D. A. ATWELL.

As we ascertain items relative to the trade interests of Salisbury, we find the hardware businees in a thriving condition, and we here make more or less detailed mention of a house that is in every way representative-the house of D. A. Atwell. The gentleman in question is a native of of Rowan couny, and for the past twelve or thirteen ars he has been identified with his present lines of business. Going back of this record, we find that he began business life as long ago as 1857, when he became a clerk with J. C. Hargrave at Deep Well. In March 1862, Mr. Atwell enlisted as a volunteer in the Confederate service, and became Orderly Sergeant in the 42d N. C. He remained in active service until the surrender (in fact until some time after) "smoothed his wrinkled front," he, as Pinafore says, "returned to the seclusion which the country grants." Since he war Salisbury has been his home. When Mr. Atwell established his present business it was as a new enterprise, and he has been untiring in his efforts to advance it to its present place in the front rank of the town's mercantile interests .- What success has attended his efforts in this direction is best evidenced by his trade at present, a trade that reaches throughout a
