How to Enjoy Life.

Buoyant spirits and happy thoughts are natural to the young, but youth does not always last. In our early years we must form those habits which will enable us to enjoy to the full extent all the years that God gives us. To that end let me give you a few simple rules.

1. Always be full of some earnest pursuit. I think even Syphus must have been happier, perpetually rolling the same stone up the same hill, than he could have been after age with nothing to do. "Activity devoted to useful ends" is a good definition of happiness. "Babies and kittens are happy without an aim in life, but theirs is a kind and degree of enjoyment which cannot possibly content strong and growing minds."

2. If possible never be behind in your work. Perhaps you have heard the old story of the sick boy, whose physician declared that he had every symptom of overwork. "Impossible," said his mother. "He is required to do nothing except to bring in one bucket of water each day." "When does he bring it?" said the doctor. "We try," was the answer, "to have it done in the morning, but he puts it off; and, though often reminded of it, he generally neglects it until we are obliged to call him up again after he has gone to bed, that he may bring it." "Ah," said the doctor, "that explains it all. Make him bring it early in the morning, and he will get well." And he did. The work which we neglect and carry on our consciences wears us more than all that we do. Joseph Cook once wrote in a young girl's album, "Duty done is the soul's fireside."

3. Form the habit of being thankful for your blessings. This is the key to that wonderful gift, contentment. There are many people dressed in silks and sealskins, and shining with beautiful jewels, who are covered with mortification because they are so lily clad, and full of anger to think that better garments are not theirs; while others, whose scanty clothing is hardly decent or comfortable, have hearts full of gratitude and joy. Besides, thankfulness, which binds us to our loving hearts, is the sweetest part of all the good we can get from our possessions.

These three things will do much to make our lives happy. Let me make one other suggestion. Take care that your amusements are really recreation. They must not be the business of life. When amusement becomes our chief pursuit, it soon falls on the taste. And when the power of enjoyment is lost in this way it is hard to recover. The power of recreation, like that of digestion, once impaired, can only be recovered with great difficulty and by long abstinence.

Neither should amusement be a passion with us. Play rests us. Passion is like a fire which burns that on which it feeds, and ever calls for more. Beware of the games whose interest is stimulated by bets, or by those convenient apologies for bets, prizes. Beware of the amusements which lead to late hours and mornings heavy with languor and depression. Some public amusements can never be healthy, because their promoters are compelled to make them popular by ever-varying methods of passionate excitement. Work is the business of life, and play, which diverts us from heavier cares, and helps us to fellowship with kindred spirits, should not unfit us for it. Withal, do not forget the highest aim for work, usefulness; and the best of all recreation, prayer.—The Congregationalist.

Kindness to Animals.

Every one should know that kindly treated animals will do their best for their owners. A curious case happened recently, which may be given as an example. A noted trotter was driven in a race by a strange driver. The horse was evidently dissatisfied and lost two heats. The old driver knew the horse could do better, and begged the owner to be permitted to drive him. His entreaties prevailed, and when he mounted the sulky the horse whinnied with pleasure and won the next three heats with ease, making such a record that the owner had an offer of fifteen thousand dollars for the animal. It is always thus. A farm horse kindly treated will do more work than one which is not attached to the owner or driver. A cow will lose milk when attended by a stranger or disagreeable person, and one that is petted and treated with gentleness will never exhibit the common fractiousness of kicking, or holding up the milk. This is true of all farm animals; who return kindness with affection and generosity, and abundantly repay the consideration shown them by their owners. Every boy, especially every farmer's boy, should early learn to treat all animals with kindness.

Training Cockroaches to Fight.

Chicago News.
During the last four centuries the Chinese have trained and fought cockroaches for sport and betting purposes. The insects fight with the stubbornness of a bull dog and with the dash and vim of a gamecock. Only strong, well developed male cockroaches are trained for the arena. The training is a slow process. When young they are carefully nurtured on rice, sugared water and a peculiar paste made expressly for the purpose. When fully developed the young fighters are pitted against smaller and weaker antagonists, which they easily kill. After a few encounters they become as ferocious as a bulldog and ready to fight at the sight of another cockroach. There are on record instances where two powerful fighting cockroaches have fought for three hours with undiminished fury. Sometimes, however, the fight ends inside of a minute.

Entombed Alive.

Seranton, Pa., Sept. 13.—A thrill of horror ran through the city to-day, when it was learned that another terrible accident had occurred in the mining regions by which one man was instantly killed and six others were buried alive by a cave-in. For several days there has been a general feeling of uneasiness among the miners, which was intensified yesterday by a distinct shock of earthquake and the bursting of a meteor, reported to have occurred at Akron, Ohio.

Shortly after the day gang went to work at the Marine shaft this morning there was a loud rumbling sound heard, which was followed by a cloud of dust rushing up the shaft. The alarm was at once given, but it was too late, as the shaft was filled in by the fallen earth, and the day gang were prisoners in a living tomb. A rescue party was at once organized, and set to work with a will. One man has been taken out dead. Six men at last accounts were still entombed, and the chances of rescuing them alive are considered very slight.

