Preaching as a Business.
One of the best paying vocations nowadays is the ministry. The day is past when the average preacher must receive his salary in the way of meat from one member of his church, jeans from another, books from a third and so on.

President Cleveland's message has caused widespread dissatisfaction in Texas. The main industry of western Texas is wool-raising, and those who have their money invested in it declare the President has delivered them into the hands of the Philistines, and they will take steps to form a national organization to combat the removal of duty on wool.

Two hundred men, of the Fifth regiment, have been ordered immediately to Fairport Harbor, Ohio, to quell the riot of the ore handlers, who are on a strike. Great trouble is feared, as the strikers are mostly foreigners, and are all drunk last night.

HOW HE GOT THE CHURCH.
The Interview Between Dr. Deems and Vanderbilt.

THE ELOQUENT NORTH CAROLINA DIVINE MAKES HIS HOME IN NEW YORK AND ESTABLISHES THE "CHURCH OF THE STRANGERS."
The Doctor was calling on Commodore Vanderbilt when the following conversation took place:

"Well, Commodore, only this: it is in the market. They want $50,000 for it, and I ventured to offer them $50,000. It is on leased ground, and I think it is about worth that."

"I felt in my pocket playfully and said: 'Well, sir, as nearly as I can judge, about seventy-five or eighty cents.'"

"He looked me straight in the eye, and said: 'Doctor, I'll give you the church.' 'In a minute I was mad. I had not been made so anry since I reached New York. I thought that Commodore Vanderbilt desired to obtain the property for some railroad or other business purpose, or for his estate; that he had some deep design, and chose to put me forward, supposing I was a greenhorn of a person from the pine forests of North Carolina, and he could use me. I fired up, and leaning upon the table, looked him straight in the eye, and said: 'Commodore Vanderbilt, you don't know me! There is not any man in America rich enough to have me for a chaplain.' I shall never forget the look he returned. He had been accustomed to be solicited. Here he was, making the largest offer of charity he ever had made, and found a man refusing to accept $50,000! It was an arr and quizzical look. It was the look of a man who had a new sensation, and could not tell whether he was enjoying it or not. As soon as he could frame a reply, he said: 'Doctor, I don't know what you mean. Me have a chaplain! The Lord knows I've got as little use for a chaplain as any other man you ever saw. I want to give you this church, and give it to you only. Now, will you take it?' 'I paused a moment, and felt that, perhaps, I had made a mistake in the man, and then said: 'Commodore, I should not like to be under so great a pecuniary obligation to any gentleman, that, when I had the guns of the Gospel directed against the breastworks of any particular sin, and should see his head rising above them, I should be tempted to suspend my fire, or change the range of my shot.' 'Doctor, said he, 'I would not give you a cent if I did not believe that you were so independent a man that you would preach the Gospel as honestly to one man as to another. Now, I believe that, and I want to give you the church.' 'After the discharge of the lighting of my anger, I felt that a sort of April shower was coming. My eyes were moistening. It seemed to me a wonderful providence; and you know we always think it is a wonderful providence if it runs with our ideas. I extended my hand and said, 'Commodore, if you give me that church for the Lord Jesus Christ, I'll most thankfully accept it.' 'No,' said he, 'Doctor, I would not give it to you in a way, because that would be professing to you a religious sentiment I do not feel. I want to give you a church. That's all there is. It is one friend doing something for another friend. Now, if you take it that way, I'll give it to you.' 'We both rose at the same moment and I took his hand and I said: 'Commodore, in whatever spirit you give it, I am deeply obliged, but I shall receive it in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.'"

PATENT MEDICINES.
Big Money in Them—Liberal Advertising the Secret.

A Broadway druggist stated to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat correspondent that many manufacturers of quack preparations actually set aside as much as 90 per cent. of their gross receipts for advertising purposes, the remaining 40 per cent. being sufficient to pay for the material used, the cost of bottling, labeling, placing and shipping, and leaving a handsome profit of at least 20 per cent. on the gross.

"Here for instance," said the druggist, as he took from the showcase a handsome box containing a white powder, "here is a preparation that is advertised throughout the country as an immediate relief and sure cure in case of ingrowing nails. The retail price of his box is one dollar. I am forced to pay nine dollars and a half a dozen for it. A man with an ingrowing nail reads every day in the newspaper of this cure, and comes in here and asks for it. If I haven't got it he goes away with the impression that I keep a very poor store. Now, here is the same stuff in this bottle," he continued, taking from a shelf a large glass bottle. "I can sell you as much of this powder for ten cents as that one-dollar box holds, and still make six cents profit. But the man who comes in here would not take any word for it. He wants what he has read about."

"Look about you, and on my shelves I have over five hundred preparations that sell for $1. I can duplicate the contents of the best of them and throw the bottle and label in for twenty-five cents, and only make up one bottle. What an enormous profit, then, must a manufacturer who compounds his preparations by the hundred barrels daily make. I tell you it is the advertising that does it, and the people pay for it. You read about this or that man spending $500,000 annually for advertising. He does spend it, but the public pays him back every dollar of it, and when he invests 50 per cent. of his gross receipts in advertising he is really doing a business of 75 per cent. profit on the cost of material and manufacture, and that certainly ought to satisfy any one. The money spent in advertising in the papers, on the walls, by circular, almanacs, sample bottles, cards, plaques, photographs or other handsome souvenirs is a dead sale investment."

