No one objects to the principle, but the application of it is where the trouble comes in ; and on this point there is any amount of difference of opinion. Some say abolish the office of State geologist, but don't reduce the salaries of Judges, lest you impair the dignity and honor of the Bench. Others insist that you should not abolish the State Geologist because you cannot see the great utility of that office; for although the benefits of this branch of the State government are not obvious to the people at large, it is nevertheless true have here in Charleston a factory that is vastly outweigh the cost; for it is chiefly through the information given by this office that northern capital has sought investment in the mineral properties of the a prosperity as great as that which fol-Geologist to go on with his work. A WILKES COUNTY TRAGEDY.

One Man Killed and Two Wounded-A Fight Among Engitives. Charlotte Observer.

A gentleman from one of the western counties brings the particulars of a bloody tragedy which was enacted in Wilkes county some days ago, which resulted in the death of one man and the serious and perhaps fatal wounding of two others.

Alf. Edwandson, Lige Church and Rile Tedder are three famous characters in that county, noted for their daring and reckless deeds. All of them have been accused of crimes of different kinds, two of them have been convicted in the courts and all are fugitives from justice. Various attempts have been made to capture them at different times, but the nature of the country has enabled them to elude the vigilance of officers. Each, too, has his friends and connections in the neighborhood who, when the occasion required, were not unwilling to assist them in escaping. They were frequently together, though there is no evidence of any organ ization for theft, robbery or other crimes. They live about six or eight miles west of Wilkesboro and it was in this neighborhood that the tragedy occurred. A day or two before its culmination, a man named Hayes informed Church and Tedder that Edmundson had stolen a pistol from a man who was working for him, and asked them to get the weapon from Edmundson. They accordingly went to the house of a man named Foster, where it was reported that Edmundson was stopping, and asked if he was there. The Windom Windiness Shown Up.

A connection of the colored population in one locality as proposed would be a disadvantage to them, because it would deprive them of the civilizing effect of contact with the superior race. To scatter them thinly over the North and West would be almost as bad, because they are admitted only to servile employment in a preponderating white community. In their present locations they have the advantage of white example, and also the advantage of entering all pursuits and professions for which they can qualify themselves. A negro mechanic or doctor or lawyer has no chance in the North, since white people will not employ him and the people of his own color are not numerous enough to give him a subsistence. But in the South he can find patrons in his own race, and during this generation and the next his best opportunities for rising will be in a community where white civilization supplies him with models and the patronage of his own race is sufficient to furnish him employment in the higher departments of activity .- New York Herald.

The Way The Lie Was Nailed.

A notable incident occured during the ession of the Northern Settlers' Convention, last week, at Charlotte, North Carolinn. Just before the meeting of the Convention, the Hartford (Connecticut) Post published an editorial article making various attacks on the Southern people, and asserting, among other slanders, that no Northern man, uuless he was a doughface, was treated with consideration and hospitality in the South. The Charlotte Observer says: "This article was read before the body, and from all parts of the house there went up expressions of indignation. "Lie!" "Falsehood!" "Not a word of it true !" and similar expressions themselves freely, on the floor and privately, concerning this infamous publication, and among all of them it found not one defender." - Wilmington Star.
