our best citizens, and represent all classes, are men of energy, and will perform with fidelity whatever they undertake. They are also the nominees of a Convention of our citizens and should be supported by all for this, if for no other reason.

We would be glad to be able to exchange with all the papers that desire it, but then it would be no use for us to do so, for we can not read all the exchanges we now get.

We are under many obligations to the Raleigh Sentinel, Raleigh News, Wilmington Journal, Wilmington Star, Charlotte Observer, and other papers for sending their daily editions in exchange for our weekly. With these and our list of weeklies and dailies in and out of the State, we really have no need to increase our list, even if it cost us nothing to do so.

According to the News, an editor is peculiarly capacious, who will not blow every Ring man who may give him a Railroad ticket, a cigar, or a drink of whiskey,—who will not puff office-seekers and time-server, hangers-on, circus-gang, brainless upstarts, college-made editors, strong minded women and stage-strutting spinsters—who has independence, ideas of his own, and who will not submit to party, ring or clique dictation. An editor, who will not give himself up to these things, who cannot see music in the braying of an ass, nor wisdom in the panegyrics pronounced upon imaginary statesmen, nor consistency in the howling of a dog that was born to bark, is capacious, and to this we plead guilty.

Attorney-General Williams, Grant's legal adviser has resigned. This was done, it is said, in compliance with a direct command of Grant. It may be that Grant, seeing he could no longer carry such a load as Williams had become, resolved to get rid of him. The South will lose nothing in the resignation of Mr. Williams who is in many respects a worse man than Ben Butler. He was the most subservient tool the administration ever had. He brought his office into contempt and the administration to ruin and disgrace. Legal statutes were distorted to suit the whims of a tyrannical military ruler and the South was oppressed and insulted by Williams because he thought it a duty he owed his master and his party to do it. He proved himself a coward, a sneak and a tool. A happy riddance.

Don't forget that the Stockholders in the Yadkin Railroad Company hold their annual meeting here on the 5th of May next.

And even Mathes, of the Winston Sentinel, has a word to say which is not as flattering to the Raleigh papers as it might have been. Mathes, O Mathes, beware! they will think you capacious, if you are not more considerate of the potency, sagacity and disinterestedness of the bold Raleigh press. Mathes, beware! How dare you say that not one in five thousand ever sees the advertisements or laws inserted in the Raleigh papers by the powers that be? Are they not printed at the capital? Are they not edited by all the brains in the State? Are they not the "official journals"—the party organs, so-called? And is not the News engaged in writing up and trying to give dignity to the Legislature? We are astonished at you, Mathes! Every body knows that what the Raleigh papers do not know is not worth knowing. They are all right, if the party is at sea while they last.

They have another sensation in Raleigh. Miss Armstrong is there lecturing on Temperance. She is a nice woman, no doubt. But is it probable that she will add anything to the cause of Temperance? We have had Temperance Reformers of every imaginable shape and style, and yet the evil has grown day by day. The best that has ever been done for the cause yet out side of the church by the enthusiasts, has been to check the evil for a time, like damming a stream, only to see it burst forth with increased fury, sweeping away old landmarks and overflowing and inundating other sections that otherwise might have escaped. We have come to the conclusion that Temperance Reform is about on a par with Lotteries and Life Insurance. Those who engage in it do it for a consideration, and that consideration is generally the prompting of selfishness. The religion of the Savior is the best antidote against intemperance ever yet devised, and all other plans have proved not only worthless in comparison, but absolutely injurious to society and the public at large, in our opinion. There is no reform possible independent of it. The world can well afford to dispense with the mere temperance lecturer.

At present we will only refer to the fact that the present Constitution is the outgrowth of a series of tyrannical acts, of acts in total disregard of popular rights, of acts which excluded the best men of the State from participating in its formation—acts which our people, in the passage of events seem wholly to have forgotten. Otherwise they would not cease to look upon the Constitution of '68 as a monstrosity, and as the abortion of days of infamy and of oppression, that a free people and a people alive to the repate of their State would as soon as possible wipe out of existence.—Raleigh News.

And this is the Constitution the last Legislature virtually endorsed, in the attempt to bind the Democratic-Conservative party by a solemn oath from the delegates of the sovereign people in Convention assembled, to refuse to change certain parts or provisions of this same most oppressive and infamous document. For delegates of the Convention to take the so-called oath prescribed by the Legislature, is simply to endorse Radicalism, to admit what no other body worthy to represent the sovereign people ought to admit and that is, that the Democratic-Conservative party is not true to its promise; that the creature may bind the creator; that one legislative body can bind the action of its successor, however superior the power with which that successor may be invested; that the people are afraid of themselves, and are no more to be treated in Convention; that sovereignty is a delusion which cannot be imparted, delegated to, or invested unrestricted in the immediate representatives of the people; that a Convention is the creature of the Legislature and not of the people. This is what the last Legislature asks us to admit and subscribe to. A party that will so belie its history, its creeds, doctrines and articles of faith, the true and essential principles of our form of government, as to obey this request, through the fear of Radicalism, should be spurned and spewed out by every true man in the land.

