

Carolina Watchman.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1879.

The election in Kentucky puts up a small Democratic loss in the Legislature, but still leaves them about 100 majority in joint ballot.

The Fever contingents at Memphis, but probably from the lack of material to work on, it is not very alarming. There were eleven new cases on the 6th, and only one death. The city is very quiet.

W. W. Rollins, president of the western division of the Western N. C. Railroad, still refuses to comply with the Act of the late General Assembly ordering him to turn over its assets to the directors of the eastern division, on the ground that the private stockholders have not been consulted.

The partnership heretofore existing between John B. Hissey and Geo. C. Jordan, as proprietors and editors of the Raleigh News, has been dissolved. Mr. Jordan has become sole proprietor and editor, and Mr. Hissey retires.

The Charlotte Observer, weekly, is the largest paper in the State, and made up from the Daily, comprises a very full report of the news. It and the Goldsboro' Messenger would do credit to any State in the Union.

Mr. Helms, a wagoner from Stanly, while camping in a back lot in Charlotte, was robbed of $18, all the money he had. Thief entered his wagon while he was in another part of the yard talking to an acquaintance just arrived from Stanly.

Our "Republican" neighbor, of Winston, publishes a liberal extract from Sherman's speech at Portland, Me., which is characterized as the "ablest speech of his life." Sherman, we take it, is not alone from this circumstance, (in itself of small significance), is the favorite of the Republicans of North Carolina, for the next Presidency. Really, it does not matter much who is the Republican candidate for that important office. The next contest will turn on more important questions than those of a personal nature.

WHAT IS HIS HISTORY.—Under the caption of "A Bulldozing Butcher in Mississippi," credited to the "Mississippi Vicksburg Herald," Democrat," as presented in an Iowa republican paper, an ugly case in the murdering of a colored man named Richards, is made out as occurring in Washington County, Miss. There are nearly always two sides to the cases on which northern republican papers rely for political capital, and we suppose two to this. Richards, according to the account before us, was murdered because he was collecting evidence against a party who murdered his brother two years ago. Cause enough for the murderer of his brother, if afraid of the law, as no doubt he was; but why attempt to give political significance to a subject of a purely personal character.

CHARMED BY A SNAKE.—Nearly the same old story, with a few slight changes of particulars, of a girl charmed by a snake, is going the rounds of the press again. She went out at a regular hour each day and was met by the snake, between which and herself there seemed to be a very strong sympathy. She grew pale and thin from day to day. Her father watches her movements and discovers that his daughter is under the influence of the reptile. Next day she slips again to his hiding place with his gun, and abouts the snake. The daughter is startled of course, but looking round sees her father, and then walks away to the house, and has been ever since steadily recovering her health and spirits. The story in former years represented the girl as going into convulsions when the snake was shot—falling to the ground and writhing in awful pain, very like the squirming of the snake itself, and at last dying at the same moment that the snake died. Don't know which is right, if there is any truth in either story.

The Board of Education in Virginia has passed a resolution that is calculated to act as an embargo on marriage. All female teachers in the public schools are ineligible to the position they hold if they marry. It strikes us that this is very queer. It is unjust discrimination. Male teachers may marry, but females never. Hardly ever. The State takes this germ and sensible view.

"Women too often have to support their husbands as well as themselves, and increase instead of lessening their burdens by marriage. Time enough for them to be discharged when, or if, they neglect their duties. It is taken for granted that such neglect will produce discharge, and the wisest man or the biggest fool would find it impossible to show cause why, nullify a discharge, or be discharged for any cause, marriage or what not.

Richmond publishes weekly an interesting mortality report, classifying the deaths, and giving the per centage of whites and colored. For instance, the last report of Dr. Cabell, President of the Board of Health, says:

Rate.—Population of city estimated at 80,000—white, 46,000; colored, 34,000. Rate of mortality of whole population was 15.00 per 1000 per annum. Rate of mortality of white population was 13.56 per 1000 per annum. Rate of mortality of colored population was 18.35 per 1000 per annum.

