THURSDAY, APRIL 3, 1890.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The next issue of the WATCHMAN will appear under the management of T. K. Bruner and J. W. Rumble.

Next Sunday will be Easter. Horseback riding is the craze here now.

L. H. Clement, Esq., is attending David court this week.

Dr. Eaton, of Cleveland, is North taking a course of study on the eyes.

Business meeting of the Y. M. C. A. to-night. A full attendance is desired.

A handsome residence is being built for Mr. J. B. Lanier, on East Main street.

Mr. O. A. Osborne left last Tuesday for Blacksburg, S. C., where he will open a drug store.

The Baptists here are still without a pastor, but Sunday school is held regularly at 9 o'clock A. M.

Rev. M. V. Macamson, of Burke county, will preach in the Baptist church here next Sunday, the 6th inst.

Mr. W. A. Griffith, who has been visiting his son, Dr. Griffith, has returned to his home in Forsyth county.

Rev. Mr. Guthrie went to Rockingham Tuesday, but will return Saturday and occupy his pulpit on Sunday.

Bishop Lyman preached at St. Luke's Episcopal church last Sunday morning and confirmed a good sized class.

Lots of fishing parties have been organized for next Monday. The luck of the Easter fisherman is proverbial.

E. M. Andrews has a new advertisement in this issue. His specialty this week is something that most families need.

The postal clerks played an April fool on us last Tuesday by failing to put the Charlotte Chronicle off at this place. We don't like such fooling.

The hogs and hog-pens must go in Winston. An election held last week decided it. We congratulate that city upon getting rid of the worst of nuisances.

North Carolina had three representatives in this year's graduating class of Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia. C. W. Corriher, of China Grove, was one.

We learn that Gold Hill, or rather that part of "the Hill" belonging to the English Mining Company, has been laid off in lots and the same offered for sale in London, Eng.

The attention of all persons indebted to the estate of J. J. Bruner, deceased, is called to the executors' notice in this issue. All such persons will please make settlement at once.

We learn that the Greensboro Patriot, under the management of Col. J. C. Tipton, is to be issued as a daily, but it is not decided yet whether it will be a morning or an evening paper.

The first invoice of music was received by the Choral Union this week. The members have their respective parts in hand, and will practice in concert at the next regular meeting.

Rev. J. J. Renn, the Presiding Elder of the Salisbury District preached two excellent sermons at the Methodist church on Sunday, being the occasion of the second quarterly meeting.

The drug firm of Klutz & Co. are having a vehicle made suitable for a drummers outfit, and will introduce their proprietary Medicines in the rural districts, through this medium.

The granite and mineral interest of Dunn's Mountain is claiming a share of attention now. We expect to see every street in Salisbury paved with that best of all granite, for the purpose, within five years from date.

The Sam Jones Meetings will commence in Charlotte on April 24th. Reduced rates on the railroad will be given from Salisbury and it is probable that many of our citizens will embrace this opportunity of hearing Rev. Sam.

The far sighted money making men of Salisbury are not idle in these days of real estate speculation, but have invested and are realizing handsomely on the prospects of a dozen or more towns becoming cities (?) in this and adjoining states.

We are surprised to learn, says the Statesville Landmark that Capt. Charles Price is in Washington City throwing obstacles in the way of the confirmation of Collector Eaves. What business is it of we Democrats whether he is confirmed or not?

Mr. J. B. Lanier has begun the erection of a roller flouring mill on his possessions, opposite the depot. The building will be three stories, and although built of wood will be an imposing structure. Thus Salisbury is progressing without much fuss but step by step in a substantial way.

Capt. Ben Marsh's little dog "Rex" has been a familiar object about town for many years, following his master wherever he went. He unfortunately got hold of a dose intended for some other canine, which sent him forthwith to the place where all good dogs go. "Rex" was a Mason, Odd Fellow, K. of P., K. of H., Royal Arcanum, etc., etc.

