FARM AND FIRESIDE

-It is claimed that of all food linseed and cottonseed meal make the richest manure. -In the North alfalfa should not be sown much earlier than corn-planting time, as it sprouts in a few days and the tender plants are liable to be killed by frost.

-The fumes of burning coffee are a powerful disinfec ant. Pound the coffee in a mortar, and then strew it on a hot iron plate, which, however, must not be red hot.

-It may be accepted as a traism that if a man keeps his little garden and yard neat, trim and fruitful, he is a steady, industrious and useful member of the community.

-Cream Crullers: One cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, one cup of thick cream, teaspoon of soda and teaspoon of ground cinnamon. Mix with flour to a very soft dough, roll, cut out and fry brown.

-Let the dinner seldom be without horseradish, which is none the worse for being mixed with grated turnip. Raw turnip, grated with vinegar, is a relish with bread and butter, very wholesome, and, like chopped fresh cabbage, much more digestible than cooked.

-There are breeds of fowls that fatten more readily than others, the same as among animals, and must be fed cautiously, or they will become too fat to lay. Among them may be mentioned the Brahmas, Cochius, Plymouth Rocks and Langshans. In feeding such fowls corn should not be made an exclusive

-"Apples never sweat," says the Popular Science News, "but the moisture is due to condensation of moisture from without. It would be better if this condensation could be avoided, as dryness of fruit is essential to its protracted keeping, but it is impossible. Apples picked on a moderately cool day and placed in a moderately cool shed, protected from the sun, will not gather moisture, and this is the best method to pursue when practicable."

Some breeds will flourish only under certain conditions of feed and climate, while others are much less affected by those conditions, and will subsist under the greatest variations of temperature and on the nfost opposite qualities of verdure.

That the quality of any flesh depends greatly upon the manner of its dressing I am certain. The quality of the flesh of the rabbit is fifty per cent, better if dressed immediately after being killed. The flesh of the prairie chicken, as eaten in Chicago, is unpalatable, while it is the best of flesh when dressed properly thoroughbred to distinguish it, perhaps, ly mutton," as it is called, is superior are not race horses. from birth to butchering, and the entrails taken out with neatness and dispatch, and the careass can be wrapped in the yolkiest, wrinkliest skin without detriment, barring the uncleantiness. The moment the last drop of blood is shed, the entrails begin to emit a gas which permeates the flesh and causes the "sheepy or woolly" smell and taste. To avoid this the entrails should be removed before taking off the pelt, or the pelt must be taken off quickly. I have practiced, and find it satisfactory, the following mode of dressing a mutton: I sever the head with a cleaver, open the pelt at the hind legs, insert the gambrel and hang immediately. An opening is made and a pail of cold water is poured in, which arrests this gas and cools the entrails. The pelt is removed, after which the water is let out by making a smill opening near the read in after years. point of the breast-bone, after which If on the occasion of your first call

HEAVENLY WONDERS.

How They Have Been Revealed by the Looking back to the year 1800 we are draf'. astonished at the change. The comparatively simple science of the heavenly bodies known to our predecessors almost perfect, so far as it went, incurious of what lay beyond its grasp, has developed into a body of manifold powers and parts, each with its separate mode and means of growth, full of strong vitality, but animated by a restless and unsatisfied spirit, haunted by the sense of problems unsolved, and termented by conscious impotence to sound the immensities it perpetually confronts. Knowledge might then be said to be bounded by the solar system; but even the solar system presented itself under an aspect strangely different from that it now wears. It consisted of the sun, seven planets and twice as many satellites, all circling harmoniously in obedience to a universal law, by the compensating action of which the indefinite stability of their mutual relations was secured. The occasional incursion of a comet or the periodical presence of a single such wanderer, chained by planetary or solar attraction to prevent escape to outer space, availed nothing to impair the symmetry of the majestic

Now, not alone have the ascertained limits of the system been widened by 1,000,000,000 of miles, with the addition of one more giant planet and six satellites to the ancient classes of its members, but a complexity has been given to its constitution baffling description or thought. Thoroughbred and Pure Blood.

There is no difference between a thoroughbred and pure-blooded animal, for the first term means of a pure and unmixed breed, stock or race; bred from a sire and dam of the purest or best blood; but the English idea is that applied to the thoroughbred race horse, an animal supposed to have descended from the best horses of Spain, Barbary, Turkey and Arabia. Out of such material as was to be obtained from the countries named the English race horse has descended, but is now called a to the "city-market" rabbit or prairie thoroughbred is usually applied to a chicken.