Mildness conquers—and hence it is that the gentle yet positive influence of Dr. Bull's Balm overcomes so quickly the effects of babyhood.

The trade in Sunnec Leaves is considerable in some portions of this State. Why do not some of our enterprising merchants take hold of it. It will bring in many a dollar to our country friends. We give the following method of gathering and drying:

The leaves only are wanted, but to facilitate the gathering of it, the small stems on which the leaves grow can be stripped from the stalk, as in pulling blades. It must be free from sticks, sand and berries. Dry it in the shade. If exposed to the sun, dew and rain, it will turn yellow and become worthless. Spread it on a floor, and turn it morning and evening until perfectly dry. Do not pack it in bags or pile it in bulk until it is thoroughly dry. Be careful it does not heat. When Sunnec is properly cured it is of a bright green color.—Winston Sentinel.

Salem and Winston led off in the dried fruit business and made money by it, and we hope they will lead off in the Sunnec industry.

Dried blackberries go at 4 cts. in Winston.

The county of Randolph is so generally opposed to a county debt that the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad will not be run by the factories in that county, but take the nearest route to Greensboro.

Statesville Air-Line Railroad.

Dr. J. J. Mott, president of this road, and Hon. W. M. Robbins, who attended a series of meetings on the contemplated line as far as Mt. Airy, returned last Monday, and report most favorably of the interest the people are taking in the enterprise by making year liberal applications for stock, which will be largely increased hereafter and leaving no doubt that the road will be built in the near future. North Iredell, Yadkin and Surry, to whose citizens this road will be of the largest importance, are manifesting a deep interest in the enterprise, and doubtless will vote liberal subscriptions, including $500,000 by Iredell, which was the sum voted to the Atlantic, Tennessee & Ohio Road, and which citizens of South Iredell will sanction in justice to their neighbors in the northern portion of the county.

Two hundred convicts are to be assigned whenever the company is ready to begin grading. Five thousand dollars will be sufficient at the start to supply mules, carts, wheelbarrows, &c., and the number afterwards increased. Stock subscriptions can be paid in any of these supplies, labor, provisions, &c., which the people will not feel, receiving stock certificates for the same, while they will secure the best of railroad facilities on a great through line between the North and South—calculated to enhance their property many fold in value. When it is considered, never was there a time when a railroad could be so cheaply built, and the great advantage this road would be to the inland and isolated, yet fertile section, through which it would pass, it would seem that every man within fifteen or twenty miles, would be eager to aid in building it, for the great benefit it will certainly confer.—Statesville American.

SAD DOWNING OF TWO SISTERS.—A dispatch to the New York Herald says: "A most distressing drowning accident occurred at Brockville, Ont., about half past eleven o'clock Wednesday morning, resulting in the death of Emily and Edith, aged 18 and 19 years, daughters of Mrs. Hugh of that place. The young ladies were visiting their father's residence, when the water is very shallow till some distance out, when it suddenly deepens. The bathers had waded out some distance, and not being aware of the water deepening, had taken another step, when they both suddenly sank. Two young men who were some distance from the shore immediately hastened to their rescue, but before they could reach them they had disappeared beneath the water. One of the young men immediately plunged in and brought Edith up, but was unable to raise Emily alone, when both of them went down and succeeded in bringing her up. Three doctors were immediately summoned, but before they could reach them she had expired. Her father is very much distressed, and without a doubt, Mrs. Hugh is at present on a visit to Hamilton. The eldest girl was very beautiful, and had just finished her education."

"He died in jail." What was there in a lot like his to drive a reasonable being to a course which has found its logical and perhaps its happiest end in a lonely death upon filthy straw, with the head resting on a stained and verminous pillow? Men lose one by one all the cherished things that make life dear. The only hope left them is the eternal tranquility of the narrow anxious for no sad memories, nor anxious foreboding, nor vain regrets can enter. We cannot wonder if the desolate and friendless drink, for is it not a divine preception: "Give wine to him that is ready to perish that he may remember 'his misery no more.'"

