

LOCAL.

Mr. Cronin of the Raleigh Observer paid us a visit last Tuesday.

Dr. J. F. Griffith and bride have returned and were serenaded last Tuesday night by the Silver Cornet Band.

The mails by the eastern train are out of joint. We received no mail on Tuesday—and none on Wednesday.

A. J. Mock and Geo. Klutz are opening a stock of goods in the store formerly occupied by J. M. Knox & Co.

The Rev. Wm. Davis, occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian church last Sunday.

And still this marrying business is a mystery—lots of guessing, and vain speculations going on.

The Rats are at work in Richmond again—in the Whip office. Rats are non-union men—working for smaller wages than the members of the Printers Union.

That Hat—There was a hat exchange at the Court-House Tuesday evening. Walton & Ross' present to the Senior editor is gracing somebody else's head. Any member of the Bar or other person having it, will confer a favor, &c.

We notice an improvement in the Salisbury Watchman. It has not told a lie since New Years—Concord Sun.

Thanks—would like to return the compliment, but for conscientious reasons can't do so.

The Staunton River Bridge—now so famous—is in good condition again and the trains running regularly. They ought to either tunnel that river or swing a suspension bridge over it—the thing is getting stale.

Thanks to Bro. Tomlinson for an invitation to attend an oyster supper, complimentary to the members, at the opening of the Piedmont Reading Room. Would have been on hand but our pass was dated to 31st of Dec. 77. When we get a new one, we'll come to see you—when?

Gen. Albert Brown, colored, married Miss Malinda Hackett, on the 17th inst. We mention this event because the General is a good darkey and made himself very useful and ornamental while making a tour through Western Carolina with the famous "Pie-eaters." Some of them have, like the General, fallen by the way side, and there yet remains several to fall.

The following are a list of Lawyers attending the special Term of Rowan Superior Court: W. J. Montgomery, Concord; Jno. E. Brown, Charlotte; J. Harvey Wilson, Charlotte; Judge Ship, Charlotte; F. C. Robbins, Lexington, Gen. R. Barringer, Charlotte; Jas. A. Graham, Graham; W. H. Bailey, Esq. Charlotte; J. M. Clement, Mocksville.

At a meeting of the Salisbury Hook & Ladder Company, No. 1, Thursday evening Jan. 17th, the thanks of the Company were respectfully tendered to Prof. W. H. Neave, the Salisbury Silver Cornet Band, Miss Minnie Barber and Mr. James A. Wren, for the assistance rendered them on that occasion.

W. P. HALYBURTON, Sec. Mr. Jno. W. Harris, of Tenn., is now here with twenty-five head of fine young mules, at Brown & Verble's Livery and Sale Stable.

Now is the time to get a long eared kicking machine cheap—of course these animals don't know how to kick now, but Frank Brown can get them up to the proper point of perfection in a short time—go see 'em.

Rogers is a member of the Hook & Ladder Co. Last Thursday he was behind—the company had moved over several squares when Rogers might have been seen making his way down main street, his red shirt and striped hat making him conspicuous, muttering "if that company expects me to muster 'round this ere town in all this mud with them, they had better wait, or 'I'll take the pavement sure," or words to that effect.

Mr. EDITOR—A few evenings back a little boy who knew but little about the power of letters, was trying to spell words. His mother told him to spell "papa." The little fellow was a great admirer of his father's excellencies, and without meaning any insinuation, innocently spelled "a-s, papa."

P. S.—That child's papa brought this item to our office—good boy.—Korrek first time—go head.

We have an unsealed, one cent letter from the bashful editor of the Concord Sun, asking us to accompany him to the Paris Exhibition. He would like to have company from near home. He expects his presence at the Exhibition to attract a great deal of attention and remark among those twisted tongues. We are not prepared to answer just at present Bro. Harris, but will reply by postal or otherwise shortly.

Pictures.—Mr. E. W. Ellis has been here since last Wednesday, selling all kinds of pictures by auction. His sales began Friday; night and continued till all were sold. He has succeeded in stocking the place with Chromes, Engravings and Photo Statuary. His sales were low enough considering the prices we have been used to paying—in fact frames like those he sold could not be bought in this section for anything like as little money as his framed pictures sold for. We think Mr. Ellis has done the "square" thing here and we recommend him to the people of Greensboro, to which place he goes from this city.

Church Robbed.—Thyatira church in this county was robbed last week of 46 yards of carpeting, pitcher and goblet, baptismal bowl, and fine Damask curtain, from rear of the pulpit. The velvet was also cut from the cushion on which the Bible lay.

The robbers, for there seems to have been several of them, entered at the window in rear of the pulpit. Suspicion rests on no one as yet. This is the second time this church has been sacked. If ever the depraved wretches should fall into the hands of the law, they should be dealt with to the fullest extent.

