THURSDAY, NOV. 17, 1881.

REMARKABLE.—The cotton crop this year is said to yield more seed in proportion to lint than ever before known.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The new steamer Brunswick, valued at $150,000, foundered on Lake Erie, last night. The engineer and two cooks were lost.

SNOW.—Advices from Kansas City say that Santa Fe trains have been delayed 36 hours by the heaviest snow storm ever known in New Mexico and Colorado.

BURGLARY.—Charlotte is more troubled by burglars than any other town or city we know of. The Observer's daily report of news is seldom without a burglary paragraph. The strange part of it is that the offenders are rarely captured.

The members of the "Southern Manufacturers' Association," and all others concerned in manufacturing of any kind in the South, are invited to attend a meeting in Atlanta on the 5th of December. Important matters are involved, and it is hoped there will be a general attendance.

The defeat of the Democrats in Virginia is rejected over by Northern Republicans as a break in the solid South,—an event for which they have long labored. What is to come of it remains to be seen. There are enemies in every Southern State who will seek to extend "the break" throughout Southern territory.

"The pressure to obtain admittance to the courtroom," is part of the heading to one of the newspaper reports of the trial of Guiteau. Crowds of people are much the same world over—excitable and curious. Our Rowan Dutch can mind their own business about as well as any people in the world. It takes something considerable to make them stop a plow—a circus, for instance.

Frivolity—a life spent in trifling—it is said causes more insanity than the hardest daily labor. A trifler is a constant self-accuser; and if the habit is allowed to grow with his years, he becomes irritable and furious, or morose and melancholy. Very often the demon of drunkenness slips in toadden mental agonies by stupefaction, in which case the individual often dies a drunkard, a species of insanity at last.

The Ninth Boston (Mass.) Regiment, whose behavior at Richmond, Va., elicited the investigation of the Governor of Massachusetts, have been acquitted by the committee sent out to gather information, of all charges except while in the city of Richmond. There the boys did break loose and "play old herry scratch," and the Governor says the Colonel of the regiment must find out the guilty members, or he will come down on the whole regiment.

The Scientific American notes the fact that there are no less than 2000 existing patents on car compasses, and still the exact requirement of the service has not been found; but that a fortune awaits the man who shall find it. Passenger coaches are already well enough provided for. A coupler for freight trains is what is needed, working automatically, coupling any number of cars coming together, or not coupling them as the train master may desire. A coupler under the hand of one man on a train—simple, safe and durable.

LOCUSTS IN VENEZUELA.—The American Consul Plenarier, of Maracaibo, writes under date of July 25, 1881, that the condition of the people in certain parts of his consular district has been rendered indeed deplorable by the ravages of the locusts. Crops have been entirely destroyed, animals are dying for want of food, and the people becoming desperate from hunger are robbing food in adjoining districts. Women carry off their children and offer to sell them for food. The Government was taking steps to afford relief. The greatest distress was in the Guajira Peninsula, which was threatened with depopulation.

MURDERED MAN IN A WELL.—Morganston had a startling event, as we learn from the Blade, recently. The coowner with a jury of inquest, and nearly every man in town, assembled at a well in the suburbs to take out the dead body of a man seen floating on the water. The preparations were all made to conduct the ceremony with a gravity becoming the occasion. A well-cleaver was sent down to fix ropes around the body, which in five minutes was landed on the ground above; when, lo! an effigy stuffed with leaves! The boys who "raised the town" are now "lying low," and the suspicious born of the first alarm, are slinking away into their dark recesses.

A CRANK THREATENS JAY GOULD'S LIFE.—New York, Nov. 14.—A crank, or black-matter, has been sending letters to Jay Gould threatening to take his life if the banker is not given points whereby he can recover a fortune lost in stocks. The writer claims to be inspired from God, and the method of carrying out his mission as described is similar to that of Guiteau's, and he signs himself "an old victim."

A trap was set and the writer of the letters was caught yesterday. He gave his name as Col. J. Howard Wells. He gave a fictitious address. He is about 40 years old. He admitted his guilt.

"WIFE OF CARDUI" four times a day makes a happy household. At Theo. F. Klutz's.

