I SHALL BE SATISFIED.
Not here! Not here! Not where the sparkling waters
Fade into mocking sands as we draw near:
Where in the wilderness each footstep filters,
"I shall be satisfied;" but, O! not here!
Not here—where all the dreams of bliss deceive
us—
Where the worn spirit never gains its goal;
Where—haunted ever by the thought that grieves us,
Across us floods of bitter memory roll.
There is a land where every pulse is thrilling
With rapture earth's sojourners may not know,
Where heaven's repose the weary heart is stilling,
And peacefully life's time-tossed currents flow.
Far out of sight, while yet the flesh infolds us,
Lies the fair country where our hearts abide,
And of its bliss is nought more wondrous told us
Than these few words—"I shall be satisfied."
Satisfied! Satisfied! The spirit's yearning
For sweet companionship with kindred minds;
The silent love that here needs no returning—
The inspiration which no language finds.
Shall they be satisfied? The soul's vague longing
For the abiding word which nothing earthly fills?
O! what comes upon my soul as I bring, and
A look upward to the heavenly hills.
Thither my weak and weary steps are tending,
Savior and Lord! with thy frail child abide!
Guide me toward Home, where all my wanderings ending.
I shall see thee, and "I shall be satisfied."
—From Hymns of the Ages.

THE DUTY.
All the good thou doest to man
Is a gift, but not a debt;
And he will more remember thee
The more thou dost forget.
Not as one who knows it not,
But as one who knows it,
That year by year brings forth its grapes,
And cares not for the wine!
A horse when he has run his race,
And dog when he has tracked the game,
Are not when they have done their deed,
As if their deeds proclaim.
Be silent then, and like the vine,
Bring forth what is in thee;
It is thy duty to be good,
And man's to honor thee.

CHILD AND MOTHER.
Children are what the mothers are.
No father's fond care
Can fashion so the infant heart,
As the creative beams that dart,
When all their hopes and fears, upon
The cradle of a sleeping son.
His startled eyes with wonder see
A father near him on his knee,
Who wishes all the while to trace
The mother in his future face;
But his to her alone upraise
The eyes that look to her those eyes
Open with joy no man can surprise.
—Walter Savage Landor.

He Always Took Salt.
The Lewiston (Me.) Journal tells this story of Hon. Robert Martin, of Auburn: "Once during one of his visits to the legislature, Mr. Martin sat at the table, when before him on the table were individual salt cellars, the first which he had ever seen. When his tea was brought to him, mistaking the salt for sugar, he took the salt cellar up and poured its contents into his cup of tea. The whole table looked at him. He stirred it up and tasted it. If an expression of distaste was on his placid countenance no one saw it, for he was imperturbable. He drank it all and asked for a second cup. In the meantime the waiter-girl had filled his salt-cellar again, and it was beside his plate when the tea was brought in.
"Squire Martin lifted the salt-cellar again and was just raising it into his tea when the waiter-girl said: 'I beg your pardon, sir, but that is salt. Do you use salt?'"
"Mr. Martin asked, and with a gleam of satisfaction in his eye at his own ready tact, he replied with decision intended for the entire table: "Always, ma'am; I always use salt."

Mr. Adams Bathes a Mule's Foot.
Mr. Archibald Adams, a teamster, who resides on the Brownville road, had an interesting and exhilarating experience the other morning. Recently Mr. Adams bought a pair of plain, ordinary, every-day mules at the horse market. Now, Mr. Adams is a very careful man, and has a kind heart for animals. So when he noticed in the farmer's column of a newspaper a day or so ago that there was an excellent thing to wash the hoofs of horses occasionally in hot water he came to the conclusion that he would try it on these mules. He gave a pair of hot water yesterday morning and had himself away to a stable. The mules blinked at him with a mild, languid air, flinched their tails about pleasantly, and waited their master's will. Mr. Adams set the pail down at the rear feet of one of the mules. The mules kept on looking pleasant. Then Mr. Adams filled up one of the pails and placed it in the bucket.
"You will see five minutes."—A joke is a mystery to some people. In a certain Court in this State on a time the proceedings were delayed by the failure of a witness named Sarah Mony to arrive. After waiting a long time for Sarah the Court concluded to wait no longer, and wishing to crack his little joke, remarked, "This Court will adjourn with Sarah-mony." Everybody laughed except one man, who sat in solemn meditation for five minutes, and then burst into a hearty guffaw, exclaiming, "I see it, I see it!" When he went home he tried to tell the joke to his wife. "There was a witness named Mary Mony who didn't come," said he, and so the Court said, "We'll adjourn without Mary-mony." "I don't see any point to that," said his wife. "I know it," said he, "I didn't at first; but you will in about five minutes."

