Great Fertilizer
FOR FINE

BRIGHT TOBACCO

ALLISON & ADDISON'S
"STAR BRAND"

SPECIAL

TOBACCO MANURE

1865—1884

FOR THE TWENTY YEARS during which we have been selling and manufacturing Fertilizers, we have made the Tobacco Crop the subject of special study and extensive experiments, with the object of making the best possible Fertilizer for that crop, without regard to analyses or book valuations. The relative value of the different fertilizing materials has been studied in the Plant-Bed, in the Field, in the Barn, and in the Salesroom. Our

is the product of the information and skill gained in this continuous effort to improve, and we offer it with great confidence as being the VERY BEST FERTILIZER FOR BRIGHT TOBACCO yet made. Crops raised with it bring the highest average prices in all the markets of Virginia and North Carolina.

IMPORTANT

We use nothing in its manufacture but materials of the highest grade, which are known to be specially adapted to this crop. We use no fiery ammoniates, ground leather, horn, hoof, shoddy, or wool waste, or other inferior or injurious ammoniates.

The Voice of the Press.

What the South Says.

Norfolk Landmark, Dem.

The vote striking out the enacting clause of the Morrison bill was passed by a very slender majority—four only—and the result will be that an appeal will be made to the people of the country. Whether this will be done in the November contest, or in the elections for the next House of Representatives, is a question we are not now prepared to answer; but, sooner or later, the struggle will force itself on the politicians of the country.

Norfolk Ledger, Dem.

We cannot but regret this result. It is a triumph of the Republican party over the rights and interests of the people by the aid of recalcitrant Democrats. Notwithstanding this defeat more than two-thirds of our Congressmen stood by their pledges and were true to the declarations, usages and practices of the party. All honor to the Democrats who were faithful to their party obligations and their party fealty. Their defeat is but temporary and their eventual success assured. As to the Democrats who aided and abetted this result, they have the satisfaction of knowing that they enabled the Republicans to maintain a measure important to their success, but in opposition to the rights and interests of the masses of the people.

Jacksonville (Fla.) Times, Dem.

That the one-fifth, by allying themselves with the Republicans, were able to defeat the four-fifths, is a fact of no vital importance so far as the party is concerned. Party policy is dictated by the majority and not the minority; and though, by confederating themselves with the Republicans, the forty-one renegades may defeat a party measure in the House, they cannot alter the fact that the party to which they nominally belong is committed to a reduction of the tariff. The appeal now lies to the people, and the majority should see to it that revenue reform is made a prominent plank in the Democratic platform for the coming campaign.

What the North Says.

Brooklyn Eagle, Dem.

To the Eagle it proves that the man who looks to the Republican party for any genuine tariff reform is a fool, and those who trust the Democracy have thus far had their faith abundantly justified, and that the factiousists, headed by Mr. Randall, are simply so many Hessians who can be depended on at all times to sell to the highest bidder.

Boston Post, Dem.

By his treason Mr. Randall has probably purchased his pew in Congress for another term; Mr. Eaton has redeemed his pledges to the Republican manufacturers of Connecticut, and the Morrison bill is defeated—defeated by the votes of the Republicans in Congress and their renegade Democratic allies. If this meant simply opposition to a measure upon its general merits, that would be one thing. But it does not. The measure has come to be accepted as embodying the great popular movement for revenue reform in this country.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 9.—James S. Coleman (col.) was hanged in jail here this morning. He had a prayer on the scaffold and expressed himself as being assured of salvation. His crime was a most atrocious one. He killed his sister-in-law, outraged her while dying, and outraged another sister-in-law in another room, in December, 1882. He had at one time taken a leading part in Republican politics, taught school in Laurens county, holding at the time a four years certificate of qualification. Coleman left a message for his family saying: "I want them to know I will be hanged to fulfill the law and not to please them. As they are going to hang a gentleman, I wish none but gentlemen present. Good-bye; I am going home."

An International Romance.

The Expected Visit of Count Von Boreke Recalls his Career in the South and in France.

Charlotte Observer.

"Count Von Boreke will visit this country in May, to see once more some of his old Confederate comrades. He will visit Baltimore and while there will be the guest of General Bradley T. Johnston, Generals Wade Hampton, Fitzhugh Lee and others, who will welcome him and tender him a reception.

"Some thirty years ago, young Von Boreke was a Junior officer in the Royal Cuirassiers of the Guard, a crack regiment of the Prussian army, and mainly officered by the nobility. He was tall, fair haired, handsome, the heir of large estates and of a noble name, for the Von Borekes had from father to son for generation held high places in court. He had won, too, the heart of a fair and noble damsel of the court, and all his life seemed bright before him. Led on by his jolly, reckless companions of the Guard, however, this young officer, in one way or another, became deeply involved in debt. His father was stern and strict, and breaking with him, young Boreke determined to come and offer his sword to the Confederacy. He distinguished himself in the army of Northern Virginia, and won a colonelcy and vote of thanks from the Confederate Congress. He was severely wounded in 1863, and being wholly unfit for active work in the field, was sent by the Confederate Government in 1864 to England to look after arms and supplies. He served faithfully there and to the end, being left after the surrender, without a home or country. He could not enter the Fatherland because of proscription."

