

IRON BITTERS
THE BEST TONIC

This medicine, combining iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, Nervousness, Headaches, Chills and Fevers, and Neuralgia.

It is an infallible remedy for Diseases of the Liver, Gall-bladder and Bile, and is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives. It does not injure the teeth, cause headache, or produce constipation—being free from opium, it enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, relieves heartburn and belching, and strengthens the muscles and nerves.

For Inflammatory Fevers, Leucorrhoea, Loss of Energy, etc., it has no equal.

The genuine has above trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other. Made only by W.D. & H.O. WILLS, BRISTOL, ENGLAND.

Rented Farms.

When a man lives on a rented farm and is fond of his dram it would be well for him to stop and make the following calculation; it may do him good and be the means of living on a farm of his own. You say you have owned for years for the free, independent life of the farmer, but you have never been able to get enough money to buy a farm. But that is just where you are mistaken.

For several years you have been drinking a good improved farm at the rate one hundred square feet a gulp. If you doubt this statement, figure it for yourself. An acre of land contains 43,500 square feet. Estimating, for convenience, the land at $43.50 per acre, and you can buy a plantation about anywhere in the State for less than half these rates, and you will see that this brings the lands to just one mill per square foot, one cent for ten square feet, or ten cents for one hundred square feet. Now pour down that fiery dose and just imagine that you are swallowing a strawberry patch. Get on a prolonged spree and see how little time it requires to swallow a pasture large enough to feed several head of stock. Many have done this.

Don't Experiment.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always secures, at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Cough and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottle free at Klutz's Drug Store.

A Personal Matter.

"Ought we to annex Canada?" inquired a Detroit of a stranger in one of our hotels yesterday.

"No, I hardly think we should. Still my opposition to it may be a personal matter."

"You are not interested in property there, are you?"

"Well no. But you see I have a son who used to be Cashier of a bank in Ohio, and, and—"

"Ah, yes, certainly. Of course, under the circumstances you would be rather, rather prejudiced. Good-bye."—Detroit Free Press.

G.M.D.

Thoroughly cleans the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution, and no equal.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blemish, or eruption, to the worst scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Eczema, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Fatting Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Catarrhs.

For Torpid Liver, Biliousness, or "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, it is an unequalled remedy. Sold by Druggists.

DR. PIERCE'S PELLETS—Anti-Bilious and Cathartic.
See a vial, by druggists.

THIS PAPER is on file at Philadelphia in the possession of the Newspaper Agent, H.W. AYER & SON, our authorized agents.

50 ACRES of good land, 6 miles from Salisbury, on the Concord road, terms reasonable for cash.

S. H. PINKNEY LUDWICK.

THE WATCHMAN JOB OFFICE

IS THOROUGHLY EQUIPPED FOR EVERY VARIETY OF

Job Printing,

FROM

POSTERS

as big as a barn door down to most delicate

VISITING CARDS.

Letter and Note Heads, Bill Heads and Statements, BUSINESS CARDS, PAMPHLETS, CATALOGUES, PRICE LISTS, School and Party Programmes, AND BLANKS OF ALL KINDS Court and Magisterial.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

MAKES CHILD BIRTH EASY!

SHOULD BE USED A FEW MONTHS BEFORE CONFINEMENT.

Send for book, "To Mothers," mailed free. PREPARED BY REV. J. H. HARRIS, D.D., CHICAGO, ILL.

Children

Often need some safe cathartic and tonic to avert approaching sickness or to relieve colic, headache, sick stomach, indigestion, dysentery and the complaints incident to childhood. Let the children take Simmons Liver Regulator and keep well. It is purely vegetable, not unpalatable to the taste and safe to take alone or in connection with other medicine. The genuine has our Trade Mark "Z" in red on front of wrapper. J. H. Zeilin & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Paper Pulp from Weeds.

Barrels are now made from paper pulp and an inventor of the process says that the weeds and rank grasses that grow on the meadows lying between Jersey City and Newark, in New Jersey, will produce an excellent pulp for this purpose, and that these practically waste lands may be made productive and profitable. The cost to manufacture the paper barrels is no greater than that of making the wooden article, and, with the patent machine, it is said that two men can produce 800 barrels in a day.—Philadelphia Call.

Why Maids Will Wed.

A good wife rose from her bed one morn' And thought with nervous dread, Of the piles on piles of clothes to be washed, And the dozen of mouths to be fed, "There's the meals to get for the men in the field, And the children to fix away to school, And all the milk to be skimmed and churned— And all to be done this day."

It had rained in the night and all the wood Was wet as it could be. There were puddings and pies to bake And a loaf of cake for tea; And the day was hot, and her aching head Throbbled wearily as she said: "If maids but knew what good wives know They're not in haste to wed."