But this case is far otherwise when a man, surrounded by comforts and friends and friendship, as Cleo tells us, is the richest furniture of life—throws them all away for the momentary delirium of a drink, involving anguish of mind and body which not even the pen of Dickens ever adequately described. A good business is first ruined by the destroying stultification then the wife, so dear when first she forgot for a husband's love "her own people and her father's home," is neglected or abused until she leaves a home to her and a man who is no man. The wishful faces of the little children plead with the once loving father in vain. He can not see things as they are. He does not, cannot feel, for alcohol has his grip upon his heart and brain. Let the children follow the wife; he will think matters over, he argues over a quiet battle by himself. All will come right in time. He even tries to pray, but it is the prayer of St. Augustine in his sinful youth: "Convert me, Lord; convert me, Lord; but not to-day." No; any day but this; to-morrow or next day when my nerves are stronger and my head is clearer, says the drunkard, but not to-day.

The picture will be recognized as a true one by many of our readers. Business, home and friends lost. Yet still he drinks. It is only when half drunk that life loses for him its gloomy outlook and wears the hopeful colors of a renovated youth. Step by step, little by little he goes down. From comfort and position to rags and disgrace. Finally he dies a forsaken outcast. His lamentable end is a lesson for profound meditation this holy sabbath day.—Raleigh News.

Southern Home: The Supreme Court of this State has just decided that it is not larceny to steal a dog—because a dog is not property. Better keep your dog at home, and if a vagabond steals him you can be revenged on him for trespass. Query: If a dog is not property, is it constitutional to tax him?

Japan Affairs and General Grant.

YOKOHAMA, July 17.—The financial condition of Japan is shown by the Budget to be in a thoroughly healthy condition although the necessity for increased revenue in future years is frankly avowed.

There is considerable excitement in consequence of the British Minister's interference with the Japanese quarantine regulations. The cholera prevails in the south of the Empire, and a strict quarantine has been ordered for Yokohama. The American Minister ordered the Amey to comply with the regulations. The British Minister asserts his right to treat the quarantine. The German Minister represents the Japanese as indifferent except the Russian Minister, who sides with the United States Minister.

The reception to ex-President Grant in Tokio is unprecedented in Japanese history. In addition to the demonstrations by the government, the citizens have given him lavish entertainments on a sumptuous scale. Every day and night there were fresh novelties for his diversion. General Grant had an audience with the Emperor on July 4th. His Majesty, alluding happily to the coincidence of the date, said the sole obstacle to harmony was caused by the demeror of the English officials, who persistently kept aloof from General Grant and declined to give salutes or recognition. General Grant, after visiting various points, will go for Yezo. He will start for America the last week in August.

An account of a remarkable incident comes from Aurora, Ind. A few days ago as a trio of young men, was fishing for bass in Hogan Creek, near Aurora, they were disturbed by a splash in the water, as if some animal jumping into the stream. Looking in the direction they saw a large black dog, which had evidently come down from among the roaming lot of porkers which make life a burden in and around the town, swimming to the centre of the pool, which was about 100 feet wide and eight feet deep. At about the centre the animal disappeared, remaining under the water for a considerable time and on re-appearing was seen to have in his mouth a live bass about eight inches long, with which he swam ashore and proceeded to eat with the avidity and relish peculiar to his species. After having swallowed the last vestige, with a grunt the animal again betook himself to the water, and again dived to the bottom. Coming up with a snort, he again made for the shore with another fish, which he dispatched as quickly as before. This was repeated a third time, and on the fourth trip the animal secured a small turtle, which also carried ashore, and after some difficulty managed to dispatch, breaking the shell with his strong teeth, after which it ambled off, satiated with its fishing experience of the day.