Mr. Locke ("Nashy"), who has recently returned from a tour of Ireland, and who is in Chicago, declares that the poor people of Ireland exceed the power of words to describe. Their condition is infinitely worse than that of the blacks of our Southern States during slavery. According to his representations, the farmers of America have more regard for the comfort and care of their horses and cattle than the landlords of Ireland have for the comfort and welfare of their tenants.—Exchange.

There is not now if there ever was in the world, a laboring class of people who were more comfortably situated, more carefully and tenderly provided for than were the slaves of the Southern States. There are exceptional cases of cruelty no doubt, but they were rare. There was no country on the face of the earth where there was more real personal contentment, comfort and happiness. There was none where the precepts of the holy Word of God were more nearly the rule of life for all. There was none where a purer patriotism existed, or a stricter obedience to law was practiced. But it has passed away. A new order of things has been instituted, whether for the better or the worse it is hard to say. The symptoms or early impressions of the present generation, of both white and black, are fading away; and the time will come when the antagonism of race may be expected to assert itself more distinctly than now. The Indian in the path of the onward march of the white man melts away. Indeed, that seems to be the fate of all inferior races. It is sometimes attended with severe and long continued struggles; but the final result is the same. Should the Southern States become densely populated with a stirring, enterprising people, such as are now coming in from the North, bringing in machinery and money, marvelous physical changes will ensue and these will as certainly institute great moral and social changes. It is easy to see that inferior races must either march to the music or march out of the arena.

The trial of Guiteau was opened in Washington on Monday. The prisoner has his brother-in-law Scoville, and Leigh Robinson for counsel. Mr. Robinson put in a plea for time to get ready for trial, whereupon, the prisoner, against the efforts of his friends to restrain him, got in a speech in which he protested against any further delay, declaring the trial should go on.

The courtroom has been arranged with special reference to a big and interesting occasion. A trial that would occupy one or two days of a North Carolina court will probably be spun out to one or two months in Washington. Lawyers, jurors, witnesses (a great number) and last but not least, newspaper men, have all high hopes of making a good deal of money out of Guiteau's case, and "don't you forget it." He will be acquitted at last, on the plea of insanity, and will be sent to some asylum, where he will be made the recipient of floral offerings, embroidered slippers and pretty neck ties from tender-hearted ladies, whose sympathies run with offenders and against the ill-used jury.

Engineering Inventions. A novel means for raising water from a well, cistern, or other receptacle, and conveying it to a distance and there discharging it, has been patented by Mr. James C. Richardson, of Boscobel, Wis. A wire track, inclining upwardly, is extended from the curb of the well, etc., to the place of discharge, and on this track a carriage, controlled by a rope and windlass, is arranged to run. Connected with this carriage by spring bolts is a bucket carrier, which, on reaching the well, is automatically released, to allow for the descent and filling of the bucket, after which the bucket carrier is raised by the rope and made to automatically engage with the carriage, that is drawn up the track till the bucket meets with a tilting stop, which causes the water to be discharged.—Scientific American.

This is not a new thing. There were quite a number of telegraph water-carriers in this country more than 30 years ago, answering to the above description exactly. They went out of use but why, we do not know; for they certainly were economical of time and labor, where the spring or well was situated at a distance from the place of delivery, usually on elevated ground. It saved both time and labor in carrying water in buckets up a steep hill, which, at certain unpleasant seasons of the year, is very important.

Mr. James C. Richardson, of Boscobel, Wisconsin, is a humbug. His patent is the revival or modification of an old one long since expired. The celebrated Clement Attachment for the manufacture of cotton yarn from cotton in the seed, is also a revival or modification of an old patent. Elijah P. Mitchell manufactured and sold scores of machines of this kind in this town years ago.

Hon. R. B. Vance has sent us a copy of the Report of the Consuls of the United States on the Commerce, Manufactures, etc., of their Consular Districts. It is a valuable and interesting document, comprising a great deal of information on various subjects relating to the products and manufactures of foreign countries.

