For Governor.

Between forty and one hundred per sons have been spoken off for the office of Governor. There is no lack of material, and the Democratic State Convention will have a long and embarrassing list to choose from. We suggest as the speediest way of reaching a conclusion, that on the first ballot every delegate vote for the man he believes to be most popular with the people of his county. On the second ballot run the three highest voted for. On the third, drop the lowest of the three and run the two receiving the highest vote in the second ballot. By this method, unless a more democratic one can be proposed, a selection can be fairly made, untainted with favoritism or clique dictation.

> A Jesse James Man Blows Out the Gas. A big six-foot four-inch fellow arrived in the city on the train from Atlanta last Sunday evening, and went into one of our hotels like a cyclone from the Arabian desert. He said he was a member of the famous Jesse James gang, and wrote "Texas" all over the hotel register. He cavorted around for a time and finally made his way to his room, where he blew out the gas and got in bed. The hall boy detected the smell of escaping gas some time afterwards and upon making an investigation he found that it proceeded from the room of Mr. Jesse James' supporter. The room was entered and the noble Texan was found insensible and just about ready to hand in his checks.