Hook & Ladder Company No. 1. This volunteer company was out last Thursday evening, on dress parade. The procession was headed by the Silver Cornet Band of this city. This is the first time the company has appeared in public and we must say for them that they made a very respectable show. The truck was beautifully decorated with wreaths and garlands, flags and streamers, monograms, mottoes, &c. On top, the pretty little Minnie Barber, was placed on a throne draped in United States flags, to represent the goddess of Liberty. In her right hand she carried a staff surmounted with the Liberty Cap, on her left arm a shield, and on her head a helmet of gold, her feet resting on a large gilded eagle. The company paraded the principal streets of the city. Mr. Jas. Wren, we learn, did the decorating, and deserves much praise for his excellent taste and judgment in such matters.

THE BERGER FAMILY TROUPE.

After quite a dearth in the way of public entertainments, our citizens are to be treated on this (Thursday) evening, to an elegant performance by the popular and celebrated Berger Family. The company comprises a lady orchestra, a ladies, silver cornet band, and the famous Swiss Bell Rings, and nearly all the performers excel as soloists upon one or more different instruments. Principal among these latter is Miss Anna Teresa Berger the famous lady cornet player, and perhaps the finest artist on this instrument now before the American public. The Delanaas, Jeppe and Fannie, comedians and character sketch artists; the Coleman sisters, versatile instrumental performers, and Miss Etta Morgan Saxophone Soloist, are some of the principal features of the entertainment. The performances of this troupe are always of a high order of merit, are chaste and elegant in character and are entirely devoid of all objectionable features. A full house will doubtless greet them. Tickets are on sale at Klutz Drug Store.

THE TOBACCO TAX.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Mr. Seidler appeared before the sub-Committee of Ways and means to-day in the interest of Lorillard & Co., of New York, protesting against the proposed reduction of the tax on tobacco, claiming whereas he had orders for 1,200,000 pounds in November; in December, after the agitation set in, he had only 300,000 pounds; that his establishment worked 2,500 men; that it had the capacity of 60,000 pounds per day, and that his orders would average 50,000; that he was surprised that the Virginia manufacturers agitated this subject; that the price of leaf tobacco depended upon the supply and demand; that the consumption was entirely irrespective of price. That there were only eight millions of consumers, consuming an average of fifteen pounds; that the price had nothing to do with the number of consumers, or the amount consumed; that the tax of 24 cents was low as compared with England, France, Germany, Spain and Austria. The tax in England was three shillings on manufactured tobacco; that if the tax was reduced the tariffs would have to be increased and an income tax would have to be imposed; that if the tax was reduced to 12 cents, the revenue from it would be reduced to one-half, consequently the cost of collection, which was now 4 per cent, would be 8 per cent. Business was now in a very unprofitable condition, but he attributed it to other causes than the tax; that one of the reasons why it was so unprofitable to Virginia manufacturers was because it was shipped to commission merchants, and was therefore sold with heavy charges against them. Another reason was, that they did not have the advantage of the chemical processes which were had in New York, and that they were making inferior goods for the purpose of underselling. That these were the reasons why Virginia manufacturers were so depressed, and not because of the tax. The fine cut men of the West and the North West came in for their share of these criticisms. Kentucky was not alluded to. He further said that if the tax was reduced now it would have to be restored very soon.

He was further questioned by some gentlemen who were present, that if the present tax was building up such giant establishments as he claimed, if it would not be better to double the present rate? He said that the smaller and poorer manufacturers were more liable to defraud the government than were the larger ones—because from the latter larger bonds were required and more people were watching them, the argument being that it would be beneficial to the government to concentrate the manufacture in the larger establishments. He admitted that tobacco was very low now. Lugs in the New York and Western markets being 2 or 2 1/2 cents, in Virginia 3 cents.

In order to save their Western trade Lorillard & Co., gave guarantees to their customers, and in the event of a reduction of tax it would involve them in a loss of over $300,000. In regard to the rebate on tax Mr. Seidler argued that the stock on hand would be nearly one-half of the year's supply. Some 60,000,000 pounds at 12 cents would cause a loss to the Government of $7,200,000.

He said that Mr. Kimball, Chief of the Tobacco Bureau in this city had stated to him that it would open a vast area for perjury and fraud.

Col. Burwell was present and prepared to present an argument in behalf of the Virginia manufacturers, but owing to the prolonged session, he was requested to furnish his views in writing, which he will do early next week.

GOV. TILDEN'S CASE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The often adjourned case of Gov. Tilden's alleged unpaid income tax came up before Judge Blatchford in the U. S. District Court today. On the argument on demurrer to the complaint Mr. Aaron J. Vanderpool appeared for Gov. Tilden and District Attorney Wood for the United States. There are nine counts in the complaint, to all of which demurrer is made on technical ground, the merits of the case not being gone into. It was decided to take up each count separately. The first count charges $3,000 back tax for the fiscal years of 1861 and 1862. Mr. Vanderpool claimed that the laws passed about that time were recognized as necessary war measures and annulled the law requiring the payment of income tax in that year. Judge Blatchford sustained the demurrer, giving Gov. Tilden the first victory.

