There is another noted point at which we have a wall, about nine miles northwest of this place, on lands formerly owned by a man named Robley. It was here, many years ago, that a considerable excavation was made. The wall stood so erect and the crystals of which it was composed were of such remarkable uniformity in size and shape (rhomboidal), and were embedded in a substance so closely resembling cement that many intelligent people believed it was the work of human hands, and some are still of that opinion. But the rock is of the same character, and may be only a continuation of the vein seen on the Ellis farm. The excavation We would hardly do justice to them withalluded to is said to have been carried out giving the names of some of the gendown 20 feet; but it was fruitless of scientific results, for it still left the subject shrouded in doubt as to the character of the wall. Sam. Colly, the man that we reported as having driven his step-son through our streets came in and requested us to correct the statement. He said that he did not drive the young man through the street lut that he led him. This was the only point he wanted to have righted. We are sorry it is all he could say in his defense. Upon inquiry we found that the young man offered no resistance to Mr. Colly and that there was no need of tying him at all. We asked Colly why he tied the young man when he offered no resistance and said he would go home with him 1. To which Colly replied : "Well, just because"-which, as everybody knows, is an undebateable reason. He was drunk.
