A TALE OF TWO CRUTCHES.
 A Well Known Citizen of Atlanta Lays Down his Crutches.
 I have only a few words to say, which are to state that I have been confined to my bed for two months with what was called Nervous Rheumatism, or Statics. I was only enabled to hobble about occasionally by the use of crutches, and in this condition I commenced to study the use of my crutches and attend to business. I had previously used all well recommended medicines without relief. It has been over two months since using B. B. B., and I consider myself a permanently cured man.

FRIGHTFUL NASAL CATARRH.
Pieces of Bone.
 For four years I have been afflicted with a very troublesome catarrh of the head. So terrible has its nature been that when I blew my nose small pieces of bones would frequently come out of my mouth and nose. The discharge was copious and at times exceedingly offensive. My blood became so impregnated with my general health was greatly impaired, with poor appetite and worse digestion.
 Numerous medicines were used without relief, until I began the use of B. B. B., and three bottles acted almost like magic. Since then every day my nose has returned, and I feel as if my nose were quite restored to health. I am an old citizen of Atlanta, and refer to almost any living on Butler street, and more particularly to Dr. L. M. Gilliam, who knows of my case.
 Mrs. ELIZABETH KNOTT.
 We will mail on application to anyone interested in blood and skin diseases, Scrofula, Rheumatism, Kidney Troubles, etc., woodruff, full and unquestionable testimony of cures effected by the use of B. B. B., the quickest Blood Purifier ever known. Large bottles $1.00 or six for $5.00. Sold by all Druggists, or prepared on receipt of price.

A Mother's Longings.
 Last night I wanted my boy. I was sitting alone in my dressing room, thinking the "long ago," while preparing to retire. The garments of the day, along with its pleasures and perplexities, had been laid aside, and, as is my wont, I was idly soothing head and heart by a gentle movement of the brush through my disarranged hair. This is one of my favorite times for thinking, and many's the castle that has been planned and built, and many the ghosts of their rosy past that have come in their gray-clad robes before me, while seated on my rocker, brushing and musing, dreaming and brushing. Last night as I thought of my boy, and looked up at his picture, an intense longing came over me to hold him once more in my arms. I wanted to press his cheek to mine, to clasp his hand, to kiss his lips and smooth his bonnie brown hair. I wanted to feel him with these warm hands of mine. I wanted to hear his merry voice and look into his beautiful eyes. I must cuddle him up close to my heart as I used to when my own little baby, while I prayed over him as Hannah did over Samuel. But how could I satisfy hungry, aching heart? For more than three years the blue violets and the green grass had hidden him from my sight, and still my heart was yearning for a touch of his, a word from him, a look from those dear eyes. More than three years since he had said, "Mama, I want to go home," and then in a little while whispered, "I'm almost home," and soon, oh how soon, pointed upward, smiled, and was in his home. Ah, too well I remember this sad parting, and yet last night I felt that I could not sleep without an embrace. Suddenly a thought came to me, making me pause in my passionate longing and bringing a glow to my cold heart. Hastily I unlocked a drawer, containing treasure sacred to the buried past, and took from it a Bible, in which was written: "For my boy on his fifteenth birthday." In it lay a lock of golden-brown hair, which had rested on the head of him I loved. It was a part of himself. I took it eagerly, looked upon it, and he was before me. I pressed it to my cheek and to my lips, caressed it with my fingers, while tears of satisfaction rolled from my eyes; then quiet and soothed, I tenderly replaced the tress of my darling in the casket from which he had taken "the pearl of great price," and which had enabled him to say "I'm home" while dying in his early manhood: "For me to live is Christ, to die is gain."—Salie.

A Battle With a Turtle.
 A New York traveling salesman named Fry stopped for a few days at a farmhouse, near Start pond, one of the 250 mountain lakes of Wayne county, Penn. One day he rowed out to the middle of the pond to fish for pickerel. Suddenly he felt a strong tug at his line, and shortly afterward a large snapping turtle came "slowly to the surface by the side of the boat. When the turtle saw the fisherman it turned to dive down again, and Fry grabbed it by the tail. With great difficulty he lifted it into the boat. His hook was fastened to it under the turtle's fore-shoulder, it having accidentally hooked itself. The turtle no sooner found itself a prisoner in the boat than it turned on Fry. Raising on all fours, it shot out its great head, and advanced with open jaws upon the fisherman. He retreated to the bow of the boat, and the turtle followed him. Fry then jumped over the turtle and ran to the stern. The turtle chased him and would not permit him to rest a second in any one spot, but kept him jumping and running from one end of the boat to another. Fry had nothing to defend himself with, as the paddle with which the boat was propelled he had used in aiding him in getting the turtle into the boat, and he had thoughtlessly let it lie in the water, and it had drifted out of reach. Fry shouted lustily for help. The wife of the farmer with whom he was stopping was the only one at home, and she heard the cries, and put out in a leaky flat-bottomed boat to his rescue.
 By the time she reached his boat hers had several inches of water in it, and it was entirely out of the question for it to be used in safety to carry them back to the shore. Fry's boat was anchored by a large stone tied to the end of a long rope. The farmer's wife jumped into his boat and began pulling up the anchor with the intention of dropping it on the turtle. Before the anchor reached the surface it slipped from the noose in the rope and sank to the bottom. The turtle had kept up its chase of Fry, but, on seeing the woman in the boat, turned his attention to her. As it approached her she struck at it with the rope. It caught the rope in its mouth, and as a snapping turtle never releases its hold on anything it seizes with its mouth, even if the head is severed from the body, the turtle was secured. The boat was paddled ashore, and the turtle dragged out on the land by the rope. Its head was soon afterward chopped from its body with an axe.
 The next evening Fry took a train for New York. He carried the head of the turtle by a piece of the rope which was still held in the mouth. The head had been separated from the body over thirty hours, but was still alive, the eyes rolling and glaring fiercely whenever any one approached it. The turtle was the largest one ever seen in the region, its weight being forty-seven pounds, the head alone weighing nearly ten.—New York Sun.

