The Collectorship.

Our information through private channels from Washington City is that the collectorship of this district has been settled in favor of Hon. C. Dowd, of Charlotte. A meeting of the North Carolina delegation in Congress was held, as we are informed, some days ago, and the offices were parceled out among the different Congressmen. The collectorship of this district was given to Senator Vance, that of the fourth district to Senator Ransom, and the two are to agree upon the collector of the fifth. Senator Vance, as we have it, has decided to recommend the appointment of Maj. Dowd, and it is conceded that whomsoever he may recommend the President will appoint. From the same source from which we have the above it is learned that Senator Vance and Representative Henderson, are agreed that the office of the collector shall be retained at Statesville, and if this is done we will not have been hurt much after all.—Statesville Landmark.

This is probably not altogether correct. There is a report here that Mr. Sam. Tate, of Morganton, is to be collector. Announcements are yet premature.

The Judgeship.

Iredell is in one of the three new judicial districts. Judge Avery, of Burke, late of this district, is in the new tenth and Solicitor Adams is about moving to Buncombe, which is in the new twelfth district. This will render it necessary for the Governor to appoint both a judge and a solicitor for this (the new eighth) district, which will continue in office until the next regular election. The Hickory Carolinian of last week says "a petition was signed by the members of the Catawba bar this week, asking Gov. Seales to appoint Hon. R. F. Armfield judge in the new circuit." We understand that Col. Armfield is not a candidate for the judgeship and does not at all desire it. Indeed, he is supporting Maj. Harvey Bingham, of this place, for the position, and is very heartily enlisted in his behalf. Other names mentioned in this connection are those of Maj. W. J. Montgomery, of Concord, and Mr. M. H. Pinnix of Lexington. The names that one hears connected with the solicitorship are those of Messrs. Benj. F. Long of Statesville, L. H. Clement and Lee S. Overman of Salisbury.—Statesville Landmark.

The Old Rebel Yell.

The New York Times' Washington correspondent describing at length the scene and incidents of Inauguration Day, has the following pleasant reference to the Southern soldiers who marched in procession by the reviewing stand occupied by the President, ex-President and others, in front of the White House. He had just described the passage of the Grand Army of the Republic, and other Northern troops, and then proceeded to introduce those from the South in the following terms:

"A familiar sound floats down the avenue. It is neither a shout nor a lusty cheer. It comes not from the region of the lungs, but from the upper part of the month. Shad-bellied Southerners can produce it; a Northerner never. It is known as the rebel yell. It is one of the shrillest sounds of which a human being is capable. It is penetrating, and under some circumstances, a generation ago, it may have been positively appalling. There is nothing in it to-day. Its meaning is simply that the Southerner knows no other noise that will express his sympathies. Its occasion becomes apparent. The contributions of Southern States towards the celebration of this Democratic event are coming along. They are detachments of gayly uniformed men, who have evidently had little practice at marching of late years. At their head is the soldierly figure of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. He rides like a centaur. He is a favorite of Northerners who know him, and he is regarded with positive affection by the Southerners, who remember him as a dashing cavalier. He is cheered all along the avenue, and the occupants of the grand stand join in the applause. Close upon him comes the Virginia militia, with the Richmond State Guards, the St. John's Academy Cadets, and several colored companies as special features. The New Jersey militia is also massed in this Third Division. The Marylanders tramp by to the music of 'Maryland, My Maryland,' the Fifth Regiment of Baltimore, one of the 'crack' organizations of the country, in advance. The Busch Guards, of Missouri, the Hornets' Nest Riflemen, of Charlotte, N. C., and a Georgia battalion are among the Southern troops in this division."

Question:—What is Socialism? Answer: Socialism is spending what you have, and then wanting half of what some other fellow has.

