"Wen Craps Air Short."

Wen craps air short an' cotton low. There's sure to be a powerful snow. And then hard times come in.

Wen craps air short, yer stoop account. There's shore to be a heavy load.

Profit in Peas.

The State Wheel and Alliance, of Tennessee, having decided that, owing to the flushed state of the tobacco markets of this and other countries, it would be to our advantage to grow no tobacco this year, the question of what shall we grow naturally arises.

I would suggest that we plant peas, as I know of no other plant that will give so valuable a yield and for which there is so great a demand, that will at the same time renovate our lands and have them in better fix next year for tobacco or whatever else we might choose to raise.

Last year I planted, more as an experiment than anything else, about ten acres in the speckled pea, laying off my land just as though I was going to plant cotton, and dropped peas with a corn planter sixteen inches apart.

Notwithstanding the heavy and continued rains about harvest time, which forced me to pick over but once, the yield of both peas and hay, which I also mowed, was surprisingly large and the experiment was perfectly satisfactory.

The manner in which one of my neighbors has been growing them is also a very satisfactory one—sowing broadcast before the plows in the last sowing of the corn where they shade the ground completely from the summer sun, protect the land and keep the roots of the corn moist and cool, which in a dry time, very much aids the corn in maturing well.

In the fall, by the early breaking of the ground for another crop, a vast amount of vines and litter is turned under to rot and make manure. By this system the full benefit is derived from the peas as a renovator, and, considering the protection afforded the corn from the influence of peas upon its roots, the preserving of the land from washing, and the keeping under of the noxious weeds and grass, this plan, involving but little labor and trouble, is well worth the attention of all planters, and especially those tilling undulating ground.

Thinking it, however, more to my advantage, I now cure and stack the vines, and feed alike to horses, sheep and cows, and find that there is no better winter forage, and nothing more wholesome and fattening. Besides fattening the cows, it very much increases the quantity of their milk.

Taking the crop as a whole, considering that the vine may be mowed and used as the most economical winter forage for all kinds of farm animals, or even left standing as a first-class pasture, and last that no crop is raised with less work, trouble and outlay, I believe that to the Southern farmer no crop commends itself as the pea.

Love Conquerors.

What is the best way to conquer? "I'll master it," said the axe; and his blows fell heavily on the iron.

But every blow made his edge more blunt, till it ceased to strike. "Leave it to me," said the saw. And, with his relentless teeth, he worked backward and forward on its surface till they were all worn down and broken, and he fell aside.

The Best Use of Clover.

No matter what is done with it, the growing of clover can hardly fail to be beneficial to the farm. Those who sow clover seed liberally can hardly fail to find it profitable. Even when the field is plowed next spring, what growth the plant will make in a single season will pay the cost of the seed and putting it out.

But there is no further expense except the use of the land, if the clover is allowed to grow the second season. In this time two crops may be cut, the first for seed, and the second for feed. It is during this second growth of clover that a remarkable increase in nitrogen occurs in the soil.

It is during this second growth of clover that a remarkable increase in nitrogen occurs in the soil. But for the fact that the ground is very hard and dry after taking off the seed clover crop, it would be a good plan to plow immediately and sow wheat with a dressing of superphosphate to supply the mineral fertility. It may seem like hard cropping to take off two clover crops and then sow wheat, but the land is doubtless in as good, if not better condition, than it would be if plowed in spring, and bearing one grain crop during the summer.

While waiting at a station in South Carolina one day I was joined by a man who carried an old fashioned satchel on his shoulder, and who had evidently walked many miles through the mud. He was fully 30 years of age, scrawny and homely, and he simply nodded to me and sat down on a bale of cotton.

She had also had a long walk. She nodded to me and sat down on another cotton bale. Not a word was spoken between us for ten minutes. Then as the whistle of the train was heard in the distance she said to the man: "Then, Jim, you ar' gwine off ter jine the Mormon?"

"I am Hannah," he replied. "And you won't take me?" "No." "And I'm to be left?" "Yes."

"And it won't do no good to argue?" "Not a bit." "Wall, then, good-bye to you." She started forward with extended arm, but passed his hand and seized the satchel and flung it fifty feet away. Then she grabbed him by the hair and they went off the platform into a mud-hole together, and as the train moved away she was on top and jamming his head into the old-gold soil and saying between his jams:

"Want to jine the Mormons, do you? Want to leave the old wife who's dun lived with you forty years? Want to jine—jine—jine, you old rabbit, you!"

And fifty passengers gave three cheers and a tiger as she got a new hold on his patriarchal whiskers.

Man's Rights. New York Weekly.

Patient Man—Suppose a woman makes it so hot for her husband that he can't live with her, and he leaves her, what can she do?

Lawyer—See him for support. Patient Man—Suppose she has run him so heavily into debt that he can't support her, because his creditors grab every dollar as quick as gets it, besides ruining his business with their suits?

Lawyer—If, for any reason whatever, he fails to pay her the amount ordered he will be sent to jail for contempt of court.

Patient Man—Suppose she drives him out of the house with a flat iron and he's afraid to go back?

Lawyer—She can arrest him for desertion. Patient Man—Well, I don't see anything for me to do but to go and hang myself.

Lawyer—It's against the law to commit suicide, and if you get caught at tempting it you'll be fined and imprisoned. Ten dollars, please. Good day.

Special Thanksgiving.

A Proclamation:—A hundred years have passed since the government which our forefathers founded was formally organized. At noon on the thirtieth day of April, seventeen hundred and eighty-nine, in the city of New York, and in the presence of an assemblage of the heroes, whose patriotic devotion had led the colonies to victory and independence, George Washington took the oath of office as Chief Magistrate of the new-born republic.