Extract from "POTPOURRI PAPERS."

BY W. H. NEAVE. Fellow writers from T. N., if any position I take in these "Pots" appears to you untenable, for my own or others' sakes, shell me out of it. Any stricture I may make on the utterances of others, if shown to be wrong, I will renounce or modify.

"As I do to others, I expect others to do unto me," correct me as I am wrong. I am guided, as far as a mere human being can know himself, by honest impersonal motives; but he who would "shoot folly as it flies," and boldly hunt down abuse and expose wrong-doing, must not expect, nor wish every one to be kindly disposed toward him. If he does, he is himself a fool, and will be woefully disappointed. Speaking of the Wheeler and Wilson band, Bridgeport, Conn., "Piano" says:

"One way of accounting for this falling off in the public estimation, is the fact that their leader is a Jew. There is a prejudice against that race in the public mind, which cannot be easily overcome." This wholesale denunciation of a great people mortifies me, the more especially since he assumes to speak for me as well as himself, I being a unit in the aggregate "public mind." The antagonisms between peoples and races exists only among the lower classes, if we leave out austere, rancorous sectarian bigotries; and the lower order of Jews will, certainly, compare very favorably with the same class of Irish, German, English, Italian or "American roughs." Indeed, the Jews have none so low as such. Who ever heard of a Jew who could live only by looting, stealing, or brazen labor; or who kept a low dogery or den of prostitution? The great men of any people are those whose transcendent abilities give tone, dignity and character to their nation, and the Jews show, at least, a full proportion of these as compared with any people. The republic of letters (fine intellects highly cultured) is cosmopolitan—caring nothing for geographical or other distinctive lines. I have had musical business relations with those of all nationalities, and have had my confidence betrayed in cases among all but the Jewish. So has my wife as a piano teacher. Again, generally speaking, an inferior musician stands no chance with a Jewish musical leader or director, merely because he is a Jew. The same cannot be said of any other nationality, save, perhaps, American. Jews are seldom or never inferior in what they live by; and he who has a Jewish competitor in music must needs be competent, energetic and polite, and should be distanced in the race, the despicable dodg of attempting to revive that dead, rotten shame of a past barbarism,

"prejudice of the public mind" will rebound to his own discomfort. Instead of the mythical "Shylock" let him rather cry "Maudslow," "Meyerbeer," "Halévy," "Lasser," "Strauss," "Offenbach," &c., &c.,!! Is there any "prejudice in the public mind" against these men and their prolific and grand compositions? I think not. Jewish shades of St. Peter, and the Virgin Mary, of David, Solomon, et al. Shall men, Americans, of culture and self-respect, deride and traduce the great people from whom we get all our religious ideas, and the early history of the world, simply because we and they honestly differ about the real Messiah? Music, in itself, is religion, but the spirit of sectarianism is the very antipodes of true piety. In the days of the crusades, of Peter the hermit, and "licentiousness most foul," to speak of Jews as "Judas Iscariots and ostentatists," was in order, but not in these liberal, enlightened times, especially in this great republic. But, anyway, Judas Iscariot was a good man as compared with the mass of his maligners; yet, even if he was as bad as our official rascals of today, he was only one in twelve. Would that we had as small a proportion in any vocation now. But let us see in what his atrociousness consisted: he had only one besetting sin, an inordinate love of money; ("let him without this sin among you cast the first stone at him.") The reward of thirty pieces of silver he thought he could make with impunity by his Master, feeling satisfied that if delivered into their hands, his enemies could not hold him; but when he saw that Christ was "sure enough" in the toils, and could not extricate himself, Judas, wild with grief, ran and besought his release and offered the money back; failing in this he went and hanged himself! Nobody told him to do so; he was not even found out, but his sin was more than he could bear, (good man.) I wish we had as much integrity and effectual contrition for malfeasance in office among our highest public men of to-day. Compared with them, Judas was a gentleman, a saint. If our many naughty B's and many others would even respect "public opinion" enough to commit "Hari Kari" after detection by law, even we could at least pity rather than execrate the wretches. Judas' riot society of his presence, thus presenting a laudable example and obvious evidence of his innate abhorrence of crime and spirit of treachery. That small, shallow, and narrow-minded portion of public opinion which clings to the prejudices and traditions of the dark ages, wicked with the pure "cussidness" of bigotry, which the march of intellect and events of the past century has not "overcome" is hopelessly ignorant and vitiated, and is unworthy of regard, and I hope "Piano" is himself not of it.

TURKEY PRESENTATION.—The town authorities of Hickory presented Mr. Charles Gordon, Engineer on the W. N. C. R. R., with a fine turkey Christmas morning. This was done in recognition of his promptness to perform his duty in ringing the train bell on all occasions while passing through the corporate limits of the town. Mr. Gordon is a faithful and careful engineer and as such receives the praise of all our citizens.—Piedmont Press.
