They Were so Busy To-Day.

A boy about twelve years of age entered a store on Michigan avenue the other day and asked for the proprietor, and when confronted by that individual the lad hesitatingly inquired:

American Fables.

A Chance for Dr. Southall.
Mr. M. E. Thornton, vice-president of the Main Jellico Mountain Coal Company, of Kenesee, Ky., in a recent letter to the editor of the Manufacturers' Record, Baltimore, says:

The Origin of Man.
As it is Understood in California.

One of the delightful days of last week, a young lady, well known in the exclusive first circles of San Francisco society for unrivaled personal charms and elegance of accomplishments, was driven around to make a congratulatory call upon a married lady friend who was happily conversing from that occasional sacred event in the lives of wedded ladies, which, far from being a sickness, is the perfect culmination of their health.

LETTERON'S Sewing Machine Relief
Spring does one half the labor in sewing. It makes heavy machines run lighter. It makes light machines run lighter. The Spring enables any one to run a machine without becoming fatigued.

A Wonderful Stream of Water.
"There is no man on earth," says Peck, "that can describe Silver Springs so readers can form any idea of them. The springs cover two or three acres, and the water is from ten to fifty feet deep. The bottom is the most beautiful white sand, and the water is the clearest water in the world. It is so clear that any object on the bottom can be seen as plainly as though one was only looking through a sheet of the finest plate glass. You can never realize it until you see it. Fifty feet down you can see fish as plainly as though in an aquarium, and actually distinguish the separate scales on the fish. The sun shining through this water makes the most beautiful colors, like diamonds. All the colors of the rainbow can be seen, and where there is grass on the bottom, as there is in some places, it is of the purest green, and the green blends with rainbow colors until the beholder is perfectly awestruck, and cannot speak for fear of breaking away from the scene, and one wishes he could stay for weeks. There are huge catfish swimming around, looking as though they might be a yard away, they are so plain, but they may be twenty feet down. The springs form a river which flows for eight miles before it reaches the Oklawaha, and all of that distance people stand on the decks of the boat and gaze into beautiful water, and see the fish swimming around. Here will be a school of catfish, black and sassy, some weighing fifty pounds, there a school of a hundred garfish with their long bills, playing about, paying no attention to the steamer, but acting as though they were on exhibition. That eight miles is the most fascinating ride in the world. Those who visit Florida and fail to take the Oklawaha trip make the greatest mistake in the world."

Disasters to Parents Aims.—New York, April 22.—Great excitement was caused in certain circles in Brooklyn today by the announcement that Maud McAllister, aged 15, had been married to William E. Darling, 19 years of age, and Ella Jones, 17 years of age, to Charles L. Peckham, aged 19. The girls, who were married without their parents' consent, gave fictitious ages to the clergyman who performed the ceremony. The two young fellows frequented the skating rinks, where the girls met them. The parents of the girls are going to institute divorce proceedings.
