Two Pictures of Cophia Pat.

Greensboro Patriot.

Just before leaving Washington last week Pat Winston contracted with Puck's man for two cartoons of himself. One picture represents Winston's reception into the republican party; Keogh playing on the trombone, Wheeler on the bass violin, Humphrey beating the drum, Ball on the flute and O'Hara the bones, the whole Republican band celebrating the grand entrance of Winston with most extravagant demonstrations of delight, accompanied with the loudest and sweetest strains of music by the band.

Second picture: Winston in the form of a poor, scalded rat, sneaking up to the Republican corn crib. In the door sits Boyd with a Gatling gun; near him sits Keogh whispering "keep cool and don't shoot until you are certain that you will get him."

These pictures, Winston says, represent Winston's status in the Republican party. York and his mule has been left out purposely.

Down Come Blaine and Logan.

The Big Fifth Avenue Banner Falls and Puts Out All the Electric Lights.

New York Sun.

After Mr. B. F. John had sent out his printed letters begging all still loyal Republicans to chip in to the Blaine campaign fund he ordered a stout wire to be stretched from the roof of the Republican national headquarters at 242 Fifth Avenue diagonally across the avenue to the third story of the big apartment on the corner of Twenty-eighth street and rigged thereon a big Blaine and Logan banner. The banner had to be put up sideways, because the owner of the house opposite the headquarters wouldn't lend his roof.

At 8:35 last night a sudden gust of wind slapped the Republican candidates in the face, pulled the iron fastening of the banner out of the apartment house wall, and brought things down with a crash on the electric light wires that cross the street. Mr. B. F. Jones' wires cut half way through the electric line. The cut wire sputtered like a blue light for an instant, and then all the tall globes burned in the avenue from Madison square up to Forty-second street went out with a puff, and left the street nearly pitch dark.

"Gosh," said a bystander as he dodged to escape the tumbling network, "that's the third time that banner's tumbled since it was put up. It don't seem to catch on worth a cent."

The engineer in the electric light supply station on West Twenty-fifth street fooled with his dynamos till midnight, trying to make them work right, and then sent out an inspector to find out what the matter was. He found out after midnight that the wires couldn't be fixed till morning. Meantime policemen did patrol duty in the dark, and pedestrians couldn't make out any of the house numbers.

Kissed the Wrong Girl.

Lancaster Ledger.

On one of the seats in a railway train was a married lady with a little daughter; opposite, facing them, was another child, a son, and a colored lady and a baby. The mother of these children was a beautiful matron with sparkling eyes, exuberant health and vivacious spirits. Near her sat a young lieutenant, dressed to kill and seeking a victim.

By and by the train approached a tunnel. The lieutenant leaned over and whispered something in the lady's ear. For the understanding properly of this narrative we must tell the reader what was whispered and what was the reply.

"I mean to kiss you when we get into the tunnel," whispered the lieutenant.

"It will be dark—who will see it?" replied the lady.

Into earth's bowels—into the tunnel—ran the train. Lady and colored nurse quickly changed seats; gay lieutenant threw his arms around the lady's neck, pressed her cheek to his, and fast and furiously kissed her on her lips. In a few minutes the train came out into broad daylight. White lady looked amazed; colored lady bashful, blushing; gay lieutenant befooled.

"Jane," said the white lady, "what have you been doing?"

"Nothing," responded the colored lady.

"Yes, you have," said the white lady, not in an undertone, but in a voice that attracted the attention of all the car. "See how your collar is rumpled and bonnet smashed?"

Jane's colored beauty, hung her head a moment, the observed of all observers, and then turning round to the lieutenant replied.

"This man kissed me in the tunnel."

Loud and long was the laugh that followed among the passengers.

MR. BLAINE AND THE MOB.—The Louisville (Ky.) Post of Monday last says: "The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette reproduces in the editorial columns the worst part of the filthy scandals against Cleveland. The Post is in possession of facts in regard to Mr. Blaine's conduct while school teacher in Kentucky, of the mob that threatened him, and of his submission to avoid being lynched. If the Republicans continue this mode of making war, it will be interesting to Mr. Blaine and his friends. A word to the wise is sufficient."

Wilkes County.

From the Charlotte Observer. WILKESBORO, July 28.

Politics is getting warmed up. Dr. York has opened the campaign in this county; has made two speeches. He was met at Trap Hill last Saturday, 26th inst., by Col. W. H. J. Cowles, who handled the Doctor with gloves off. Col. Cowles is a fine speaker, and if Dr. York ever got a whipping in his life Col. Cowles gave it to him last Saturday. A large crowd was present and enjoyed the whipping lugely. Dr. York says he will meet Gen. Seales at every appointment if his "leete mule" can carry him. He who will never remember riding his little mule to Raleigh as Governor of North Carolina. Old tried and true Republicans look upon Dr. York's election as an impossibility. Dr. York is known as the "one armed" candidate for Governor, having said when a Democrat that if ever he left the Democratic party his right arm might be taken off. York cannot carry the negro vote. Often has he said that were he elected for any office by one vote, and he knew that vote was a stinking negro vote, he would not have the office. No wonder the negroes can't swallow him.

She Forgets Something.

A Simple Acknowledgement might have Saved Her Seat.

Boston Globe.