SALE OF LAND!
By virtue of a decree of the Superior Court of Rowan County, in the case of J. L. Sifford, Guardian of Mary C. Miller, ex parte, I will sell at public auction at the Court House door, in Salisbury on Monday the 5th day of October, 1885, a tract of land adjoining the lands of Morris, Leah C. Bernhart and others—being lot No. 4 in the division of the lands of Chas. Miller, dec'd, containing 544 acres. Terms—one-third cash, one-third in six and one-third in twelve months, with bond and interest from date of sale at eight per cent, on the deferred payments.
J. L. SIFFORD, Guardian.
Sept. 4th, '85. 47-4t.

Those whose lives are most in the invisible or Spiritual world, have but little room for aught else, and acquire a spiritual power unknown to the average professed followers of Christ.
Men and women, youth and children, who do all things faithfully, will always be wanted and prized in all relations and in all places. While the careless and unfaithful worker is dreaded and seldom wanted and never fully trusted.

Washington Notes.

Editor Hussey to Greensboro Patriot.
Senator Vance's Courier Journal interview in which he appears as a "kicker" against the Administration, has attracted attention here. It is understood to be a declaration of war and the gossip place him and Senator Duxis in the same boat. The opinion expressed by the junior North Carolina Senator, that the people in North Carolina are dissatisfied with the Administration, is not confirmed by visiting North Carolinians. Here and there in the State, it is said, complaint is heard that changes are not made fast enough, but as to any general dissatisfaction, it does not exist. It is also said that the people generally are in sympathy with the Senator's civil service views. The present civil service reform is everywhere in the State regarded and characterized as a transparent humbug.
The Senator uses vigorous and unmistakable English in speaking of Southern Republican office holders. "They gained their position," he says, "by going over to the negroes, by becoming traitors to their fellow-citizens, and by antagonizing every principle of the Southern people."
The Senator is concerned they have been removed. The one prominent Republican now in office in North Carolina is the Wilmington postmaster. He has not been removed because Democrats request his retention. The change in the Charlotte mint has not been made because Senator Vance and Congressman Bennett could not agree upon the appointment. If there is blame let the responsibility attach where it belongs.
At the instance of Senator Vance the Department has decided to remove the revenue office from Statesville to Newton. The change is the result of a report from Collector Dowd on the cost of renting a suitable building for an office in Newton. The Department first determined to make no change; it was then decided to remove the office to Charlotte; subsequently it has been decided to remove it to Newton. Collector Dowd fought against the removal to Newton, but finally acquiesced, and is now understood to join Senator Vance in urging that change. It is understood here that the removal is against the judgment of the Department, and possibly against the report of the special agent who was sent to North Carolina to investigate the matter. The main objection urged against Statesville is that the only suitable building in the town for an office is owned by ex-Collector Mott, and that he is consequently the chief beneficiary of the present location of the office. However these things may be the change is to be made, and that soon, and "the banner county" will have something besides "the banner" to show for its enthusiastic fidelity to Democratic principles.
Senator Ransom is an unending worker. Most of his time is spent here, at great inconvenience and expense, in the interest of his State. He has boundless faith in the Administration and believes that his policy is wise and just. The changes are too slow, but he appreciates the difficulties that beset a new Administration. He has no ground of complaint. Not a single request has been denied him, and it is well known here that he enjoys the President's confidence. On his table lies a well-thumbed "Blue Book," its pages are familiar and reads like a column of "wants" in the city newspaper. He is the most approachable man in the world and puts on less style than many $1,200 Department clerks. At the Metropolitan Hotel he occupies an unpretentious, but comfortable room. The latch string is always on the outside. On the street he mixes unreservedly with the great "unwashed" that loiter in front of the hotel. Like all great men he has marked peculiarities. It is his wont to answer an impertinent or delicate question by necessity turning on his heels and whistling a low, soft whistling. Ordinarily he is not a good talker, but on these interesting occasions there is a touch in his melody that thrills every fibre of the newspaper man's innocent soul.
Daniel R. Goodloe, a well known North Carolina writer, has been engaged for sometime on a work entitled "Reconstruction." The preliminary chapters discuss the causes of the war, its cost and its principal military events. In some way Samuel Cox heard of Mr. Goodloe's work. He examined the manuscript, purchased it, and has used it, with emendations, of course, in his "Three Decades." The fact that a North Carolina writer figures so conspicuously in what promises to be a widely read book ought to be known. Mr. Goodloe resides in Washington. He is now well up in seventy and has not seen a sick day in a half century. He is well preserved and manifests a keen interest in North Carolina affairs.