Gathering Rubber in Brazil.
 "The rubber tree thrives only on soil which is annually overflowed to a depth of three or more feet, and prefers the lowest and most recent river deposit. The rubber gatherers are temporary squatters, and their usual dwelling is a hut with low roof of palms, beneath one end of which there is a raised floor or frame-work of lath, one or two yards from the ground, to which the occupants retreat at high water."
 The following description of the process of gathering rubber was written by Mr. Franz Keller: "Narrow paths lead from the gatherer's hut through dense underwood to each separate tree, and as soon as the dry season sets in he betakes himself with his hatchet to the trees to cut little holes in the bark. The milk-white sap immediately begins to exude into pieces of bamboo tied below and having their ends in little clay cups set under the gashes to prevent its trickling down the stem. He travels thus from tree to tree. On the return visit he pours the contents of the bamboos into a large earthen vessel provided with straps, which he empties at home into a large turtle shell. Without delay he sets to work to coagulate it with smoke of palm nuts, and pours a little of the milk evenly on a light wooden shovel, which he thrusts into the thick smoke issuing from the little narrow chimney made by the neck of an earthen bottle. He moves the shovel rapidly times and fro with great regularity, when the milk is seen to consolidate and to take a grayish-yellow tinge.
 "Thus he puts layer upon layer, until at last the rubber on both sides of the wood has reached a thickness of two or three centimetres. Cutting it one side, he takes it off the shovel and hangs it in the sun to dry. A good workman can thus prepare five or six pounds of solid rubber in an hour. From its initial color of clear silver gray it turns shortly into a yellow, and finally becomes the well-known dark brown of the rubber such as exported. The more uniform the denser, and freer of bubbles the whole mass is, the higher price it brings. Almost double the value is obtained for the first-rate article over that of the most inferior quality, which is nothing but the drops collected at the foot of the trees."
 The Louisville Ky., Exposition men are after Waterson, the editor of the Courier Journal, for some unasked for work—thus;
 It really seems impossible for Waterson to divest himself of the idea that he is Louisville, that he Kentucky, that he is the South and that he is the Democratic party. The blows from forty pile-drivers could not knock the conceit out of him, and we verily believe he will try to turn in his grave to see if the public are looking at him.

FURLOUGHED FOR ETERNITY.
 Alex. L. Jones, a veteran engineer who drew open his first throttle in the service of the Richmond & Danville Railroad thirty-one years ago, and who has since been continually in the service of that road, died night before last at his home in Greensboro. Mr. Jones had been sick but a few days, having made his last trip to Charlotte one week ago, and the news of his death comes with painful suddenness to his brother engineers and friends. The cause of his death was a carbuncle on the back of his neck. Mr. Jones was not only the veteran of the road, but he was perhaps the most popular man who drove an engine on the R. & D. He was a general favorite with all and he will be sadly missed.—Char. Ob.

The "Sun" Cholera Mixture.
 The New York Sun published forty years ago a prescription that became generally known as "The Sun Cholera Mixture." Of this the Journal of Commerce says:
 "Our contemporary never lent its name to a better article. We have seen it in constant use for nearly two score years, and found it to be the best remedy for looseness of the bowels ever yet devised. It is not to be mixed with liquor, and therefore will not be used as an alcoholic beverage."
 Here it is. Cut it out and use it in the family:
 Tinct. opii,
 Capsici,
 Rhei co.,
 Menth pip.,
 Campho.
 Mix the above in equal parts; dose, ten to twenty drops. In plain terms take equal parts tincture opium, red pepper, rhubarb, peppermint, and champhor, and mix them for use. In case of diarrhoea take a dose of ten to twenty drops in three or four teaspoonful of water.

Ladies' hats may be much cheaper this Spring than last season, but we notice that they come higher than ever.
 A gentleman who observed Johnnie carefully taking the census of a company assembled in the parlor awaiting a call to supper inquired: "What is the matter, Johnnie?" "Why," returned the urchin, with a troubled air, "here's nine of us, counting me, and mamma has gone and cut the two pies into quarters, and they only make eight pieces."