For the Watchman. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

A dozen years ago this organization did not exist. Now in the United States it numbers more than one hundred and twenty-five thousand wives, mothers and sisters, of the best women of the land, as one of the leaders said at their convention, "We are the wives of the best men in this country." Twelve years ago, the 23d of December last, the women of a certain village were driven to desperation by the inroads the saloons were making on their homes. Husbands, brothers and sons were hastening to drunkards' graves. Families were compelled to give up their almost palatial homes to the saloon-keeper! What could be done? Mother-love was aroused to its utmost exertion; and what will not a mother do when her loved ones are in danger. A few women met to pray, and very soon, without previous arrangement they quietly fell in line and marched to the saloons, there to beg the saloon-keeper to find some better employment, and to pray that the saloons be closed. It is useless to attempt to describe the effect. The streets were quiet, and there was the hush of a funeral. Not in one village alone, but all over the North and West, was this suppressed feeling, which burst out like an overcharge of electricity against the saloons, and in thousands of villages prayers went up to God for deliverance: For fifty days the revival lasted—saloons were closed, saloon-keepers were converted and found respectable employment. Men who before sold beer sold bread, and the pitched battle between the homes and the saloons resulted in a victory for the homes for the time.

The whole crusade is faithfully told in T. S. Arthur's "Woman to the Rescue." People said that it was "wild-fire," that it was a "woman's whim"; but one of the ablest men of the day said: "It is an angel's whim—it is God's whim." This "panic," as it is called, led the Christian women to see that there must be a systematic effort against the rum traffic in defence of their loved ones, hence originated the "Woman's Christian Temperance Union," called the "sober second thought" of the crusade. With more than eleven years' growth the organization has extended into all our States and Territories, and is now bidding fair to belt the globe with Unions. The object of all this work is to fortify and strengthen the homes against the inroads of the enemy; to find where the temptations lie and guard against them; to get as nearly as possible at the root of the matter. Not only in the home but also in the school do we seek to fortify against king alcohol. The object is to have the pupils taught the effect of alcohol upon the system, so that being forewarned they shall be soothed. There are many lines of work—too numerous to mention here—arranged in thirty-eight departments. In our own State this organization has existed for two or three years. The work is progressing slowly but surely, and ere long there will be in the ranks of the White Ribbon army a goodly number of Carolina's faithful women.

The children are being gathered in Bands of Hope and trained in the way of temperance before they are caught by the snares of the tempter. The members of our Union aren't restless, uneasy office seekers, but they are Christian women who, realizing that the strength of the country depends upon the strength of the family, have banded themselves together for God and Home and Native Land.

Yours for the cause,
MARY C. WOODY,
New Garden, N. C.

A West Virginia Tragedy.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., March 11.—A frightful tragedy is reported from Wise county. Martha Reynolds, the belle of her neighborhood, engaged herself to Charles Henton and Bud Mitchell. She was unable to tell which she preferred. Understanding this state of affairs Henton persuaded her to elope with him. They were quietly married and returned to the bride's home. That night they had an old fashioned dance and all the neighbors were invited. Bud Mitchell insulted the bride and reproached her for her fickleness, finally slapping her. The husband rushed in and gave Mitchell a beating. The next night Henton and his wife went to church and did not return home. In the morning their dead and mangled bodies were found by the roadside. Mitchell is missing, and there is no doubt that he is the murderer.

Some one has said that the man who is curious to see how the world could get along without him can find out by sticking a cambric needle into a mill-pond and then withdrawing it and looking at the hole.

The Cost of the White House.

Washington Letter in Cleveland Leader.

Most people believe that the $50,000 a year which the President gets as his salary is the sum total. This is a mistake. The estimate of the amount which Congress is to appropriate this year lies before me, open at the page relating to the President, I see that $36,064 is asked for him in addition to his salary of $50,000 to pay the salaries of subordinates and clerks. His private secretary is paid $3,250, his assistant private secretary $3,250, his stenographer $1,800, five messengers each $1,200, a steward $1,800, two door keepers who each get $1,200, four other clerks at good salaries, one telegraph operator, two ushers getting $1,200 and $1,400, a night usher getting $1,400, a watchman gets $900 and a man to take care of the fires who receives $864 a year. In addition to this there is a set down $8,000 for incidental expenses, such as stationery, carpets and the care of the Presidential stables. And further on, under another heading, there is a demand for nearly $40,000 more. Of this, $12,500 is for repairs and refurbishing the White House; $2,500 is for fuel, $4,000 is for the green house and $15,000 is for gas matches and the stable. The White House, all told, costs the country in connection with the President, considerably over $125,000 a year.