"Annie, what do you think I told Ned Brown?" Called the farmer from the well— And a flush crept up to his bronzed brow And his eyes half bashfully fell. "It was this: 'And coming near he smiled, 'Twas this: That you are the best And the dearest wife in town.'"

Must Not Touch Tortugas.

Key West, Fla., April 15.—The United States steamer Yantic arrived here this afternoon from San Francisco, Hayti. It is reported on good authority that while at Port au Prince, Commander Greene, positively and officially forbade the English men-of-war in that harbor to execute their threat of seizing the Tortugas Island. The report has created considerable excitement among both the American and Spanish population.

The above is a special to the New York World of Friday morning. To it the editor adds:

Late in March it was reported from Havana that England had demanded of Hayti the immediate payment of $1,000,000 on an old claim or she would seize the island of Tortugas.

A day or two after came the rumor that England had issued an ultimatum to the effect that if the claim were not satisfied within five days an English man-of-war, then in Haytian waters, would bombard the principal ports of the Republic.

It is reported that the American consul at Hayti has kept the State Department at Washington fully informed upon what was going on about him. It is understood that the Government will undertake to enforce the Monroe Doctrine should any of the European powers undertake to disrupt any of the neighboring republics.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The Best Salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by Klutz & Co.

Clingman's Dome.

Gen. R. B. Vance writes a long communication for the Waynesville News about North Carolina mountains.

He mentions that Prof. Guyot makes Clingman's Dome the highest mountain this side of the Rocky Mountains. It is 6,000 feet high. But the United States Coast Survey has placed Clingman's Peak in Tennessee. Gen. Vance says:

"This is doubtless an error. I have always understood that 'Clingman's Dome' is in the great Smokey range, in North Carolina."—Wilmington Star.

Saved His Life.

Mr. D. I. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., says he was, for many years, badly afflicted with Phthisis, also Diabetes; the pains were almost unendurable and would sometimes almost throw him into convulsions. He tried Electric Bitters and got relief from the first bottle; and after taking six bottles was entirely cured, and had gained in flesh eighteen pounds. Says he positively believes he would have died, had it not been for the relief it afforded by Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by T. F. Klutz & Co.

A dispatch from Algeria announces the death of the greatest lion slayer that the world has ever seen, Ahmed-Ahmar, who was last year made Knight of the Legion of Honor. He killed 80 lions and as many panthers from the time he learned to shoot until his departure for the happy hunting grounds.

Sam Jones says that more social scandals are originated in church gossip than anywhere else and that the Lord will forgive a sinner ten times as quick as a scandal-monger. Samuel has probably felt the sting.

In Kansas the husband votes and then goes home and holds the baby while the wife votes.

President Cleveland has decided to visit the Piedmont section of the South this summer.

Tiffin, Ohio, April 18.—The severest snow storm of the year is raging here and along the lake.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

MAKES CHILD BIRTH EASY!

SHOULD BE USED A FEW MONTHS BEFORE CONFINEMENT.

Send for book, "To Mothers," mailed free. PREPARED BY REV. J. H. HARRIS, D.D., CHICAGO, ILL.

Carlisle on Democracy.

At a reception to John G. Carlisle, given by the Kentucky Democratic Club in Covington, Ky., Mr. Carlisle made a short speech from which the following extract is taken:

"I want to say to all Democrats that we would be unworthy of our name if we allowed any number of reverses to dishearten us. The growth of the Democratic party in the last twenty-five years has been wonderful. At the close of the war we were entirely without power, we had no offices or patronage, and were practically ostracized from a share in the affairs of the government. The democracy had a political faith founded on the principles of Jefferson, and they fought for it gallantly without hope of reward. There has never been a time since 1875 when the majority of the people were not in favor of the principles of the democratic party. I want to impress upon you the necessity of standing by your principles in any emergency, and at all elections no matter how small and unimportant they seem to be. No party can be successful in any country unless it has principles upon which it will stake its existence before the people. This country is full of vagaries on the power of government. Some want it to become a great eleventh-hour institution for the care of everybody; some want it to purchase the railroads and telegraph lines; some want it to interfere with the people's private business; some want it to loan money to indigent people. It is impossible to enumerate the schemes for robbing the taxpayer for the benefit of the few. We must overcome the Socialistic theories abroad in the land. We must stand everywhere for the protection of both capital and labor. We must stand everywhere for the rights of men to do their business with their own money in their own way. If the Democratic Party does not do this it might as well cease to exist."

Must Not Touch Tortugas.

Key West, Fla., April 15.—The United States steamer Yantic arrived here this afternoon from San Francisco, Hayti. It is reported on good authority that while at Port au Prince, Commander Greene, positively and officially forbade the English men-of-war in that harbor to execute their threat of seizing the Tortugas Island. The report has created considerable excitement among both the American and Spanish population.

The above is a special to the New York World of Friday morning. To it the editor adds:

Late in March it was reported from Havana that England had demanded of Hayti the immediate payment of $1,000,000 on an old claim or she would seize the island of Tortugas.

