THURSDAY, SEPT. 3, 1885. THE WATCHMAN ON THE

STATE GUARD.

This is the way the Asheville Citizen puts its, and then rakes the Winston Bentinel and that paper's correspondent, while ostensibly replying to this paper. The mixture is not good, because it is difficult to separate what is intended for this paper and what for the other paper, but it is not hard to know what is section. meant for the correspondent. It only expressed opinions-inferences drawn from the verbal statements of eye-witnesses, which were considered good authority, and a sufficient substantial premises to justify comment. This paper does, however, object most seriously to the Citizen's flaying over its shoulders the Winston Sentinel and its correspondent. The Sentinel and this irate correspondent must stand alone, separate and apart from the WATCHMAN, fighting, as they tember 10th and 11th. are able to do, their own battles.