A Convention has been called, absolutely, and no power, State or Federal, can lawfully prevent its assembling. Let the people then be sure to send delegates who have the nerve to give them a visus and acceptable old fashion North Carolina Constitution, regardless of so-called restrictions. The people are not called upon to pass judgment on the bill calling the Convention, and the mere election of delegates does not validate the so-called restrictions as in the case of 1835. So that the so-called restrictions are ipso facto null and void, there being no power authorizing one legislative body to restrict its successor, much less the power of a Legislature to restrict a Convention. The thing is too absurd for argument.

A FORTUNE FOR A HORSE.—J. R. Keene of California has sold to C. W. Kellogg, the San Francisco millionaire, the trotting stallion Sam Purdy for $50,000. This is the highest figure ever paid for a trotting stallion.

From the Springfield Republican. Effect of Mr. Beecher's Evidence. Mr. Beecher left the witness stand yesterday, his testimony having occupied a little over ten days. As we predicted, he has borne himself proudly, and made a most gallant fight for life. He has certainly done as well as could be expected—better than could have been expected of any other man than Henry Ward Beecher, environed with such a terrible cordon of fatal evidence. He has denied impressively, and exclaimed with all the plausibility that his utmost eloquence could command.

Yet, we think it is the verdict of the great majority of the impartial observers, and will be the verdict of history, that Mr. Beecher has failed in the effort to reconcile himself with himself. As the Republican said, when he took the stand, he has been the chief architect of the case against himself, and he has not been able to destroy his own work. Accepting his testimony as against all the other witnesses for the prosecution, he has failed to break down the two worst witnesses against him—Henry Ward Beecher and Elizabeth R. Tilton—and the fatal evidence of their acknowledged acts and words. Mr. Beecher's pen has proved itself mightier than his tongue. Plausible as some of his explanations appear, his present theory of his conduct and letters during the past four years does not, as a whole, shake the conviction of his guilt, which that conduct and those letters originally made upon the public mind.

There is probably considerable evidence of one sort and another yet to come, but it is not likely to greatly affect the verdict either of jury or public. As to the former, it still seems, as all along, most probable that there will be a disagreement; as to the latter, while there will always be two parties, the great body of intelligent people are settling down, unwillingly and by pure force of his own evidence, into a conviction of Mr. Beecher's guilt.

A Brave Speech.

There was several great speeches made at Lexington and Concord and we must give Emerson and Curtis full credit for having done well their part, so far as beauty of diction, elegance of expression and loftiness of flight, if not of thought, go, if we cannot entirely commend the subject matter or sympathize with all the sentiments or opinions expressed in their finished orations. But the speech that pleased us most was a modest little effort by a modest but brave little man from Richmond, whom we are proud to number among our best citizens. We refer, of course, to General Bartlett, a gentleman who has been for some years a resident here, but who has made so little noise that we doubt if he would be known to half a hundred of our people were they to meet him on the street. He was general officer in the Federal army, which he entered as a private from Yale College at the age of 18 years, we believe, and rose from there to generalship, not through favoritism, but by gallant deeds. He lost a leg at the Crater, and he highly was honored at the North that his college valedictorian had sent to the field. When such a man as General Bartlett speaks for the South, at such a time, and before such an audience, his words must find willing hearers and sink deep into the hearts to whom they were addressed. We give his speech in full this morning, as we find it in the New York Times, and in the name of the maligned section, thank him for his noble words in our defense. We trust his address may be widely circulated both North and South, as it cannot fail of being productive of the happiest effect.—Richmond Enquirer.

Last Saturday at the dead hours of midnight our town was entered by 10 or 12 well armed and disguised men. They entered Ashe county jail. (The jailer was not at home) and demanded the key to call No. 1. They were informed that they could not get the key, whereupon pistols were drawn and demand repeated, but the key was not handed over. They then searched the room and found the key, and then went up to the second floor and opened the cell door. A young man named Lewis, who was in jail for a few days, was the first to be taken out. The door was then called, fully looked and the key left in the entry. The party then left the house and quietly wended their way from town. These are the facts as we have them from the jailer's wife. We don't know what they did with Lewis, but the supposition is that he was either released by friends or by parties who feared he would turn State's evidence and get them in trouble.—Jefferson Mountain Messenger.

A ROYAL ORGAN.

The stomach has been well named a "royal organ," since it is every day the center of the system, every gland, tissue and nerve sympathizing with it as the servants of a prince sympathize with their master. Each one of them is fed and sustained by it—even the brain itself, the centre of sensation, is absolutely dependent upon it for sustenance. Consequently, when the stomach fails to perform its all-important office, the subordinate organs also fail in their duty. The reason why Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have such a wondrously beneficial effect upon the general health, and are such a reliable preventive of disease, is that they speedily overcome weakness or disorders of the stomach, and thus insure complete nourishment of the entire system and a healthful performance of its various functions. Unlike those stimulants whose alcoholic principle is unmodified by judicious medication, the spirituous basis of these Bitters, which is of the purest description, holds in solution healthful alternatives and invigorants to which a foremost rank has been assigned in materia medica. But it is not alone the fact that these sovereign botanical elements enter into the composition of the Bitters that constitutes them such a beneficial tonic and corrective, but also that they are so happily combined that the full effect of each is exerted upon the disordered or debilitated system. The digestive and secretory organs are the first to experience their beneficial operation, which extends, by sympathy, to the brain, the nerves and the circulation. The influence thus exerted is fruitful of those great salutary results which have built up the reputation of this truly national medicine.
