A Lively Day in Chicago.

Last Saturday, May 1st, was signal- seconds. ized by a grand uprising and street parade of working men for the purpose of demanding the eight hour rule for work, and in some cases an advance of hours. The city rang with the blair of bands and the tramp of processions carrying red flags and the national bunting. Ten thousand lumbermen were out: 1000 freight handlers; a large number of furniture workers and planning mill hands, etc., etc., all in processions in different parts of the city, culars and floating banners. Business be arrived at.

There is one impressive fact in rethe working people of the northern, eastern, and south-western States, and that is that the discontented are in small proportion to the whole number of working people in the country. The Knights of Labor are estimated at 800,000; whereas, the whole number of laborers is estimated at from fifteen to eighteen million. But to limit the view to the territory in which the labor excitement has prevailed, leaves the discontented largely in the minority still. So that, in point of fact, they are not in position to dictate terms to capitalists and employers permanently. They can, (they have,) in many instances, produced temporary suspensions of business, which embarrass, and even ruin, some of those who have been interfered with: and to this extent the attempted revolution in business affairs is mischievous. It is not to be expected however, that this state of things will last very long. Counter movements will be inaugurated, and business will find the means of re-establishing itself with or without the agency of those who make the trouble. Already, we perceive that the non union laborers of Philadelphia have started an organization of non-union men. It seems to be based on the idea that laborers should be free to accept or reject work without the dictation of the directors of an Association; and that, relying upon his merits as a workman in any particular department of trade, a man should be free to go into markets and sell his labor for what it will bring, be it little or much. A first-class workman has nothing to fear under this equitable system, and the poor or indifferent workman, unboosted by a "union," will receive all he is justly entitled to.

Whether or not this is the initial of a counter movement of the trades unions, Knights of Labor, etc., which will ultimately restore an equillabrim to business affairs in the country; or whether it is to come in some other way, remains to be seen; but it is quite certain that it will come, and the business world will again move on much as it has done heretofore.