The First National Cabinet.

Mr. Arthur's Cabinet was sectional. It had not from beginning to end one Southern member. It was made up entirely of Northern men, and though the party to which it belonged claimed and still claims as a matter of right that half of the Southern States are republican, not a single Republican from south of the Ohio River found a place in it. The claim that the West will long dwell over the fact that Mr. Cleveland took but one man from this section will not be borne out. The West is not sectional except as the North is sectional. Events have made two great sections in this Republic—the North and the South. Mr. Cleveland has done something towards wiping out these imaginary lines by taking his Cabinet from the nation at large. It is the first national Cabinet since the war. If we credit the Republican party with restoring the Union we must at the same time confess that it took the Democratic party to prove that it was restored by inaugurating a national and at a sectional government.—Chicago Herald, Ind.

An Application that was Refused.

A Washington correspondent to the Philadelphia Record tells the following: I think I have a new Lincoln-Stanton story. At least the congressman who told it spoke as though he had just discovered the document which is its basis. It was an application for a chaplaincy in the army. A. Lincoln. "Dear Mr. Stanton: He is not a preacher. E. M. Stanton." Three or four months elapse, evidently, and then we have: "Dear Stanton: He is now. A. Lincoln." "Dear Mr. Lincoln: But there is no vacancy. E. M. Stanton." "Dear Stanton: Appoint him a chaplain-at-large. A. Lincoln." "Dear Mr. Lincoln: There is no warrant of law for that. E. M. Stanton." "Dear Stanton: Appoint him anyhow. A. Lincoln." "Dear Mr. Lincoln: I will not. E. M. Stanton." And he didn't. But apparently he told the applicant that he could leave his application on file, for there it is among the dry old documents.

Some of the applications in the departments at Washington are gotten up in style. One man wanting a place in the department of justice sent in his application Tuesday, accompanied by two ledgers of about 150 pages each bound in antique style, which were filled with endorsements and all sorts of recommendations. Others presented their credentials in pamphlet form and some handsomely bound, with the name of the applicant and place wanted in gilt letters on the back—Char. Ob.

If the new government will reflect one moment these fine fellows can't come in. They are too fine. They have no expectation or intention of doing honest work themselves, but only mean to fill the places sought in a stylish manner and let out the work to be done by "subs." That will be according to Washington city style.

The New Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

The selection of Mr. Charles S. Fairchild as his First Assistant Secretary in the Treasury is probably, the very best answer which Mr. Manning could give at present to any doubts which have been inspired by his political antecedents as to his fidelity to civil-service reform, and as to the principles on which he means to manage the treasury. Mr. Fairchild, who has not been in office since he held the State attorney generalship in 1876-77, is a man in every respect, political, personal and professional, of the very highest standing, a promoter of every good cause, a reformer through and through, and eminently qualified, both by attainments and experience, for the work of his new place in Washington. Mr. Manning would never have put Mr. Fairchild in it if he did not mean to purify the treasury and manage it on business principles.—N. Y. Evening Post, rep.

The Color Line to be Obliterated.
New York Times, (Ind. Rep.)
The new era upon which we have entered promises to put an end to the old antagonism, and is likely to result in the general acceptance of the doctrine that the freedmen are entitled to protection in their rights as citizens. Once this is recognized, there will come a division in the negro vote which will obliterate the color line, and this will soon put an end to the solid South. Political progress in this country is irresistibly in the direction as a line of party division, and on that alone can sectionalism be maintained. This movement has been checked and hindered in the past by the use of the Federal power as represented by officeholders to sustain a party organization in the Southern States. When this is withdrawn, and the people left to organize and act upon their own spontaneous differences of sentiment, they will speedily find means of dealing with their own problems and difficulties. All there is of serious import in the negro question will become a matter of local and not of national contention, save as the nation may lend its aid to the process of improvement, which, as the President says, affords the only occasion for discussion. Those who have hoped to find in sectionalism the material for future political contention will be doomed to disappointment if the supporters of Mr. Cleveland are sagacious enough to adopt the spirit of his inaugural address in regard to the rights and obligations of all citizens.
