The Poet's Mail.

HENRY WHOLENS.

O, the autumn days are coming, when the bees have stopped their humming, and the partridge tone is drumming in the copse upon the hill;

When the leaves are slowly falling, and the scold crew is calling to his mate to stop their squalling with a wild and mournful thrill;

Autumn winds the boughs are rustling, and the towns again are bustling, while the countryman is hustling with his apples and his corn;

Days of Johnny-cake and bacon, when the woods are full of flocks, and the meadow-larks have taken flight across the fields forlorn;

Tis the season melancholy, days when nature is not jolly; I soon the welcome Christmas holly will be hung over banquet hall;

Snows of winter will be o'er us, and the season soon will bore us when in manner quite decorous we must seek the evening ball;

And the question now, my dearie, that doth make me feel so weary, is the old one dark and dreary: Can I wear last winter's coat?

The Proposal.
Washington Critic.

It happened at a hotel not far from the Treasury building. He was a man of serious intentions and numerous attentions, and she was rich and wedable. Monday night he was there, and they sat in the hall under the stairway. It was a nook for lovers. There wasn't a soul in sight, and he thought his golden opportunity had arrived. Down he flopped on his knees and clasped her hand.

"Dear me," he whispered, not very loud, but loud enough. "I have loved you with the whole strength and ardor of a man's nature when it is aroused by all that is pure and good and lovely in woman, and I can no longer restrain my pent up feelings. I must tell you what is in my heart, and tell you that never yet has woman heard from my lips the secrets that are throbbing and

Just then a rustle was heard on the stairs above them, and a card fastened to a thread swung down and dangled not two inches from the lover's nose. On it were these pertinent words: "I am something of a liar myself." Then the awful truth flashed upon him and he fled. As he went out the door sixteen girls at the head of the stairs sent sixteen laughs out into the damp night air after him. He makes no love in hotels now.

Pack the Lungs with Air.
Deep breathing and holding of the breath is an item of importance. Persons of weak vitality find an uninterrupted succession of deep and rapid respiration so distressing that they are discouraged from persevering in the exercise. Let such persons take into the lungs as much air as they can at a breath, and hold it as long as they can, and they will find a grateful sense of relief in the whole abdominal region. Practice will increase ability to hold the breath and the capacity of the lungs. After a time the art may be learned of packing the lungs. This is done by taking and holding the long breath, and then forcing more air down the trachea by swallows of air. The operation may be described by that of a fish's mouth in water. To those who have never learned it, it will be surprising to what extent the lungs can be packed. Caution at first is needful but later practice will warrant large use of the treatment. The whole thoracic and abdominal cavities will receive immediate benefit, and temperance in eating, good air and right exercise will bring welcome improvement.—Herald of Health.

Hints for the Eyes.
Keep a shade on your lamp or gas burner.
Avoid all sudden changes between light and darkness.
Never begin to read, write or sew for several minutes after coming from darkness to a bright light.
Never read by twilight, moon light, or on cloudy days.
Never read or sew directly in front of the light, window or door.
It is best to let the light fall from above, obliquely, over the left shoulder.
Never sleep so that, on first awakening, the eyes shall open on the light of a window.
Do not use the eyesight by light so scant that it requires an effort to discriminate.
The moment you are instinctively prompted to rub your eyes, that moment stop using them.
If the eyelids are glued together on waking up, do not forcibly open them, but apply saliva with the finger—it is the speediest dilutant in the world; then wash your eyes and face in warm water.

We Do, We Do, We Do.
Wilson Mirror.

We love to look into the witchery deeps of their sonful eyes, and bathe our vision in those waves of radiance which seem brighter and more beautiful than the twinkling gleams of trembling stars which thread with hushed the darkness of the night. We love to hear their voices, for a woman's voice always has a melody as sweet as the notes which slip from the music lined throats of tuncful robins, when they pour out to each other their feelings in the delightful ripple of their own entrancing songswaves.

A Word for Women.

A Michigan woman broke into a gambling house, fired her revolver among the inmates, scared them off, grabbed the stakes and escorted her husband home.

A Manitoba girl wanted to marry a Dakota young man. The family objected. She stood on the Manitoba side, her lover stood in Dakota, and a preacher, with one foot on British soil and the other in the United States, married them.

A St. Louis girl found a stranger in the house. She compelled him to sit down and wait until she called in an officer to take him to the police station.

And yet men talk about the infirmities of women.

The Experiment Farm.
The North Carolina experiment station has done such good work that winter farmers of the state united in asking that the station be provided with a farm for experimental purposes, so as to still further increase its usefulness. The request has been complied with, the farm secured, and a new but simple and inexpensive building erected for the purpose, to be used for largely attended public exercises in July. Dr. C. W. Dabney, Jr., the chemist and director, has reason to be proud of this recognition of his labors, the State is to be congratulated on having such services at its command, and North Carolina farmers have ample reason to be proud in appreciating what science has already done for them, and in providing the means whereby it may do still more. Let them apply to their own operations and ever liberally support its work, and the presentness and value of their farms will increase and agriculture be more profitable and more honored.—Farm and Home.

John Ploughman's Talk.

EVERY MAN SHOULD SWEET BEFORE HIS OWN DOOR.

He is a wise man who has wit enough for his own affairs. It is a common thing for people to mind Number One, but not so common to see people mind No. 2. When it comes to spending money or labor on improvements, they think that repairs should begin at Number 2, and Number 3, and go on till all the houses up to Number 50 are touched up before any hint should be given to Number one. Now, this is very stupid, for if charity should begin at home, certainly reformation should begin there too. It is a waste of time to go far away to make a clearance; there's nothing like sweeping the snow from your own door. Let every dog carry his own tail. Mind your own business, and mend your own manners, and if every man does the same it will be minded and mended, as the old song says:

"Should every man defend his house,
Then all would be defended;
If every man would mend a man,
Then all mankind were mended."

A man does not look well to his own concerns, is not fit to be trusted with other people's. Lots of folks are so busy abroad that they do not have time to look at home. They say the cobbler's wife goes barefoot, and the baker's child gets no buns, and the sweeps house has sooty chimneys. This comes of a man thinking he is everybody's business but his own. All the wit in the world is not in one head, and therefore the wisest man living is not bound to look after all his neighbors' matters. There are wonderful people about, whose wisdom would beat Solomon into fits; and yet they have not sense enough to keep their own affairs in order. They will not manage the nation, as yet can't keep their boys out of the farmer's orchard; they could teach the parson, but can't learn themselves. They poke their noses into other people's concerns, where they are as welcome as water in one's shoe; but when it comes to their own business, they like the job about as much as a pig likes having a ring put through his nose. The middleman man will not begin to darn his own stockings because he left his needle sticking in his cousin's socks; he will be as grey as gramin's cat before he improves, and yet he struts like a crow in a gutter, and thinks himself cock of the walk.

A man's own selfishness and conceit ought to make him see his own ways, if nothing else does.

There's but one wise man in the world, and who do you think it be?
The wisest man in the world, and who do you think it be?
Every man thinks it be.

Now, if this is so, why does not this wise man do the wise thing and set his own wife self in the way of growing wiser? Every cat cleans its own fur, and licks its own kittens when they will nest, and common mind their own minds, and busy themselves with their own business? But your own potatoes, and let me roast mine if I like; I won't do it with your firing. "Every man to his tent," was the old cry in Israel, and it's not bad for us.

If your lung trouble is of serofulous origin, Ayer's Sarsaparilla will do you more good than any other medicine.