A Notable Mock Trial.

A notable mock trial took place at Rehoboth Beach the other evening. Heulthaus and Francis Jordan, Jr., of Philadelphia, were accused of pilfering champagne and eggs during the day's picnic. Their judges were Chief Justice Comery, of the Supreme Court of Delaware, and ex-Attorney General and Secretary of State of Pennsylvania Hughes. Parham, son-in-law of Mr. Hughes, and who defeated many of the Mollie Maguire's, appeared for the defense, while Charles Gibbons, Jr., of Philadelphia, owner of the yacht Clara, and a well-known cricketer, appeared for the State. The jury was a mixed one and comprised Mrs. Jordan, Mr. Gibbons, daughter of Judge Ludlow, Edward Norris and Henry Allen. The daughter of Senator Bayard and the veteran Gen. Heintzelman, of seven days' fight fame, were absent while the jury was being impaneled, or they would have served. The jury was out but a few moments, when a verdict of guilty was brought in, and Judge Hughes pronounced the sentence of the court, viz: That the prisoner pay a fine of five dollars and be imprisoned in the box of cigars and stand committed till the fines were paid.

Just hear Matthes Talk On Future Possibilities.

SCARCELY—HARDLY EVER.—A correspondent, writing for a Republican paper of this State closes his epistle as follows: "I expect to live a Republican, die one and go to heaven in the same belief, there to meet Thomas Settle and Ulysses S. Grant."

Some people evidently have strange ideas of heaven, as the kind of people admitted. The trio suggested in the above paragraph would certainly appear as stinking monuments of loneliness in that clime, for the adage probably holds good even there that only "birds of a feather flock together." They would sadly miss the genial company of such men as Oakes, Walker, Belknap, J. Madison Wells, Elias Shipherd, Francis M. Johnson and Littlefield, and would doubtless feel as lonely as Napoleon did in his banishment, or as Jonah when the whale swallowed him.

Dimes and Dollars.

Wm. S. O'Brien, the California millionaire, declared on his death-bed that only brother had passed from earth in the city of Baltimore as long ago as 1861. Nevertheless, the will of the bonanza king showed a bequest of $300,000 to Pauline O'Brien, a beautiful girl, whose undefined relations to the rich man under whose roof she dwelt had been a matter of much gossip in San Francisco. Pauline had been accustomed to speak to San Francisco as Uncle William, and when it became known that her share was the same as those received by the recognized nieces, the mystery deepened. After the death of O'Brien, Pauline, in company with an aged woman, who proved to be her mother, took a flying trip to Raleigh, North Carolina, retaining thence to San Francisco with an old deceptant man.

Arriving again at the Golden Gate, Pauline locked the old couple in rooms at the Palace Hotel, and announcing to the O'Brien heirs that she had found her father, P. H. O'Brien, who had never been worth a dime, claimed for him $1,000,000. Her lawyers furnished the trustees of the estate with indignant counsel, but she would not smooth over the facts to make a good defense. He continues to assume that he was "justified of God" in slaughtering his child. His wife, who shortly after her arrest seemed to see the equity of the deed, has again fallen under the old delusion, and thinks her husband did perfectly right in sacrificing the child. They both talk rationally upon every other subject.

Eastern and Western Story-Telling.

It is no use for an Eastern man to try to tell a big story when there is a Western man about. "When I was a young man," said Col. B., "we lived in Illinois. The farm had well wooded, and the stumps were pretty thick. But we put the corn in among them and managed to raise a fair crop. The next season I had my share of the ploughing. We had a 'sandy' plough, and I sat in the seat and managed the horses, four or five handsome bays as ever man drew rein over. One day I found a stump right in my way. I hated to back out, so I just said a word to the team, and if you'll believe it, they just walked that plough through that stump as though it had been cheese." "But a soul expressed surprise. 'Major S., who had been a quiet listener, remarked quietly: 'It's curious, but I had a similar experience myself once. My mother always made our clothes in those days, as well as the cloth they were made of. The old lady was awful proud of her homespun, and it was the strongest cloth in the State. One day I had just ploughed through a white oak stump in the way you speak of, Colonel. But it was a little too quick for me. It came together before I was out of the way, and nipped the seat of my trousers. I felt mean, I can tell you, but I put the string on the ponies, and if you'll believe it, they just walked that stump out roots and all. Something had to give, you know."