Yet he Loves Her.
Man finds any amount of fault with woman, yet works tooth and nail to get her. He calls her extravagant, yet yearns to pay her bills. She's heartless, but he devotes months to finding the spot where that heart should be. She's sticlike, yet he struggles for a place in her affections. She is fickle, but he noble creature, has courage for two. She's a fraud, but a darling. She's a goose, but a duck. She's snippy, and sweet. In fact she's a chameleon, in the very latest style of spots and dots and feathers and fixings. She's little and graceful and dainty and dear—and changeable as the wind. Yet she's a most desirable article and mighty few men who want to get along without her, chameleon—in a bustle—though she be.—San Francisco Report.

"The best reforms of this earth come through waste and storm and doubt and suspicion; the sun itself when it rises on each day wastes the radiance of the moon and blots the starlight from the skies, but only to unlock the earth from the clasp of night and plant the stars anew in the opening flowers. Behind that sun as behind this movement may be sure there stands the Lord God Almighty, master and maker of this universe, from whose hand the spheres are rolled to their orbits, and whose voice has been the harmony of this world since the morning stars sang together. [Tremendous loud and long continued applause.]"

How Licorice is Made.

"It is almost an impossibility," said a well-known New York pharmacist recently to a Mail and Express reporter, "to tell how much licorice is really consumed by people in the city of New York. The amount is almost incredible, and probably reaches thousands of pounds annually."

"How is the drug obtained?" was asked. "A species of licorice is found on the shores of Lake Erie, though a good deal comes from further west. The plant from which it is obtained is called glycyrrhiza. It grows very erect, to the height of about four or five feet and has few branches. It bears a flower formed like that of a pea, but of a violet or purple color. The root in its raw state is well known as the licorice root of commerce. It attains a length of several feet and is often inch in diameter. When the root has attained the age of three years it is taken up and from this, before it becomes dried, is made the extract of licorice, sometimes known as Spanish licorice. This juice is prepared by boiling the root with water; the decoction is then decanted off and evaporated to proper consistency for forming the substance into sticks, five or six inches long and an inch in diameter; these are the Spanish licorice of commerce.

"Is not the article adulterated?" "Yes, it is often nothing else than a mixture of the juice with the worst kind of gum arabic. Metallic copper scraped off the evaporating pans is very frequently present, and starch and flour sometimes constitute nearly one-half of the substance."

License for Selling the Rosy Fixed at $1,600.
Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 8.—The County Commissioners met today to fix the wholesale liquor license, as by old agreement between the county and city, the former was allowed that revenue. The board is three dry, five wet. The dry men differed as to figures, but all were for a high one. The wet question was opposed to declining the license today, but a vote was forced and the license was fixed at sixteen hundred dollars. One dry member wanted it twenty-five hundred. There was only one registered application, Joseph Thompson, but he has not rallied sufficiently to take out the license. The question may be taken into the courts as to the right of the County Commissioners to fix the wholesale license of the city.

The Little Seed.
A little seed lay in the carter's path;
A little shoot bowed in the strong wind's wrath;
A little shrub grew, by its roots held fast;
Then a stout tree braved all the winter's blast.

A little cough started—'twas only light,
A little chill shivered the hours of night;
A little pain came and began to grow,
Then consumption had all his brave strength low.

Be wise in time. Check the little cough, cure the little chill, dispel the little pain, ere the little ailment becomes a strong, unquarable giant of disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, taken in time, is a remedy for these ills.

Importance of Paper.
Paper is becoming an important article to all manufacturers. The latest thing is the paper coffin, and it bids fair to take the place of wood, being light, durable and waterproof.

A Novel Business Calendar and Stand.
The most novel, convenient, and valuable business calendar for 1888 is the Columbia Bicycle Calendar and Stand, just issued by the Pope Manufacturing Company, of Boston, Mass. The calendar proper is in the form of a pad, containing 366 leaves, one for each day in the year, to be torn off daily. A portion of each leaf is left blank for memoranda, so arranged that the memorandum blank for any coming day can be turned to immediately at any time. The pad rests up but little more room than the pad itself, and when placed upon the desk or writing-table the entire surface of the date leaf is brought directly in front constantly, before the eye, furnishing date and memoranda, impossible to be overlooked. Besides the month, the day of the month, and the day of the week, the numbers of the days of the year passed and to come are specified, and upon each slip appears, as in the previous Columbia calendars, quotations pertaining to cycling from leading publications and prominent writers on both sides of the ocean.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he cannot go into society and he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently, entirely destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which in its turn has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results which have attended its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best, if not the only real cure for hay fever, rose cold and catarrh.

Why Atlanta Went Wet.
Editors Grady and Howell, of the Atlanta Constitution, consume a column in the New York World explaining why Atlanta voted for the "Wets." Singularly enough neither of the gifted writers hits upon the real cause of the result. To put it clearly, Atlanta voted against Prohibition because Atlanta wants a drink handy when she grows thirsty. There are other towns just like her all over our glorious map.—Philadelphia Times.
