In a message to the House of Representatives, President Grant defends le sending of troops to Virginia, Florida, and Louisiana as being in the performance of his duty nuder the Constitution and laws, and that if he had more troops he would have stationed them in Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi, also, to preven frands in the election. Why not to Illinois, Ohio, New York, Penneylvania and all the States as well. Are there no election frauds except in the Southern States!

It is worthy of remark that the troops which were sent South never witnessed mere quiet and peaceable elections in al their lives before. Why then so much trouble about the States they were sent to protect.

It will soon be accessible by Railroad, which will be an add tional advantage of great value.

The Bill for counting the Electoral vote presented to both Houses of Congress last week, meets with general approval, not only in Congress but also throughout the country, and it is said it therefore will certainly pass both Houses, and President Grant is reported as saying he will sign it.