The centennial of this illustrious event in our history has been declared a general holiday by act of Congress, to the end that the people of the whole country may join in commemorative exercises appropriate to that day. In order that the joy of the occasion may be associated with a deep thankfulness in the minds of the people for all our blessings in the past and a devout supplication to God for their gracious continuance in the future, the representatives of the religious creeds, both Christian and Hebrew have memorialized the government to designate an hour for prayer and thanksgiving on that day.

Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, in response to this pious and reasonable request, do commend that on Tuesday, April 30th, at the hour of nine o'clock in the morning, the people of the entire country repair to their respective places of divine worship, to implore the favor of God that the liberty, prosperity and peace may abide with us as a people, and that His hand may lead us in the paths of righteousness and good deeds.

Not all Going to Open Banks. Detroit Free Press.

I found a lot of colored people at Raleigh ready to go to Louisiana in charge of an agent, and selecting an intelligent looking man, I called him aside and asked him to explain how and why the exodus started.

"Well, sah," he readily replied, "it started in this way: 'Judas Straker—doah—come up to our nuybarhood an axed if we didn't want to be rich. He said if we'd go to Louisiana we'd get way up high in no time. Dat's why we ar' gwine'."

"But, how'll you get rich?" "Work de cotton crap on shoers. We git half. De dust year we shall git make $1,000. Arter dat we shall git along fast. Ize figured out dat I shall have $10,000 in five years."

"And what will you do then?" "Open a bank, sah." "Are all of you going to accumulate $10,000 and open a bank?"

"No, sah. Dar's one pusson who is gwine to cumulate $7,000 an den buy a steamboat, an' another whi is gwine to cumulate $5,000 an' buy hisself a toll bridge an' set down in a cheer all de rest of his life."

No Time for Fun. You will frequently hear people complaining that this or that man is discourteous or self-important, simply because he does not enter upon a discussion of unimportant topics when ever approached by an acquaintance.

The accusation in 99 out of 100 cases is unjust. A man may be ever so sociable when he has the leisure time to devote to sociability, but when business is to be looked after he cannot afford to be so, even at the expense of friendship. Take the managing or executive head of any great business and when approached during business hours for sociable purposes he will almost invariably receive the thoughtless intruder very coldly. Take this same man at leisure and he may be a Chesterfield. Forty years ago there was time to talk. To-day there is scarcely time for action. When the boy of today has attained the age of 40 he will fully appreciate this fact, and in half a century from now the man who expects his neighbor to devote an hour of his business time to social conversation will be considered insane.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Wealth in Ores. Manufacturers' Record.

The wealth of Western North Carolina in Bessemer ores is far greater than is known to the world in general. There is enough high grade Bessemer iron in that section to run every Bessemer furnace in America. As strong as this statement is the Manufacturers' Record knows whereof it is speaking. It also knows that English steel makers have been carefully investigating that region through their engineers, and that there are good prospects of development in the near future which will surprise the whole country. The belt of country running through Western North Carolina, East Tennessee, North Georgia and part of North Alabama has mineral wealth yet undreamed of.

Western North Carolina is one of the most remarkable countries in the world, with advantages of a balmy, bracing, health-giving climate; water in abundance, pure as crystal itself, mineral and timber wealth almost beyond description, and it will in a few years be the scene of vast industrial developments.

Yes, Why Not? The Charlotte Chronicle asks: "Wouldn't the Guilford Battle Ground be a desirable place for an Old Soldier's Home?" The question is sudden; but, as a citizen of Guilford used to say, "It is worthy of a thought." It is a beautiful site for a home—easy of access, and already dear to the hearts of the people. Let's talk about it at the celebration.—Greensboro North State.

The Parada of the Lynchers.

WHY THE GOVERNOR OF SOUTH CAROLINA INTERFERED TO SAVE THEM. Columbia Special to News and Courier.

When asked by the News and Courier representative to give a statement of the reasons which guided him in his action, the Governor said that no one could suppose for a moment that he approved of lynching after his action a few days ago, in giving prisoners, whose lives were in danger, a military guard, and instructing that guard to fire into any mob which might attempt to lynch those prisoners; but that he could not, in justice to the other race, allow these men to be made the first example of.

Many men had been lynched in South Carolina before these negroes lynched Waldrop, but in not a single instance had anyone been punished. These negroes had broken the law, but they were ignorant colored men and had seen lynchings go unpunished time and again. They were the first who had ever been convicted of this crime—that was one step gained—but he could not allow them to be the example. If it had been the second time there had been a conviction for this crime, or if white men, who knew the law so much better, had been convicted, such leniency would not have been shown. This was a warning to all white and colored, and in the future those convicted of lynching need not look to him for help. He pardoned these men because of their ignorance, and because no white man had been convicted of the crime.

Fish Hooks. A fish-hook is such a little thing to contemplate unless you have it stuck in your finger that one can hardly conceive of its manufacture being a considerable industry, where fine patented machinery and great skill is required. Fish hooks are made from steel wire. It is softened, one end pointed and barbed by machinery and the other flattened on a small anvil. Then it is curved, enamelled a dark blue color and hardened. A good fish hook is the delight of fishermen.—Graphic.

COLUMBIA, April 15.—The Supreme Court of South Carolina to-day decided that township bonds voted and issued by townships in the several counties in this State in aid of construction of the Charleston, Cincinnati & Chicago Railroad, and other railroads, are valid. This decision gives these bonds the same legal status as county bonds.