The Exodus.

TERRIBLE DESTRUCTION OF THE DELUDED BLACKS.—A Washington dispatch says: "Representative Ryan, of Kansas, whose District embraces Topeka, the destination of the colored people of the South has in view when they leave for Kansas, is here, and says the half has not been told of the destitution of the deluded colored people. All that could possibly be provided for in the way of work in the State have been distributed, yet there are hundreds on the verge of starvation, and more are coming into the State. On the outskirts of Topeka five hundred are encamped, and are being fed through the charity of the Topeka people. The colonization societies and the relief societies have exhausted their resources of relief, and Mr. Ryan says he does not know what will become of those who are now on their way to Kansas. He believes that within the next year one hundred thousand colored people will leave the South for the Northern States, and, oddly enough, the fever now is to go to Iowa and Nebraska, where the climate is even more severe upon them than that of Kansas."

REWARDED.—Col. S. A. Sharpe has received the appointment as postmaster at this place, to succeed Colonel W. A. Ellison. The change was a surprise to all, because of the promptness and business-like judgment which the affairs of the office have been administered. The reason for this removal is purely political. Colonel Ellison is, though quiet, an avowed Democrat, while Colonel Sharpe is equally an avowed Republican; and the change was simply the stepping down and out of a Democrat to make room for a Republican. Col. Ellison has forwarded the department of the Interior a petition asking for his retention, but has little idea his request will be granted, as his politics will not admit him to help along the Sherman boom or to be utilized during the campaign. Personally no objection can be brought to bear against Col. Sharpe, but his politics are treacherous, or rather obnoxious to a majority of our citizens.—Statesville Landmark.

A HEROINE OF THE PLAGUE.—Memphis, July 28.—The list of heroes of the plague has been added to in the person of a young woman, Evelyn Widrig, aged 17 years, living in Bradford street. When her neighbors, the Tobins, took the fever, this brave girl visited them and nursed them until they died. Then the Godsey family, across the street, were sick and she visited and nursed them. Last Sunday week she was taken with the fever, and she died on Sunday last. Her father also had the fever, and died a few hours afterward. The Rev. Dr. Harris, of the Episcopal church, said last night, "While her father was sick he begged me to tell him how his daughter was, and I could say no more than that she was real good. A true mother she thought I meant; but to-night they are both resting in Elmwood, where side by side we laid the two to-day."

JOHNNY'S ESSAY ON DOGS.—Last summer our dog Towser was a lyn in the sun trine to sleep, but the flies was that bad that he couldn't, cos he had to catch 'em, and bime by a bee lit on his head, and waz wackin about like the dog waz him. Towser he held his bed still, and when the bee was clus to his noze, 'Towser he winked at 'em, like he thid, 'em, and he winked at 'em, like he thid, 'em, a lily of the valley which is out open yet, but you just wait till it blossoms and you'll see sun fun, and sure snuff Towser opened his mouth very slowly so as not to frighten the bee and the bee went into Towser's mouth. Then Towser he shet his ize dreamy, and his mouth too, and had begun to make a beautiful sun to vent his stung him, and yu never seed a lily of the valley ack so in your life.

Mr. John Suggs of the firm of Suggs Bros., in Greensboro, was in our office on Saturday and gave an account of the lightning striking his store on Thursday evening last. The lightning first struck a large tree, about ten feet from the corner of the store, and tore it almost to splinters; then it glanced to the store, making a hole through the wall almost like a large minnie ball would make, and setting fire to their goods, went down to the floor and ranged under it till it came to the front piazza and then went upwards, knocking senseless W. F. Jewel one of his clerks. The fire was soon extinguished and Jewel has recovered from the effects of the stroke.—Kinston Journal.