Mr. Theodore C. Jaffe, one of the editors of the Wilmington Review, is dead. A Washington correspondent of the Goldstar Messenger says Nichols is to be decapitated and Holden restored to the Raleigh Post Office.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Just now it is unusually dull here, the President and nearly all the cabinet being out of the city. How the President's absence affects news may not be understood away from here, but it does act upon news as the weather does upon a thermometer. For instance, there are now awaiting the President's signature no less than forty commissions of postmasters. These officers have all bowed, and in some instances the offices are without an official head. He is, however, expected back tomorrow, when the business of the government, which is always made of secondary importance to the success of the Republican party, will receive attention. With him will return several bureau officers of the postoffice department, who went to New York to vote.

Speaking of elections in general, and of Virginia in particular, recalls the fact that such, and perhaps undue importance is attached to the vote of that State. It is, however, useless to conceal the fact that in Republican circles here it is regarded as the entering wedge that will split the solid South. It is no unusual thing to hear that North Carolina will follow upon the heels of Virginia and join in what the Republicans are pleased to term the rejuvenated and rehabilitated South. They expect Tennessee to follow the old North State, and thus to break the backbone of Democratic supremacy in that section. Whether or not these rose-colored views of Republican Utopians will be realized is, of course, for one at this distance impossible to know, but certain it is that they are entertained by men who are not given to wild and reckless assertions.

News of a local or State character is quiet at present, the only matters of any interest at all being a few postoffices. There are two classes of postoffices—one Presidential and the other minor offices. Offices of the first class are those whose receipts reach a certain amount upon which the salary of the postmaster is regulated. If the salary reaches over $1,000 a year this lifts it into the Presidential class and the appointment is made by the President. Appointments to the minor offices are made by the Postmaster-General himself. At this time but one presidential postoffice is left vacant by the expiration of the postmaster's commission in North Carolina, and that is Tarboro, Edgecombe county. A lively fight is in progress over the appointment, which will have to be made by December 1st. The office pays $1,400 annually, and for the past twelve years has been filled by H. H. Shaw, the present incumbent, who is anxious to be reappointed. He has filed his application and with it numerous petitions in his favor. Not content with endorsements from residents of his own State, he has gone over into Virginia and obtained several strong letters asking for his appointment. He is backed by business men of his town and section. Mr. Walter P. Williamson is also an applicant for the same position, and he, too, has not been idle, but a pigeon-hole full of papers, signed principally by politicians, testify to his work in search of $1,400 a year.

Washington Letter.

The State Beyond the Potomac. A Bitter Hearted Ex-Cabinet Officer. Civil Service Sham Foolery. The Good that Blaine, James and Hunt have done.

[From Regular Correspondent.] WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 12th, 1881.

From Washington, we look across the Potomac upon the hills of Virginia. Virginia—the eldest and most majestic of the colonial sisterhood. But yesterday, on her historic sands, was celebrated the event that assured our independent nationality, and prefaced the brightest and most wonderful book in the annals of peoples. To-day, Virginia sets humiliated and debauched, wearing the "sorrow's crown of sorrow," her fair fame, her vows and her obligations repudiated. The hills of Virginia look across the Potomac upon Washington, with its marble Capitol, the White House, and the Treasury of the United States. In these, see the cause of disgrace of the once beautiful and chaste. In the Capitol of the United States, Senators conspired and colluded with an apostate Virginian. Two Presidents of the United States executed the pact of conspiracy, and, through the Treasury every tax payer in the United States of America, volens nolens, has been made accessory to the crime.

In all the bitterness of her degradation Virginia has the wretched consolation that her shame was compassed not alone by traitorous sons, but by the Segate of the United States, by two Presidents of the United States, and by the Treasury of the United States.

If there is an honest tax payer in the Union, let him reflect that the money he paid into the National Treasury passed through the hands of Government employees into the corruption fund of Malheur. If there is a man in the United States who remembers the legend of "civil service reform," honored with the lips of the party of "moral ideas," let him look that hundreds of experienced and faithful postmasters were removed from their offices in Virginia, by Presidents Garfield and Arthur, in compliance with the pact with Malheur.

