TOBACCO!

If ever you had a showing for fine prices, it is in the crop of Tobacco to be planted this year.

We keep a store, and strive to have in that store everything a farmer would like to buy, both for himself and his family. We want our customer to be a cheerful man, and if he has money in his purse he will be cheerful; but he can't be if, when he comes to sell his crop, it brings him little or nothing. Everybody knows that on the fertilizer he uses, allowing the season to be at all favorable, depends the result of his crop, and this being the case, he has no right to risk that crop on anything that has not been tried and proved. The following will show what has been "tried and proved," in the fertilizer way, on fine tobacco, and Major RAGLAND, of Halifax county, Va., in the great tobacco authority, and grower of pedigree tobacco seed, is the man who tells about it. If anybody knows what tobacco is he certainly does:

"There are several brands of fertilizer manufactured specially for tobacco, differing in composition, price, and merit; and after repeated experiments with most, if not all the best, the author gives it as his decided opinion, that for fine, bright, silky tobacco NOTHING EQUALS THE

'ANCHOR BRAND'

Tobacco Fertilizer, prepared by the Southern Fertilizing Company, Richmond, Va. And this opinion is based upon seventeen years' trial, and often in competition with the best of other brands on the market. It is a tried and proved fertilizer, which the planter can use without the risk of getting something unsuited to his crop; and therefore I can recommend it with confidence."

Messrs. Mathews & Williamson, of Reidsville, N. C., wrote the following to the Company, and state that they have seen nothing since to change their judgment. "From our own personal experience, and it covers a long time, in watching the results from the use of various brands of commercial fertilizers handled in this section, it is our mature judgment that the 'ANCHOR BRAND' stands at the head of all for the production of fine, silky, yellow tobacco. The plant seems to receive more fitting nourishment from the use of this article than from any other, and we are of opinion that if our farmers made it their stand-by, we would hear less of light chaffy tobacco, having some color but no body, and that the farmer would realize the result he ought to enjoy from his labor; for low-grade tobacco will not bring big money."

Now we want you to have "big money" for your crop; because we not only desire you to make good bills with us, but pay for them when they are made; hence we handle the 'Anchor Brand,' and will supply you, in quantities to suit, direct from the factory. We don't want people to abuse us about their fertilizer; we, therefore, sell only what time has shown to be the best. So, make no arrangements in this line, until you see or confer with us. You certainly can't afford to take any risk this year.

COTTON!

I will have this Season in larger quantity than ever before, the old reliable

SEA FOWL GUANO

FOR COTTON. It is a pleasure to sell this brand because it pleases. And one fact worthy of notice is, that it has increased in sales the last two years, which no other brand has done in this market. Also, I will have which is one of the favorites of Cabarrus farmers.

No other brand stands any higher with them, and we all know that they are good and successful farmers, and especially raise fine crops of Cotton.

And to accommodate my friends and customers, I will keep on hand a full stock of Flour, Corn, Meal, Oats, cotton seed Meal, Bran, Ship Stuff, Bacon, Molasses, Salt, &c., &c., that I will sell for cash or barter very low. Also, will sell on time.

Have a small lot of prime CLOVER SEED.

10 P. M. The moon is just rising from her azure couch. As I gaze upon the chaste goddess of the night, flooding the lonely world of waters with her silvery light, I realize the utter inability of any human language to give even a faint conception of the solemn grandeur of the scene. How intensely lonely one feels as he stands upon the silent deck and gazes down into the sombre depths of the cemetery of nations! How huge the black hull of the ship appears as she silently steals o'er the placid bosom of the deep! Her tapering masts seem to pierce the azure vault, and yet what a mere speck on the surface of the vast Atlantic! But why rush myself into adjectival bankruptcy over an Atlantic moon-rise, when we are bound for the birth-place of beauty and romance? When we will see the sun at morning tinge with rosy light the shores of classic Italy, and sink at close of day behind the Sabine hills, his last rays gilding the domes of the Eternal City, the moon rising o'er the Albanian hills, casting her silvery shafts o'er the fair isles of Greece, the gleaming columns of the Parthenon, and over hill and dale of the land of Sappho and Helen. * * * The 11 o'clock bell is ringing for lights out. The ship is tumbling uneasily in a confused sea, so characteristic of the Gulf Stream. The silver streak in my voracious thermometer has already ascended 15° since entering this great adjuster of climates.