A day or two after came the rumor that England had issued an ultimatum to the effect that if the claim were not satisfied within five days an English man-of-war, then in Haytian waters, would bombard the principal ports of the Republic.

It is reported that the American consul at Hayti has kept the State Department at Washington fully informed upon what was going on about him. It is understood that the Government will undertake to enforce the Monroe Doctrine should any of the European powers undertake to disrupt any of the neighboring republics.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Why Maids Will Wed.

A good wife rose from her bed one morn' And thought with nervous dread, Of the piles on piles of clothes to be washed, And the dozen of mouths to be fed, "There's the meals to get for the men in the field, And the children to fix away to school, And all the milk to be skimmed and churned— And all to be done this day."

It had rained in the night and all the wood Was wet as it could be. There were puddings and pies to bake And a loaf of cake for tea; And the day was hot, and her aching head Throbbled wearily as she said: "If maids but knew what good wives know They're not in haste to wed."

"Annie, what do you think I told Ned Brown?" Called the farmer from the well— And a flush crept up to his bronzed brow And his eyes half bashfully fell. "It was this: 'And coming near he smiled, 'Twas this: That you are the best And the dearest wife in town.'"

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Carlisle on Democracy.

At a reception to John G. Carlisle, given by the Kentucky Democratic Club in Covington, Ky., Mr. Carlisle made a short speech from which the following extract is taken:

"I want to say to all Democrats that we would be unworthy of our name if we allowed any number of reverses to dishearten us. The growth of the Democratic party in the last twenty-five years has been wonderful. At the close of the war we were entirely without power, we had no offices or patronage, and were practically ostracized from a share in the affairs of the government. The democracy had a political faith founded on the principles of Jefferson, and they fought for it gallantly without hope of reward. There has never been a time since 1875 when the majority of the people were not in favor of the principles of the democratic party. I want to impress upon you the necessity of standing by your principles in any emergency, and at all elections no matter how small and unimportant they seem to be. No party can be successful in any country unless it has principles upon which it will stake its existence before the people. This country is full of vagaries on the power of government. Some want it to become a great eleventh-hour institution for the care of everybody; some want it to purchase the railroads and telegraph lines; some want it to interfere with the people's private business; some want it to loan money to indigent people. It is impossible to enumerate the schemes for robbing the taxpayer for the benefit of the few. We must overcome the Socialistic theories abroad in the land. We must stand everywhere for the protection of both capital and labor. We must stand everywhere for the rights of men to do their business with their own money in their own way. If the Democratic Party does not do this it might as well cease to exist."

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Carlisle on Democracy.

At a reception to John G. Carlisle, given by the Kentucky Democratic Club in Covington, Ky., Mr. Carlisle made a short speech from which the following extract is taken:

"I want to say to all Democrats that we would be unworthy of our name if we allowed any number of reverses to dishearten us. The growth of the Democratic party in the last twenty-five years has been wonderful. At the close of the war we were entirely without power, we had no offices or patronage, and were practically ostracized from a share in the affairs of the government. The democracy had a political faith founded on the principles of Jefferson, and they fought for it gallantly without hope of reward. There has never been a time since 1875 when the majority of the people were not in favor of the principles of the democratic party. I want to impress upon you the necessity of standing by your principles in any emergency, and at all elections no matter how small and unimportant they seem to be. No party can be successful in any country unless it has principles upon which it will stake its existence before the people. This country is full of vagaries on the power of government. Some want it to become a great eleventh-hour institution for the care of everybody; some want it to purchase the railroads and telegraph lines; some want it to interfere with the people's private business; some want it to loan money to indigent people. It is impossible to enumerate the schemes for robbing the taxpayer for the benefit of the few. We must overcome the Socialistic theories abroad in the land. We must stand everywhere for the protection of both capital and labor. We must stand everywhere for the rights of men to do their business with their own money in their own way. If the Democratic Party does not do this it might as well cease to exist."

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of 10,000. Governor Foster's father started a general store at the cross roads, and when his son Charles had become of age he had studied the secret of building up the town. He bartered in everything. One day a druggist came along looking for a place to locate, and Charles says: "Here, take these compounds and go across the street and start a drug store and if you haven't the capital 'I'll help you." He turned over his stock of nails and screws to another man and started a large hardware store, but he didn't tell him to spoil his trade by handling lumber, lime and a dozen other articles. Those he reserved for another new comer. Groceries, clothing, queensware, etc., followed suit until the town was made, and Mr. Foster, by the rise of real estate, became a millionaire. His secret was divide up and keep a good stock—encourage emigration.—Toledo Blade.

Building Up a Town.

Fostoria, Ohio, the home of ex-Governor Foster, is a city of about 6,000, only a short distance from Toledo, and twelve miles from Tiffin, a city of