THE GARDEN MOTH-Dressed in her most pure white livery—the emblem of purity and innocence-like a spirit of the air, flits about all through the day, from early sourise to dewy eve, as aimless, apparently, as the floating thistle down, is et a busy worker, the gardener's most nveterate enemy. She it is who gives us the cabbage worm, against which gardenwheels alone excepted. A new passenger ers have opposed ten thousand ways and means, as yet, to little or no effect; for still he is doomed, year after year, to see his plants riddled and his labor lost. This moth drops a tiny semi-transparent, lemon-colored egg on almost every plant she touches-sets it up on end; in a day or two it hatches and becomes a very small green worm, lying close to the leaf, on which it soon begins to feed. Its growth is rapid, and in three or four days it is from an inch to an inch and a half in length, and able to do a good day's work. If let alone it changes to a crysalis, and in that form takes its chances for the winter in the ground or among the trash of year.

Now, if we could destroy all the moths we would put a stop to the worms, and the writer raises the question-which would be the easiest and cheapest, to fight the worms or kill the moths? One writer on the subject proposes to go over every leaf of every plant with a soft brush and wipe off the eggs, once every two days. That's a task easier to talk about than to perform. To kill the moths would On last Sunday, Judges Gilmer, Avery require an army of boys with switchbrushes in every garden, and they would have to wait, and watch, and fight "on
