A Local Editor's Dream.

Once upon a time a local editor dreamed hat he was dead and in another world. He approached a city before him and knocked for admittance, but no one answered his summons. The gate remained closed against him. Then he cried aloud for an entrance, but the only response was scores of heads above the wall on the other side of the gate. At sight of him the owners of the heads set up a dismal howl, and one of them cried, Why didn't you notice that big egg I gave you?" At this horrid and most unexpected interrogation, the poor local turned in the direction of the voice to learn its owner, when another voice shricked, "Where's that piece you were going to write about my soda fountain?" and close upon this was the awful demand, "Why did you write a piece about old Smith's hens, and never speak of my new gate?" Whatever answer he was going to frame to this appeal was cut short by the astonishing query, "Why did you spell my name wrong in the programme?" The misserable man turned to flee, when he was rooted to the ground by these terrible demands: "Why did you put my marriage among the deaths?" He was on the point of saying the foreman did it, when a shrill voice madly cried, "You spoiled the sale of my horse by publishing that runaway," and another, "If I catch you alone I'll lick you for what you said about me before the police court." Another, "Why didn't you show up the school question when I told you to?" And this was followed by the voice of a female hysterically exclaiming, "This is the brute that blotched my poetry and made me ridiculous!" Where upon hundred of voices screamed, "Where is my article? Give me back my article!" And in the midst of the horrid din the poor wretch awoke, perspiring at every pore and screaming for help. - Standford Advocate.