Freeman, the Hogsasset (Mass.) adventurer, who murdered his little daughter under a fanatic delusion that God would restore her to life, and who is still in jail at Barnstable, refuses to take any legal advice, and says, should the State furnish a counsel, he will not permit him to smooth over the facts to make a good defense. He continues to assume that he was "justified of God" in slaughtering his child. His wife, who shortly after her arrest seemed to see the equity of the deed, has again fallen under the old delusion, and thinks her husband did perfectly right in sacrificing the child. They both talk rationally upon every other subject.

Talmage's Prices.

I have seldom read anything more impudent than the reply of the agent of Dr. Talmage to the request of a small town for a lecture—"I have upward of one thousand letters, all wanting Dr. Talmage to lecture for them. Some fabulous offers. Now, there is but one way of getting the Doctor. If your society can afford to pay what larger places offer I may be able to drop out a larger place and give you a date in July. The lowest terms I can afford are $100. I know it is a big price, but Dr. Talmage is a great man," &c. This may be legitimate in the eyes of a New York "Christian," but it hardly looks like "good faith" to "drop out" the large places in the manner proposed. Perhaps, however, the frantic applicants only exist in the imagination of the agent.

A PANIC INCIDENT.—Among the curious incidents of a panic in yellow fever times, the following is not least: Last Sunday the outgoing train over the Louisville railroad was crowded to excess by excited refugees. At the transfer station, some miles out of the city, the excitement among the passengers was intense, to get seats, and in fact to get into the car being the great object. So great was the excitement that a Memphis lady bound for Gadsden was taken with premature pains of child-bearing. Mr. Kertin, train dispatcher, kindly offered to secure a special car for her and supply her with all necessary comforts, or would even her back to the city. This latter she declined to do, the dread of yellow fever being greater than her fear of accident. So she refused to wait for a special car, and took chances in the crowded train, although Dr. Willford, who happened to be present, volunteered to take charge of her and attended to her if necessary, provided she remained at the transfer station. The frightened woman reached Gadsden in safety and without accident.—Half-sheet Memphis Appeal.

A short time ago some Americans were visiting this country, and were dined extensively by some London University men. The toast of the United States became popular. "The United States, bounded on the north by Canada, on the south by the Gulf of Mexico, on the east by the great Atlantic, and on the west by the broad Pacific." This, however, did not satisfy the more republican members of the University. They proposed the United States, bounded on the north by the North Pole, on the south by the Antarctic, on the east by the Gulf Stream, and on the west by the lilytable ocean." Even that did not satisfy one member of the party. His toast was, "The United States, bounded on the north by the aurora borealis, on the south by infinite space, on the east by the precession of the equinoxes, and on the west by the day of judgment." The toast was drunk with enthusiasm. [And so were the University men, and don't you forget it.]

HAND HIM AROUND.—Four little children near Indian Springs, Ga., were playing in their father's yard, near the well, the other day, when a little four year old girl accidentally knocked her little brother into the well, which is a deep one. The angered father made the little thing get into the well-bucket and go down into the dark, deep and, to her frightful hole, and get the lat. The Good Spirit went with her and she came out alive, but showing signs of intense mental suffering.—Gainesville (Ga.) Southern.

WHAT SETTLE WANTS.—Judge Thomas Settle, of North Carolina, has the vice-presidential fever. He has been asking President Hayes to put all the appointments in North and South Carolina and Florida under his charge, so as to aid him in securing delegates from those States who will work for him in the national convention. Most any Republican will suit Judge Settle as partner. His willingness to play the second fiddle is something for Mr. Hendricks to ponder upon.—Boston Herald.
