TAPE WORM.

An eminent German scientist has recently discovered from a root extract, an antidote for Tape Worm.

It is pleasant to take and is not distressing to the patient, but is peculiarly sickening and stupefying to the Tape Worm, which loosens its hold of its victim and passes away in a natural and easy manner, entirely whole, with Head, and white still alive.

One physician has used this specific in over 400 cases, without a single failure to clear worm entire. Success guaranteed. No pay required until removed with Head. Send stamp for circular and terms.

New Orleans Letter.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 3, 1884.

Since my last work of making ready, both on the management of the Exposition and of the exhibitors, has advanced very materially. May I not add that the advancement must continue until the material is all in place, and my humble opinion is to the effect that the glorious sun will go down on the new born year of '85 e'er all is ready and the greatest Exposition ever known to the world's history may be pronounced complete.

What is likely to be the practical result, if any, of this great outlay of time and money? The answer comes out of it; if so who will reap the rewards? The Times-Democrat, the leading journal of this city, in speaking of the result has this to say:

"Do the people of the Crescent City realize what all this rush and bustle of preparation means to them and theirs? This gathering of the nations at their doors; this pilgrimage of earth's great men; this universal congress of industry, art, science and music? Do we yet begin to appreciate what this wonderful national and international Exposition may result in to the material future of the United States, the South, and particularly to the State of Louisiana? Think what may be the effect upon the local circulating medium alone! Experts, trained in the experience of former great enterprises of the kind, at London, Paris, Vienna and Philadelphia, assert that, at a moderate estimate, 4,000,000 people will visit the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, at New Orleans, between Dec. 16 and May 31 next. * * *

"But our local money gain is a small matter when a broader view is taken of the results that must come indirectly to all Southern interests through the enterprise. Here will gather thousands of Northern and foreign capitalists, representing sections and countries where money investments pay a return of only 2 or 3 per cent. per annum, and who for the first time will realize that the South, with its almost fabulous wealth of land, forests and minerals; with untold possibilities for prosperous agricultures and industry; with a strong, industrious and intelligent people, presents the greatest attractions to legitimate investors ever offered on the face of this planet.

"Together with such considerations will also appear the opportunities offered by Louisiana and other Southern States for successful emigrations from the crowded States of Europe. Able and representative men from all parts of the Old World will be here to make a special study of that question in its relations to the New South, and if like attention is bestowed upon it by our own people the results should be important and apparent within two years. * * * With this in view it should not be necessary to even hint to the people of the Crescent City of the South that the coming Exposition presents opportunities never before enjoyed for the promotion of our common interests, for the enlightenment of capital as to our resources; for the cultivation of a sensible feeling of brotherhood with our fellow citizens of all States of the Union, and for a better understanding of the great dignity we possess in being free citizens of a great and glorious nation. It is not to be doubted that the people, and all of them, here and elsewhere, will heartily approve the occasion."

Granting that this flattering aspect of the situation be true so far as Louisiana is concerned, will the results extend beyond the immediate locality; or in other words, will there be any perceptible practical results in North Carolina. I think so, for several reasons: First, because of the prominent position some of our citizens have taken in the management, and secondly, because of the attractiveness and completeness of the State's exhibit of resources. Dr. C. W. Dabney, Jr., is the special commissioner of State exhibits, and has the entire control of the Government and States' buildings. He is necessarily thrown in contact with all the leading men of the various States and territories and is in position to be of much service to North Carolina. He is a brainy man, and make his presence felt. His education, which was completed in Germany, enables him to converse freely with the representatives of that country. Mr. P. M. Wilson, one of the best writers in North Carolina, is Secretary to Dr. Dabney, and besides the potent pen he wields, his familiarity with the French language renders his services almost indispensable. With these two gentlemen, in high position, throwing their influence towards the Old North State, taken in conjunction with the State's magnificent showing of the products of her forests, fields, vineyards, mines and manufacturing industries, surely some of the good results must fall within her borders.

I shall not at this time describe what we have to show, and how it will be arranged, suffice it that thousands of her people will swell with pride when they behold her array. As the earnest endeavor of those in charge, to make North Carolina's display of such nature as will best serve to induce the more rapid development of her boundless resources, not so much by inviting capital from the North, as by stimulating her own people, and inducing the more valuable part of the English, French and German immigration to seek within her bounds legitimate investment.

I have seen in passing to and from the grounds some things which seem very timely and promising for the use of the saddle. The sight is a pleasing one. The trainer is perched on a Texas pony, while around him on very diminutive donkeys are from thirty to forty children between four and fourteen, in the greatest glee. The little ones are full of joy, and their delight is perceptible as the sound of their shouts of gladness is wafted on the evening breeze. The diminutive donkey is apparently oblivious to the surroundings, and spends about half the time in nibbling the green grass which grows in such profusion along the suburban streets. Another thing, not met with in other cities, is the provision for smokers on the street cars. Every third car is labeled "smoker." The others, "no smoking." Again, there are some very liberal people in the show business here. One of the greatest evidences of their liberality is gleaned from a modest street car advertisement that reads something like this: "A present to every visitor which exceeds the admission fee. Admission is only charged to avoid a crowded house." How considerate! It sounds so exclusive! New Orleans, however, cannot claim institutions of that nature as exclusively peculiar to herself.