A Boy's Way and a Soldier's Way.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.
What fools boys are. How little do they know. How wild and sophomoric are their crude ideas of things. When a boy runs away from home to go out West and fight the Indians, he takes a bowie-knife and two revolvers, a Winchester rifle, a lot of powder and bullets. When a warrior graduates at West Point and makes ready to go forth and fight the Indians he lies him down to Washington, gets detailed on somebody's staff, trades his uniform for a dress suit, and if the Indians want to see him they must come to Washington and leave their cards at his hotel.

It Mattered How He Died.

Estelline Bell.
"John," said the wife of a Dakota settler when he came home from a trip to town, "old Bill is dead at last."
"Well, that's good—I loved when I turned him out in the pasture the other day that if he didn't fore winter I'd have to shoot him. It don't pay to keep a boss when it gets as old and feeble as he was. He 'peared extra weak this mornin'."

"Oh, he didn't die that way—some Chicago hunters came along and shot him by mistake."

"Shot him, hey? Well that's blame smart. How much did you get for him?"

"Why, I told 'em it was all right; that we wanted him to die."

"Great thunder! woman, don't you know nothing? Why in blazes didn't you tell 'em he was our family buggy boss, and worth $150? Great snakes! It seems as if women never had no business 'bout 'em, anyhow. You might just as well told 'em that he was a blooded boss, and that yer husband was county sheriff, and got one hundred of good, honest money."

Guessing the Hogs Weight.

Chicago Herald.
Coming in over the Monon route a few days ago a Chicago drummer sat musing by the open window and wiping perspiration and coal soot from his brow, and of course occupying two seats. Down in Indiana some place a native came in the smoker, and says:
"Shove along, stranger, an' give a feller a show. Been killing hogs, and feel all used up."

Then the native sat down, settled himself comfortably, much to the drummer's disgust, and resumed:
"Say, stranger, killing hogs is hard work. Did you ever kill any hogs?"
But the drummer did not condescend to answer.

"By gosh," continued the irrepressible Hoosier, "we killed the biggest hog yesterday that was ever killed in Indiana. How much do you suppose that hog weighed?"
Still no answer.

"He was so tarna! big that it took eight of us to lift him up to the ham stick, it did, 'gosh. You hain't no idea how much that hog weighed, have you, stranger?"

"No, I haven't," the drummer finally blurted out; "how much did your d—d hog weigh?"
"I don't know, mister. We didn't weigh him?"

The Correction of Inherited.

Washington Critic.
He was only a boy, but was before the police judge.
"Well, my lad," said the Court kindly, "according to the statement of the officer making the arrest, you were painting the town red. Have you anything to say for yourself?"
"No, your Honor the officer is right."

"But you are very young. Have you any employment?"
"No, your Honor; my father is a member of Congress."

"Oh—ah!" exclaimed the judge, in surprise. "Here, officer, let the prisoner go. This court has nothing to do with the correction of inherited weakness."

She Didn't Enjoy the Bathing.

"And so you have returned from the sea-shore?" chirped a Philadelphia belle, kissing her dear friend.
"Yes; got back this morning."
"And how did you enjoy the bathing?"
"Unfortunately, I could not bathe. The first day I arrived there a mosquito bit me on the arm and made a big bump, and you know my lovely bathing dress was made with short sleeves."

"My, that was too bad."
"Yes, indeed. I was so disappointed that I cried."

"Do you know why we celebrate Washington's birthday?" asked Mr. Hendricks of his son Bobby; "why his birthday is honored more than—than mine, for instance?"
"Oh, yes," responded Bobby, promptly. "George Washington never told a lie."

The Value of Knowing How to Do Something.

The usefulness of possessing skill in a specialty was demonstrated yesterday by the good fortune of a young man of respectable appearance but evidently reduced circumstances, who had been peddling lead pencils for several days in Norristown. He paid a visit to Bridgeport, and entering the office of one of the mills of that place, tried to sell the owner three pencils for five cents. The good-natured manufacturer listened to him as he dilated on the merits of his wares and drew strokes on a piece of paper to show the good quality of the lead. As the strokes were drawn they formed themselves into a figure of tasteful pattern, executed with neatness and precision. A few questions showed that the peddler was a designer, and had not mentioned the fact because he had no hope of getting employment where he was not known. He drew several other designs, showing such deftness of touch and fertility of invention that in half an hour he had been offered a position in the mill which he gladly accepted.—Norristown Herald.

The next Legislature can reduce taxation considerably, as there is now too much surplus money in the State Treasury. Probably there are eight or ten hundred thousand dollars in the Treasury, and no immediate use for it. Gov. Jarvis was right when he declared in his last Message that a State tax of ten cents on the $100 value was sufficient to carry on the State Government, in view of the surplus then in the Treasury. We shall allude to the matter again.—Charlotte Home-Democrat.

Counsel (on cross examination)—

"What is your age madame?" Witness—"Forty-seven, sir." Counsel—Married or single? Witness—Single. I never had an offer of marriage in my life; and, if it is of any interest to the court I don't mind saying that I've worn false teeth for nearly thirty years." Counsel—"H'm. That is all, madam. There is no use trying to shake the direct testimony of as truthful a woman as you are."