Why Sorrow is Indispensable.
Sorrow is not an accident, occurring now and then—it is the very woof which is woven into the warp of life. God has created the nerves to agonize and the heart to bleed; and before a man dies almost every nerve has thrilled with pain, and every affection has been wounded. The account of life represents it as probation is inadequate; so is that which regards it chiefly as a system of rewards and punishments. The truest account of this mysterious existence seems to be that it is intended for the development of the soul's life, for which sorrow is indispensable. Every son of a man who would attain the true end of his being must be baptized with fire. It is the law of our humanity, as that of Christ, and we must be perfected through suffering. And he who has not discerned the divine sacredness of sorrow, and the profound meaning which is concealed in pain, has yet to learn what life is. The Cross, manifested as the necessity of the highest life, alone interrupts it.

Comparison between Boston and Baltimore.
A comparison between Boston and Baltimore, two cities of about equal population, shows that Boston spends on its fire department $696,000, Baltimore $190,000; Boston's health department, including quarantine, costs $528,000, Baltimore's $318,000; Boston's lamp department $481,000, Baltimore's $231,000; Boston's law department $22,000, Baltimore's $9,500; Boston's police department $642,000, Baltimore's $614,000; Boston's schools $1,443,000, Baltimore's $670,000. Expenditures in Boston are on a more extravagant scale than in Baltimore, but Boston can afford this, for it is a far wealthier city, its taxable property, real and personal, for 1884 being $682,000,000, and its tax rate $1.70 on the $100, while in Baltimore the taxable property is $253,000,000, and the tax rate $1.60.

The Helpful Man.
"There is a man," said his neighbor, speaking of the village carpenter, "who has done more good, I really believe, in this community than any other person who ever lived in it. He isn't worth two thousand dollars, and it's but little that he can put down on subscription paper for any object. But a new family never moves into the village that he does not find them out to give them a neighborly welcome and offer any little service he can render. He is usually on the lookout to give strangers a seat in his pew at church. He is always ready to watch with a sick neighbor and look after his affairs for him, and I've sometimes thought he and his wife kept house plants in winter just for the sake of being able to send the little couple to invalids. He finds time for a pleasant word for every child he meets, and you'll always see them climbing into his one-horse wagon when he has no other load. He really seems to have a genius for helping folks in all sorts of common ways, and it does me good every day just to meet him on the street."
—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Thinkers' Rule.
[W. T. Whittits in Oakdale Student.]
We often hear it said that the thinking man rules the world. Nothing could be more true; for it is the men who are ever awake, who ever have their minds on the alert for new facts and new discoveries—these are the men who change the face of nature and revolutionize the habits of mankind.
Such a man was Christopher Columbus. Born in obscurity and reared in poverty, nevertheless it is to him that we, as a nation, must attribute the honor of one of the grandest, yes, most sublime discoveries, that man has ever made—the discovery of half a sphere! Columbus was a thinker; for had he not been, America would probably have been unknown to the world long after Columbus had passed away.

At the deep blue of heaven brightens into stars,
So God's great love shines through in promises,
Which, falling softly through our prison bars,
Daze not our eyes, but with their soft light bless.
If no sins were punished here below, there would be no providence; if all sins were punished where would be the need of future judgment?
—Bowen.

Tobacco Barns as Fruit Evaporators.