"In 1866 he wrote Prince Frederick Charles for leave to serve as a private in the Prussian ranks against Austria. On account of his Confederate service he was pardoned, his father forgave him, and the Emperor (then King William) restored him to his former rank. He was promoted and served on the Prince's staff, and his father became tremendously proud of him. And now for the part that does not accord so well with the light and progress of the nineteenth century, but takes us back to the aforementioned old romances. In all his wanderings, through all his sufferings, unmindful of distance and time and wearying separation, his love had been true to him. He found his sweetheart of olden days, a lovely woman now, still trusting and true. They were married, and on account of his old wounds, the need which his father had of his help and care in managing his estates, and may we not add his own desire to spend some part of his life in the quiet of home, he retired from the army when peace was declared. His castle was in the beautiful region of the Riesen Gebirge, and on the death of his father, some years ago, he became the head of his family. An old Confederate comrade visited him on his pressing invitation, a short time ago, and, driving up to the castle, saw floating from the turret the German flag, while the other bore bravely towards the heavens the battle-scarred flag of the Confederacy. Von Boreke wore amid the dozen decorations that covered the breast of his uniform, and right next to the Iron Cross, the badge of the army of Northern Virginia, and it was to meet our "Southern Guest" that all the notables were invited. His heart still beats warmly for the cause and for the people for whom he fought so bravely and shed his blood these twenty years ago."

CAR WHEELS FROM GERMANY.

The steamship Vaterland brought to Philadelphia last week from Antwerp thirteen car loads of steel-tired car wheels manufactured at Essex, Germany, by the celebrated gunmaker, Krupp. The steel tires have been commonly in use in the United States but not the entire wheels, which are different from those used here, having spokes and rims similar to a wagon wheel, but heavier in construction. The goods are in bond awaiting withdrawal by the owners.

The Man Who Grew.

One day last week a Detroit mechanic was going down Michigan avenue, and became favorably impressed with a pair of pants hanging in front of a cheap clothing store. The price was low, the goods seemed all right, and he made up his mind to purchase.

"I gif you de word of Andrew Shackson dot dose pants are shust like iron," said the dealer. "I warrants dem ebery dime."

After three or four days' wear the purchaser found the bottoms of the pants crawling towards his knees. It was a sad case of shrinkage, and he went back to the store and said: "You swindled me on those pants. See how they have shrunk!"

The dealer looked him all over, felt his head, pulled on his pants, and finally said:

"I shall gif you one thousand dollars a month if you will travel with me."

"How—what?"

"You are shust growing right up at the rate of two inches a day, and I dakes you aroundt the country on exhibition. Dose pants are shust as long as efer, but you haf grown outt of dem."

"I don't believe it!" shouted the man. "I am forty years old, and quit growing long ago."

"I gif you de word of Andrew Shackson dot you was growing."

"I don't care whose word you give I say these pants have shrunk nearly a foot!"

"Has de top of dose pants shrunk down ary?" softly asked the dealer.

"Why, no."

"Shouldn't de vaistband shrik down shust as deek as dose bottoms should shrik up? If it's in de cloth one part should shrik like de oder eh? When I sold you dot elegant pair of pants for tree dollar I don't suppose you was growing so fast or I shall haf put zam straps on de bottoms."

"Well, I don't like this way of doing business," said the purchaser.

"Shust like me. I sells such elegant pants as dose to a man, and he grows outt of dem, damages my trade. You haf damaged five hooundred dollar, but I haf low rent, pays cash for mein goods, and make you dis fifty cent tie for five cents."

The man walked out to the curb stone, and turning around, shook his fist and said:

"You are a liar and cheat, and I'll dare you out here!"

"Such ding sink deep into my heart," signed the dealer, as he took down his pipe. "I dinks I sells outt dis peensness and beddles some vases aroundt. Den when I sells to somebody it makes no difference how much dey grow."—Detroit Free Press.

A MOVE TO CAPTURE IRISH VOTES.

—The Irish Republican National League is in session here to arrange for campaign work in the interest of the Republican party during the coming presidential canvass. It was decided to maintain headquarters in Chicago, New York and Washington. Speakers sent out by the league will be urged to attack the free trade theory, as the surest means of alienating Irish votes from the Democratic party, on the ground that free trade is an English measure. Twenty-three States were represented at the session. J. Curran Keagan, of Colorado, was elected general secretary.

The United States Senate is against free ships. Twenty Democrats voted for them, but three Democrats and twenty-eight Republicans said no. This, too, in the face of facts that are an eternal shame to the country and an eternal condemnation to the party in power. American shipping has almost disappeared from the high seas. Forty years ago our sails whitened every ocean and bay and inlet. Republicanism has done that for the country and now let it die. Senator Vance made a vigorous speech in favor of free ships.—Wil. Star.

The greatest oleomargarine fraud yet perpetrated is the labeling the buckets with a ferocious billy goat to indicate genuine butter.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE STRAWBERRY INDUSTRY.—A new industry for Charlotte is the shipment of strawberries and the magnitude which it has already attained is something surprising. Every afternoon for several days past, the pavement in front of the express office has been piled with crates waiting shipment. Most of these strawberries are shipped to Richmond where they are sold at 35 cents per quart. They retail here at 8 cents per quart. The strawberries are raised on farms adjoining the city, their cultivation hitherto having been mostly confined to the gardens about the city. Messrs. Lyles and Caldwell are the two most extensive growers and they say that they have realized handsome profits from their venture. It is predicted that within two years from now the whole country around Charlotte will be one big strawberry garden.—Char. Obs.
