Potato flour sells in Liverpool for nearly twice as much as that from wheat. It is the dry evaporated pulp of the common potato; is used, after various manipulations, for several manufacturing purposes, legitimate and otherwise, including starch, sizing and dressing for silk.

A Chemical Lung.

On Wednesday, August 13, Dr. Richard Neale, in the presence of a number of engineers, including the manager of the underground railway, and other scientific men, gave an interesting and, as far as it went, successful demonstration of a scheme to purify the foul air of tunnels, mines, cabins, churches, theatres, hospitals and other buildings. The proposal is, we believe, a novel one, and promises a new era in ventilation. Nearly all attempts hitherto made to purify the air in crowded buildings have been mechanical, and have consisted of driving out the foul air by currents of fresh air. Dr. Neale's proposal on the other hand is a chemical one, and is designed to destroy the poisonous gases. It is not, of course, intended to supersede ordinary ventilation by currents, but rather to act as an auxiliary. The essence of the scheme is the adoption of some simple chemical facts. As the lungs of living beings appropriate oxygen and give off carbonic acid gas, Dr. Neale proposes to make a "chemical lung," which will appropriate carbonic acid and sulphurous gases from the air containing them, without yielding any products in exchange. The air in the tunnels of the underground railway was referred to as a conspicuous and well known example of impurity irremediable by any chemical means. The principle deleterious, poisonous gases in this instance are carbonic acid and sulphurous gases and carbonic oxide. All these, but especially the two former, may, Dr. Neale maintains, be easily got rid of by chemical means. By mixing a solution of sulphurous acid and water in a flask, Dr. Neale made an excellent imitation of the air at the Baker street or Portland Road station. He then added a small quantity of solution of caustic soda, and agitated the flask briskly for a few seconds, and immediately the sulphurous smell was abolished. In the same flask a current of carbonic acid gas was next passed, so that a lighted taper introduced into the flask was at once extinguished. After a few shakings a lighted taper was again introduced, and burned with a bright, steady flame, showing that the soda had taken up the acid. Similar experiments were made with solutions of caustic lime. Dr. Neale said the facts illustrated in the simple experiments formed the basis of his scheme for purifying ordinary impure air.

Eating Birds' Nests.

Edible birds' nests may certainly rank amongst the curiosities of food. They are considered great delicacies in China, where they form part of all ceremonious feasts, being dissolved in soups. They reach China from the Southern Archipelago, chiefly from Java, Borneo, Celebes, and the Sooloo Islands. It has been estimated that not less than 8,400,000 of these nests, are annually imported into Canton. The finest and whitest kind sells for as much as 45 and 66 the pound, but it requires about fifty nests to make up one pound. In reality, these singular structures are rather the brackets upon which the birds afterwards build their nests than the nests themselves. The bird—a kind of swift known as Salangan (Collocia esculenta), builds both in marine and inland caverns, first forming, mainly with its saliva, a number of loops, which it subsequently works up into the shell-shaped support for its nest. The nest itself is made of grass, leaves, and seaweed, but the edible bracket or support consists almost exclusively of the salivary secretion of the bird. It is a mistake to suppose it to be made of seaweed, which the Salangan neither eats as food nor uses in the building of these brackets, though the nests are often made of it. The Salangan builds and breeds four times in the year. The brackets are removed three times, the best being obtained in July and August.

He Believes in Hod-Carrying.

At Centerville, near Clinton, N. J., two large silk mills are building, and at one of these a middle aged bachelor John Wilson is employed as common laborer.

Wilson, it is currently reported, was once a Western merchant, but succumbed to the panic of 1873 and took to hockery. On Thursday last, as he was about to climb his ladder with a hod of mortar, Mr. Anderson, the contractor and a whom he works, handed him a letter. He poised the hod on his shoulder, and with one foot on the ladder round read the letter, thrust it into his pocket, and went on with his burden. Seeing that the envelope was headed "Wilson," Mr. Anderson shortly after asked if it was bad news. "Yes and no," was the answer; "father's dead; left me $54,000 in his will." Then he went on about his work as usual. After a while his employer remarked: "Why Wilson, aren't you going to know who he is?" "Was the cut reply; "I am as well off here as anywhere else." When some surprise was expressed at this he interrupted with, "Pooh! If you had but $100,000 a single day as I have you, no such thing as matter as this would upset you; of course I'm going to work right on, unless you discharge me." And so he did, and is still carrying the hod from 7 A. M. to 6 P. M.—N. Y. World.

A Detective Circumvented.

A Raleigh mulatto named Phillip Lane, and representing himself as a detective, appeared in the city in search of a negro named Bob Atchison, whom he charged with having broken open and ransacked a house in Salisbury some time ago. He soon spotted his man, at Senek's bar room, in the character of a band-picker who has regaled the neighborhood of College street for some months past with a musical repertoire consisting of one song which he sang in a voice that woke the echoes far around. Lane obtained a warrant for him, and, being deputized by Constable Orr, proceeded to Senek's bar-room to make the arrest. Here, however, as soon as his purpose was disclosed, he met with some obstruction from outsiders—friends of Atchison—who chose to treat him as an unwarranted disturber of the peace, a hindrance to his enjoyment of the bar. Lane, under the impression that he was in a place where he was not wanted, turned to the door and was about to depart, when he was arrested by a constable, who, in the meantime, had been notified by the owner of the bar. Lane, however, was not to be taken so easily, and he held fast to the door, and while the officer was holding him, Atchison snatched himself out of his coat and escaped. Lane was pronounced guilty of assault by Justice Davidson and fined $2.50.—Charlotte Observer.