A DISREPUTED EX-CABINET OFFICER. Perhaps the most thoroughly disappointed, and, as Bunthorne would say, "bitter hearted one" in Washington, at the present time, is Ex. P. M. General Tyner. It was he who first discovered the Star Route villainy. His great mistake was that he did not turn the lights upon it, but concealed it in a napkin. In due time the little patent reformer Mr. James, poking about in the pigeon holes of the Department, discovered Tyner's discovery, and, with brass band accompaniment, threw a flood of calcium splendor upon the whole bad business. Now Tyner, driven by the angel James from the paradise of a salaried sinecure, reflects upon what he might have done and might have been, rolling the bitter bolus of disappointment under his tongue, and impatiently planning revenge.

Aprons of James, I am told by those who are around him, and who intimately know him, that he is really the greatest humbug who ever spun fame for himself or tried to climb up in the world on other men's suspenders. They say, he really knows nothing about business or public affairs, and that, for all the clat he has gained in the Star Route business, he is indebted to the work of an almost unknown employee in the Post Office Department. It is expected that all the members of the present Cabinet will have retired before the 1st of December, but the work they have done for the principles of civil service reform will live after them. The Secretary of State has placed his son in one of the highest and best paid places in that Department. The P. M. General has made a lie his son-in-law Postmaster of New York City, and the Secretary of the Navy has placed three of his sons on the permanent pay rolls of that Department. They may resign, as it were in the morning of their administration, when their usefulness to their families is just beginning to be felt.

STATE NEWS.

Fayetteville Examiner: The Cumberland county fair was a success. On Wednesday, November 24, a difficulty occurred in Flea Hill township between a colored young man by the name of Joshua McDaniel and Faircloth, a white man, which resulted in McDaniel's receiving a severe cut in the abdomen from the effects of which he died. Faircloth was arrested and committed to jail in this place. The graded school is doing well. The number of pupils now enrolled is about four hundred. The recent rains have raised the Cape Fear River a few feet and the boats have been running during the past and present week.

Raleigh News & Observer: Sheriff H. E. Kearney, of Franklin county, Friday, placed in the penitentiary five convicts, three for larceny and two for bigamy. Their names are: Frank Branch, Isham Brinkly, Wm. Winston, Isaac Jones and Rufin Foster. The Norfolk and North Carolina Navigation Company was organized in Norfolk, Thursday, to run a line of steamers on the Dismal Swamp canal. Captain Henry Roberts was elected president.

Our readers will recollect the murder of young Curtis in Richmond, Va., by John E. Poindexter about two years ago, so [which] he was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of two years. According to a custom in Virginia, when the behavior of a convict is good during his imprisonment, the term is shortened. For this reason Poindexter was released on yesterday.—Greensboro Tribune.

A Growing Evil.

The American Register, a Democratic paper recently established in Washington City, thus refers to a great and growing evil in American politics: "The distribution of the offices of the Federal Government as rewards for partisan services has been for years a great and growing evil, demoralizing the political elements of the whole country; but not until within a few years past has it been demonstrated to the world that the toleration of this corrupting abuse had not only placed the life of the President in jeopardy, but had actually and notoriously caused the death of a President by violence. It is time for the people to pause and contemplate the utter and inevitable ruin of our political system to which we are rapidly hastening, and provide at once an effectual remedy for the direful evil. No matter how, or with what party, the abuse originated, every good and patriotic citizen will lend a helping hand to avert the danger, and wholly eradicate this monstrosity. The Constitution must be amended, and the appointing power taken away from the President. If there be public virtue enough left among our people to preserve our institutions, this amendment will be made at once.

Angusta Chronicle: A correspondent says, with truth and fervor, that "to inspect the Richmond and Danville mineral exhibit, at Atlanta, is like turning over the index pages of a fascinating book."

Breach of Trust.

The public is warned against a man calling himself M. A. BROWN, of Rowan county, who obtained possession by subterfuge of one of my cotton gin sharps for filing gin saws. He will probably represent that he has the right to use the machine; but he has no such right, as it is covered by patent No. 22,744, in my possession. The public is warned against employing him as a user of my sharps, as a small claim may be made on all such cases of trespass. —J. N. BASKIN.
