About one week ago a well dressed stout built, red faced man got off the train in Durham and registered as "Somers" at the hotel. There was a suspicious blossom on the end of his nose, and his cock eyes and swaggering manner gave ready evidence that he was a head bummer and off on a "big lark." He installed himself in the pool room, first making the acquaintance of the men, who, before local option election last June, kept saloons in Durham. He played a good game of pool, and completely won the hearts of the 'boys' by frequent invitation to "take something," and many more in number proportionally to the were the glorious old times they spent whites than they are beyond the age of 21 years, at which polls are required to It was a noticeable fact that Mr. Somers never kept a bottle of whiskey, never asked any one to take a cock tale "shim and sherry" or a mintjulip, in his room.
