To Make Children Good Natured.

Children must be well slept, well aired, well fed, and well bathed. By a thorough understanding and practice of these four simple rules, much of the physical, mental, and moral suffering in life would be avoided by parent as well as child. If a healthy child (and a delicate one propor- is published, and we propose to sell it as cheaptionately) is regularly put to bed about dark, in a quiet, well ventilated, or even cold room, after a supper of plain food, it will naturally awake at daybreak, good natured, with a keen appetite for a wholesome breakfast. Nutritious, plain food, at regular hours, with no candy or stimuants, and free bathing, help the system to ward off many prevalent children's ailments, and to bear with much less danger the few that must necessarily come to the majority of little ones. The child that is just given a little confectionary or proportion to the number sent. For particuany suitable food, and then rocked to sleep, should cause no surprise at waking peevish and feverish. It is simply the result of imaginary affection and want of knowledge on the part of the one in charge. It will certainly pay in the end to search diligently the cause when a little child is proverbially cross.