Most of your readers have heard of Dr. Palmer. He occupies the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church. It is a handsome edifice and fronts on La Fayette Square—(so called, perhaps, because its centre is adorned by a statue of Ben. Franklin)—and is quite commodious. The inside finish is of the plainest character. All the seats are cushioned and are free. It is not the church structure, or choir, that attracts the vast audience which gathers there every Sunday. The lodestone is Dr. Palmer. He is called the Beecher of the South. Why, it is hard to imagine; for he is not sensational in the least, nor does he put on any airs or indulge in extravaganzas. His sermons are deep, learned and lengthy, but natural and interesting. He rarely talks less than forty-five minutes, generally longer—at least my experience has been under the latter head. While there are a great many churches here, and good preaching in them all, I am not of the opinion that they are ever so much crowded as to hang out the sign: "Standing room only." The truth of the matter is that Sunday is a fete day here. Last Sunday for instance, on coming out of church and approaching Canal Street, found both sides of that beautiful boulevard literally jammed for miles with English, French, Spanish, German, Mexican, Chinese, Japanese, Siamese and other people—and all seemed anxiously waiting for the approach of some interesting or wonderful thing. On inquiry I learned that Sell's Brothers mammoth two-wing circus was to parade, and open the season that evening. All of the theatres and drinking saloons are open Sunday; in fact, most artists of any reputation open their engagements on Sunday evening. I just know the good Scotch-Irish and Dutch settlements of Rowan would sit down on that kind work in their neighborhoods if the practice were to break bounds and begin to spread over the country.

T. K. B.

Beheaded by a Train.

Mr. S. Pemberton, a well known citizen of Anson county, met a frightful death yesterday, by being run over by the passing train on the Carolina Central road. The accident happened near Polkton. Capt D. K. F. Everitt was conductor of the train, which was speeding along towards Charlotte at a lively rate when the man was seen walking on the track ahead. The engineer supposed of course that the man would step off in due time, but as distance between man and engine began growing rapidly less and no indication was manifested on the part of the former of any intention of stepping aside, the engineer commenced pulling his whistle cord. The brakes were applied, but the train had scarcely slackened its speed before the man was under the wheels. The first sight that greeted the passengers' eyes as the train came to a stop, was the headless trunk of a man lying in the ditch a little distance back. The head was nowhere to be seen and indeed it became necessary to institute a search for it. One of the brakemen, in looking under the cars, found the head, and drawing it out carried it in his hands and laid it beside the body. The man was identified as Mr. S. Pemberton. His head was not crushed nor was his body mangled, and it was evident that he had been knocked down by the engine, falling with his neck across the rail and his head had been cut off as if with a knife. The opinion is given as a cause for Mr. Pemberton's persistency in remaining on the track, that he was intoxicated at the time. No blame can be traced to the train.—Charlotte Observer.

Poultry.

The cold weather has now effectually cut off the supply of insect food and unless the fowls are furnished with a proper substitute eggs will soon begin to become scarce, and as the holidays are approaching eggs will be in demand at good prices, so it will be well and wise to give the hens all the meat scraps, refuse bones—crushed fine.—One of the best egg diets we know of for this time of year is cracklings, treated in the following manner: Take a chunk about the size of a pint measure and put it in an iron pot and pour on six quarts of water, or better eight quarts and let it boil down to six quarts, when the cracklings will, by that time, have become pretty well dissolved; while it is boiling stir in corn meal and wheat middlings until it is so thick and dry you can hardly stir it; then remove it from the stove and let it cool. This used for the morning feed, and in connection with a miscellaneous diet of grains and green food, if the fowls are properly housed, will keep them laying the entire winter. Of course we take it for granted crushed oyster shells are where the birds can have free access to them. If you have no shed to strew the leaves in you can scatter them in the hen house, provided it is scrupulously clean, and scatter small grain therein. Fowls must have healthful exercise in winter, and this will afford the double purpose of giving it and teaches them to scratch for their living. If their combs should get touched with frost rub well with glycerine and alcohol—four ounces of glycerine to one of alcohol. Study the characteristics of your fowls, their wants, and if you take good care of your flocks rest assured they will return the compliment. Any one who keeps fowls and does not do so with profit need not lay the blame to the fowls. If you don't believe in keeping chickens, let the boys or even your daughters have a chance, and charge them for all the feed and let them sell all the eggs and surplus stock, and at the end of the year they will have a snug sum on the credit side of the ledger, besides the healthful recreation. A business spirit will be inculcated, and if the children can be taught to feel they have a personal interest in them, attractions are formed which will result in manifold good. Farmers, be more liberal in this respect and encourage the children with their pets and poultry, and you will find they will not be so anxious to leave the farm as soon as they get along in their teens. In keeping poultry remember there is nothing that will show neglect quicker, while for the amount of labor and time spent—nothing on the farm will prove as profitable as the fowls.

TELEPHONING EXTRAORDINARY.—The most remarkable piece of telephoning yet attempted has been just accomplished by the engineers of the International Bell Telephone Company, who successfully carried out an experiment by which they were enabled to hold a conversation between St. Petersburg and Bologne, a distance of 2465 miles. Blake transmitting and Bell receiving instruments were used, and a conversation was kept up notwithstanding a rather high induction. The experiments were carried on during the night, when the telegraph lines were not at work. The Russian engineers of this company are so confident of further success that they hope shortly to be able to converse with ease at a distance of 4665 miles; but to accomplish this astonishing feat they must combine all the conditions favorable for the transmission of telephonic sounds. If it is found possible to hold audible conversation at such extraordinary distances, it is possible that this fact will be speedily improved upon, and we shall be enabled to converse freely between London and New York, and by and by between London and the antipodes.—Chambers' Journal.

The Philadelphia Times remarks that "apparently Governor Cleveland is not only Governor of New York but also of himself." This is a fact. Gov. Cleveland's utterances during the campaign, and since the election, show him to be a remarkably level headed man.—16.