[Cor. Greensboro Patriot.]
POKD, Guilford County, Oct. 10th, 1885.—Some weeks past I saw an article in the Patriot, asking the farmers to try an experiment this fall while curing tobacco, that they might ascertain whether or not the tobacco barn would do for an evaporator for fruit drying. I only speak for myself, and say that I have tried the experiment and think it will pay a large per cent. to all who engage in the fruit drying business. I use the rock furnace with the iron pipe. While curing a barn of tobacco last week I pared and sliced some apples, placed them on boards, then put one board of the fruit thus prepared on the lower tier, and the other about six inches from the ground between the flues.
This was done when the thermometer was at 160°. I continued to increase the heat until it had attained 180°—the length of time being four hours.
At this time the fruit was taken out, and I found it to be thoroughly dried, and would not bend but snapped very short. After it had been exposed a short time to the open air, which was very damp at that time, the fruit became very flexible. The color was not as bright as I have seen, which I suppose was on account of the apples being very yellow; but the flavor was most excellent.
I also placed in the barn some half peaches, which remained five hours. On taking out the fruit last mentioned I found it to have a beautiful color, and the flavor was delicious.
I am fully persuaded that the tobacco barn can be successfully used for evaporating fruit, and much cheaper than the costly evaporator made for sale. If this proves to be successful the farmer has an evaporator on his farm on a much larger scale than those put up for the market.
I expect to test the matter on the next crop of berries, cherries, plums, peaches and apples.
J. ROBT. DWIGGINS.

The Effect of the Great Explosion.
Gen. Newton, Engineer in charge of the excavation and explosion at Hell Gate, says of the recent explosion: "There are no reasons which prove that the explosion was not fully successful, while there are any number of them that tend to show that it was. The area covered by the water thrown up seemed to be about of the same extent as the excavation made. There was proof in this that a large number, at least of the cartridges placed exploded; and as all were arranged alike and had the same connection, the logical conclusion is that all were fired. Tomorrow or next day a survey of the rock will be begun. Wherever the rock is found to exhibit the same sound as before the blow up, we shall conclude that the cartridges at that point failed to go off. The doubt expressed about the pulverization of that part of the rock known as the nigger-head, is ill founded. My own superficial examination, after the explosion, showed the nigger-head to have been completely removed. After the survey has been made, the work of dragging the broken rock will begin. It is estimated that about three years will be occupied in this work. The cost will be about $500,000. One hundred thousand dollars of the government's appropriation is still left and there need be no delay in the removal of the debris. Divers will not be necessary to this work."

Parental Honor.
The words, "Honor thy father and thy mother," means four things—always do what thy bid you, always tell the truth, always treat them lovingly, and take care of them when they are sick or grown old. I never yet knew a boy who trampled on the wishes of his parents who turned out well. God never blesses a willfully disobedient son.
When Washington was sixteen years old, he determined to leave home and be a midshipman in a colonial navy. After he had sent off his trunk, he went to bid his mother good-by. She wept so bitterly because he was going away that he said to his negro servant, "Bring back my trunk, I am not going to make my mother suffer so by my leaving her."
He remained at home to please his mother. This decision led to his becoming a surveyor, and afterwards a soldier. His glorious career in life turned on this one simple act of trying to make his mother happy. And happy, too, is the child who never has occasion to shed bitter tears for any act of unkindness to his parents. Let us not forget that God has said, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Four Italian laborers at Hartford

were poisoned last week by eating lead-stools, which they mistook for mushrooms. Oil was given to three of them, saving their lives, but the fourth, having taken it into his head that he would be charged 6 cents for the medicine, resisted the administration of the dose, and died.

When In The Wrong Channel.

The bile wrecks grievous injury. Headache, constipation, pain in the liver and stomach, jaundice, nausea ensue. A few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will reform these evils and prevent further injury. It is a pleasant aperient, its action upon the bowels being unaccompanied by griping. The liver is both regulated and stimulated by it, and as it is very impolitic to disregard disorder of that organ, which through neglect may culminate in dangerous congestion and hepatic abscess, the Bitters should be resorted to at an early stage. Failure to do this renders a contest with the malady more protracted. Fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, are remedied by this fine medicine, and the increasing infirmities of age mitigated by it. It may be also used in consequence with advantage, as it hastens the restoration of vigor.

RELIEF GUARANTEED.
ITS ACTION IS WONDERFUL.
Suffer no longer. He banished with quickness no longer. Tobacco is Nature's own remedy. It has been used in a crude way from the days of Sir Walter Raleigh down, and has worked many a marvelous cure, and saved many a valuable life. In the "Tobacco Liniment" its virtues are scientifically extracted, combined with other valuable medical agents, and confidently offered to the public, not as a cure-all, but as a safe, powerful and effective External Remedy, applicable wherever there is pain to be relieved.
In large bottles at only 25 cents. For sale by all Druggists. Ask for it, and insist upon having it. Don't be put off with worthless substitutes. Try it and you will be thankful for having had it brought to your attention.
