Broken Legs.

I have known valuable horses as well as other animals to be killed because of their legs having been broken, a large proportion of which could have been sived by proper treatment. The diffitogether. If the leg is swollen cold water is one of the best applications for removing the swelling, and this should have immediate attention. After the bone is carefully set encase the fractured part (both above and below) with heavy leather, somewhat in the form of a boot-leg. Tin or wood might answer the same purpose. It should be large enough to leave two inches space all around the leg, which space should be filled in with solid wet plaster of Paris. This will harden very quickly, and hold the bone as securely in position as though it were in a block of wood, but still allowing a free circulation of blood within the leg.

Alum Purifies Water.

the bacteria that it sometimes contains. That muddy water can be cleared by alum has long been known; but it is a comparatively recent discovcry that a very small quantity of alum, so small that it is not injurious to drink the water that contains it, will rid water of nearly all its bacteria. A Pennsylvania physician found that the water that was drawn by the people of a village where typhoid fever was epidemic, was swarming with bacteria. Fifteen drops of it, when spread upon a suitable surface, were capable of forming 8,100 colonies of these microscopic vegetal germs. He added alum, in the proportion of half a grain to a gallon and found that not only was the earthly and vegetable matters precipitated, but that the colonies of bacteria were reduced from 8,100 to 80, and that these were of large size .-