The following incident took place recently on a Massachusetts railroad not many miles from Boston. Several ladies entered the car at one of the many stopping places and all obtained seats except one. A middle-aged, well dressed gentleman, who looked like he might be a bank president (not in an invidious sense) arose and politely offered the latter his seat. The lady (?) dropped into it without so much as an inclination of her head or a simple "thank you." The gentleman was evidently indignant. He gazed at the lady a moment and then stepping up to her said: "I beg your pardon," pointing at the same time to the back of his seat as if he had left something in it. The lady arose and the gentleman coolly dropped into the seat, took out his paper and commenced to read. A titter ran around the car, and it was the unanimous opinion of the lookers-on that the lady had been treated no worse than she deserved. She remained standing for some time in evident embarrassment, but nobody offered her a seat, and at the next station she moved into another car.

Blaine claims credit for the Republican party and high taxes for all the progress we have made since the war. It seems to us he should take the credit as it runs. What does he say about the three hundred millions spent on a navy that is worthless; about the millions stolen by the whiskey ring; by the credit Mobilier; by the Indian ring; by the star routers; what about the corruption in the army where army officers have brought discredit on the uniform by their frauds as illustrated by Howgate and Swain; what about the wanton squandering of immense domains of public lands on thievish corporations which had bribed Congressmen to deal fairly by the people, whose servants they were; what about the profligacy that vitiates the air of all the departments at Washington? He should take the credit with the good. But the truth is the country has progressed despite its immoralities; despite its corruptions; despite its excesses; despite its heavy burdens laid upon our prosperity by the hand of the radical party. We have been borne down by the weight of these burdens. Relieve the people of them and give them a fair chance and we will prosper indeed.—News & Observer.

From reliable authority the Register learns that typhoid fever prevails to a great extent along the track of the cyclone which passed through Fairfield county last spring. Several deaths have occurred in families attacked by the fever, and physicians have noted it as a singular fact that a majority of the typhoid fever cases are confined to the stretch of country visited by the cyclone.

It is said that there is to be a general stoppage of the cotton spindles in New England for at least one month. There is too much production and not enough consumption. There is not enough consumption because the people are not prosperous. The people are not prosperous because of the heavy taxation to which they are subjected. Think of it, the government raises three hundred millions of dollars where two hundred millions would answer the purpose. It takes from the people $100,000,000 each year more than the people ought to pay because the government have no use for it. If it is raised it will be squandered. It is being raised. The people pay it out of their pockets. It oppresses them and destroys their substance. Not only have the Northern cotton mills shut down, but other lines of industry as well. If something is not done we will have a fearful winter. The matter is in the hands of the people. They must decide.—News & Observer.

Perhaps the hottest region on the earth is the Persian Gulf, where little or no rain falls. At Bahrin, the arid shore has no fresh water; yet a comparatively numerous population contrive to live there, thanks to the copious springs which burst from the bottom of the sea. The fresh water is got by diving. The diver sitting in his boat, winds a great goatskin bag around his left arm, the hand grasping its mouth; then he takes in his right hand a heavy stone, to which is attached a strong line, and quickly reaches the bottom. Instantly opening the bag over the strong jet of fresh water, he springs upon the ascending current, at the same time closing the bag, and is helped up board. The stone is then heaved up, and the diver, after taking breath plunges in again. The source of these submarine springs is thought to be in the green fields of Osman, some five or six hundred miles distant.

COOKING A TROUT WHILE ON THE HOOK.—In the woods, near the mountain crest, is a warm lake a hundred feet across; and three miles from it, down below all the terraces, near the Gardner river, a river of scalding water rushes like a mill race from beneath a ledge of rocks, and flowing a few hundred yards, falls into the Gardner. Here it is that one may catch a trout in the cold stream, and without moving a step swing him, still wriggling on the hook into the hot river and boil him. I have seen it myself, and have tasted the fish so cooked; but as epicures say that a trout boiled is a trout spoiled, and as these were cooked in boiling sulphur water, I cannot avoid admitting that the morsel was not very palatable.—Ashley W. Cole, in the Manhattan for August.

"Five cents doubled thirty-five times would pay the National debt.—Rochester Democrat. Here's the first nickel; now let the process of doubling go right on."—Geness Advertiser. And here's a dime—our share. At this rate we shall soon have the debt wiped out.—Lyons Republican. And we chip in twenty cents. Let the good work go on.—Yonkers Gazette. You fellows think you are doing a big thing, no doubt, but we are going to wait for the thirty-fifth chance. Nothing small about us.—Printers' Weekly Gazette.

A correspondent at White Sulphur Springs writing to a Washington paper says: "There are people here who came in May and who will remain for the rest of the season. The climate is delicious, and the mountain scenery picturesque and grand, while the fare is far beyond the average. The cluster of cottages known as Paradise Row are overflowing with young ladies, as are all the other cottages and the grand hotel, who in freshness and loveliness resemble Paris."

Washington, August 2.—Representative Culbertson, of Kentucky, who made an attempt to commit suicide at the National Hotel in this city day before yesterday, and was taken to Providence hospital, is much better this afternoon, and unless some unforeseen complication should occur is regarded as out of danger.

London, August 1.—It is reported from Cardiff that a man had died of cholera on board the French steamer Gravelle, from Marseilles, which is lying at anchor in Penarth Roads. The body was thrown overboard. Another man aboard the ship is very ill.