Monday, Dec. 24th. Lat. 30° 13' N., Lon. 62° 02' W.

Mingled clouds and sunlight. At length we draw an extensive sigh of relief. Not because the sands of time which mark the interval between Christmas past and Christmas future have nearly run their course. Such things are of little moment to us. There will be no stockings hung up here, unless it be wet ones, and no benevolent St. Nich. but a superabundance of his uncanonized namesake. The prodigious sigh then was not in anticipation of joys to come, but in the consciousness of dangers past. To-day at the P. M. observations we found ourselves East of the Bermudas, the "bete noir" of the Atlantic pilgrim, which have written above them in sombre characters on the chart, "Stormy region of the Gulf Stream." This group, lying Lat. 32° N., 64° 56' W., is one of the most isolated portions of the globe, being 690 miles from the nearest land. From year's end to year's end thro' all the changing seasons "Ye storm vexed Bermoothes" is the favorite haunt of the storm demons who incessantly lash the surrounding waters into a raging fury. In a despairing little rhyme, well known to all sailors in this region, it is said

"If Bermudas let you pass
Then look out for Hatteras,
And if Hatteras you should fail
On the coast you'll get a gale."

In which it appears that to the harassed mariner's mind the chance for immunity from aerial carousals is distressingly small. When you enter the charmed circle which Prospero, like the fairy in the "Sleeping Beauty," has drawn around this lonely little group you find yourself in a haven of rest, into which disturbances aerial or mental never entered. If on earth there be a Utopia surely it is here. The inhabitants in this soft, relaxing climate lead a "dolce far niente" life, seeming never to think of the troubles and turmoils, the strife and struggles of that tumultuous word between which and them the elements have placed a barrier of raging sea and roaring gale. To the storm tossed and weary mariner Bermudas seems a veritable heaven on earth but like the one above, straight is the gate and narrow the way by which one enters in. The mariner must "keep his weather eye skinned," as he phrases it, or he will find himself hung up on the celestial gate post—otherwise a coral reef.

Christmas eve, with not a whisper of the joyous revelries on land, borne to us on the breeze! No suggestion of the all-pervading fire cracker, or the jubilant small boy! The dark rolling waves bring not a murmur of this on their troubled bosoms. Nothing under the wide unbroken horizon to remind us of that period of good will, save the anxious geese on board which seem ever apprehensive of an anachronism on the part of the bloody minded cook.

By the way, it seems rather strange to glean news from the Old North State through the columns of a tiny newspaper published on one of the islands of the Danish Archipelago. To-day I read a piece in the Barnholm "Dagblad" about a wild woman said to be roaming through the jungles of Cabarrus county, ineffectually pursued by four hundred men. This strange being it appears had been devastating the country around Silver Lake, making several intensely dramatic appearance, with flaming eyes, dishevelled hair and the usual dime novel accompaniments of long knife and blood stained hands. She seems to have had the effect of a stroke of paralysis or an unexpected board bill on the dwellers in that region, and made life a burden for juveniles, for whom she had an insatiable yearning. This paper further informs us that the superstitious natives imagined her a supernatural being, and that the blood-hounds employed to track her refused to quit their master's side, and stood, with their tails tucked between their legs, trembling with fear. As latest cablegraphic accounts from Cabarrus county to the "Dagblad," this terror of the Western wilds was still at large. The same reliable sheet informs its readers that the "Co-operative Association of Brigands," in Missouri, has petitioned Congress to erect a monument to Jesse James, who, was considered the leading spirit of his age, and whose untimely decease was universally lamented. How the tow hair of the Scandinavian ruler will bristle as he eagerly gulps down the sesquipedalian words in which this blood curdling tale is couched by the mellow light of an elder duck with a wick run through him! When I again hear one of my patriotic fellow countrymen expatiating on the superior enterprise of American journalism I shall know that he is not a subscriber to the Barnholm "Dagblad" (daily leaf or sheet) the extensive geographical knowledge of whose editor I shall hereafter deeply respect as well as his endeavors to communicate it in such a spicy manner to his readers.

