An Electric Ice Storm.
Texas is a country of marvels. Wonderful things are constantly happening. Strange stories are told and stranger truths are developed. A week ago to-day a cloud a little larger than a man's hand passed over the Big Wichita Valley, eighteen miles north of us. It lingered but a moment, yet in that moment unheard of things transpired. It did not hail but dropped electric ice. Pieces of five inches in diameter, fifteen inches around, were hurled from the upper realms, dashing upon the ground like cannon balls from heavy artillery. Dozens of pieces were gathered up and weighed and found to run from fifteen to twenty ounces. One piece broke through the new pine shingles on Tom Glee's and descending went through the pine ceiling over the sitting room.

An Inconsistent Nomination.
Col. Folk, the coalition nominee for associate justice on the Supreme bench, stated in an interview with the editor of the Lenoir Topic, that he regarded the prohibition question as settled, and as not entering into the politics of the State. He said that he was the draught of the coalition, and that he was the present system of county government, that he vigorously urged its passage, because in his judgment he believed it to be right, and still believed it to be right. On that question he had nothing to recall.

The coalitionists evidently forgot the colonel's record and stultified themselves amazingly when they nominated for the leading position on the State ticket, a man who was the author of and still believes in the bill, opposition to which constitutes one of the main planks in their platform.

There are some promising young men who are not careful about keeping their word.