Tuesday, Dec. 25th, 1883. Lat. 29° 36' N., Long. 60° 58' W. A bright morning sun hurling its golden beams down upon the surface of the waters as though it would penetrate the hidden horrors of the great depths and bring to light the dread mysteries which shall only be revealed when the sea gives up its dead! A solitary ship rolling helplessly to and fro in the embrace of a dead calm, blue sky above, blue sea beneath and around us, blue officers and blue men! All nature seems suffering from an acute attack of azures. And this is Christmas day! The "Yule dag" of the Scandinavians, the day which the fraudulent old Norse legends would have people believe the Vikings of old held sacred to wassail and hilarious carousals. Any one who can look at a copy of the modern edition of those musty old sea robbers and believe him capable of anything in the shape of a hilarious carousal must be possessed of a regular Keely motor imagination. My earliest impression of a Dane was a majestic personage with flaxen hair and flowing beard who holding the wassail bowl high o'er the heads of the assemblage, exclaimed in a voice of thunder, "Long live Kings Olof and Odin the mighty." I have since been intimately acquainted with some of the descendants of those ancient bushwhackers and must say that they are not exactly as my fancy had painted them. Many of them convey the impression of having swapped legs with a puddle duck, and bodies with a beer barrel—having the gait of the former, and the contents of the latter.

"Yule tid" or "Yule dag" is held very sacred by the Danes, and is far more religiously observed in Denmark than any other Christian holiday. No shops or buildings are allowed to be open. Business of every kind is compelled by law to suspend at 5 A. M., which is pitch dark at that season in those latitudes, churches are lighted up and services are held. The day is devoted to quiet family gatherings, and much feasting is gotten through with. As we had no churches to light up, no buildings to close, no family gatherings to attend, and no very alarming amount of feasting to get through with, we did little outside of necessary ship's duty but lounge around in the shade, smoking innumerable pipes, spinning yarns, and anathematizing the weather.

In the evening a grand dress ball took place on the gallant fore castle given by numerous breezy old salts, in honor of numerous other breezy old salts. The boatswain as master of ceremonies was mounted on the capstan, belaying pin in hand, respondent in a brand new pea-jacket. The weather beaten ladies wore sou' westerly to distinguish them from the gentlemen, who were attired simply but elegantly in short—clay pipes. All went merry as a marriage bell or an animated dog fight, when suddenly "ding-dong, ding-dong!" eight bells struck and the voice of the officer of the deck was heard shouting, "Starboard watch below! Port watch to stations!" The party broke up as suddenly as Tam O'Shanter's witches at Auld Kirk Alloway, and dispersed, some to bunk, others to their respective stations, and the voice of the man on the lookout was heard drawing out the monotonous "Eight bells and all's well! Lights all right, sir!" and Christmas might never have existed for all the traces of it which remained on board the Rialto.

The Star says:

BEREAVED.—Wilmington has been greatly bereaved in the deaths of Major D. J. Devane and Mr. Alexander Sprunt. They were both men of singularly pure lives and manly motives and principles.

Two good men, both Presbyterians, have fallen before the great reaper Death; the one when the sun was in mid-heaven; the other when the shadows were lengthening and the westerling sun was near the hills. Wilmington could ill spare two such men. But God knows what was best and He doeth all things right.