The Asheville Citizen says train No. 53, on the Western North Carolina Railroad made the run one day last week from Hot Springs to Salisbury, 182 miles, in 4 hours and 39 minutes, including 14 stops. This was between 35 and 40 miles an hour and must have made the actual running time an average of 50 miles per hour.

The next regular meeting of the Rowan County Medical Society will be held in this city on Saturday, April 5th, 1890, in the order of business will be: 1. Calling the Society to order. 2. Calling roll. 3. Reading minutes. 4. Unfinished business. 5. Report of Corresponding Secretary. 6. Written communications may be read and discussed. 7. Oral communications may be made and discussed. 8. Election of officers. 9. Unfinished and miscellaneous business. 10. Adjournment. Subject for discussion, Sanitation, Leaders, Dr. J. G. Ramsay and R. H. Cowan.

Chamber of Commerce. The Salisbury Chamber of Commerce met last Thursday night at the Mayor's office, Theo. F. Klutz in the chair.

The committee appointed to solicit subscriptions toward having the Farmers' Alliance fair located near Salisbury reported that the feeling of the people of town was in favor of it, and that $554.50 had been subscribed. The committee was continued and instructed to turn over the subscriptions to the treasurer of the Alliance as soon as the grounds were located.

The election of officers was postponed until the next regular meeting, which will be held on April 9th.

Homicide Across the River. Frank P. Broadway killed Lee Craver Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Craver's home in Boone township, Davidson county.

Craver had circulated reports reflecting on Mrs. F. P. Broadway's character. Broadway hearing of them, went to Craver's place, carrying a gun on his shoulder and a walking cane in his hand. He often went about with his gun, looking for game as he went to attend to other business. Stopping at Craver's hog-pens, he called the latter out, making as if he intended buying pigs. When Craver arrived, Broadway struck him on the head five blows, felling him to the ground. As Craver got to his knees and was attempting to flee, Broadway shot him.

Craver died that night, according to our informant, from blows received from the stick of Broadway, his skull being cracked. He leaves a wife and three small children.

Broadway announced his intention of going to Lexington and giving himself up to the sheriff, and told our informant this; but a later report says he has fled, crossing the river and telling the ferryman to tell any one making inquiries about him that he had gone the other way.

A Word About Advertising the Town. Mr. L. H. White, a representative of the New York World and a very pleasant gentleman, met some of the members of the Chamber of Commerce last Tuesday night at the Mayor's office.

Mr. White's object was to get the town interested to the extent of having Salisbury written up for publication in the World. He said that a World correspondent had written up Asheville, Winston, and Greensboro, and pointed to them as showing the results of the work.

The cost of the write-up was to be $300 per column. There were so few members present that no action could be had, but Mr. White said he would go around and see all the members privately.

The best advertisement a town can have is well-filled advertising columns in all its local papers. Outsiders will see this and will at once see that the citizens are alive and pushing. If you have money to spend for this purpose, spend it with your home papers—they all need it bad enough—and it will all come back to you again; besides the advertising you get for it will do you more good than anything that may be spent in a northern paper.

There is no telling how much money has been foolishly spent by southern towns in northern papers, and it is high time to call a halt.

Ten thousand dollars judiciously spent on the streets of Salisbury would be a better advertisement for the town than one hundred columns of silly gush in the World, and it would be an advertisement that would last as long as the town does.

A Rich Mineral Find. Mr. James Morris, of this county, brought to town one day this week several specimens of gold ore, taken from five different veins. The ore was inspected by Mr. John Lewis, of Denver, Col., who is here for the purpose of locating mines in this section for a large company of northern capitalists. Mr. Lewis pronounces the specimens of the very finest quality of ore, and says that if the mines are developed the ore will yield one thousand dollars to the ton. Mr. Morris says that the veins are large, and that thousands of tons of ore can be gathered out of the mines, which are located about twelve miles from Rutherfordton. Mr. Lewis will visit the mines in a few days, and report to his company the result of his rich find.—Rutherford Banner.

A Jail Destroyed. REIDSVILLE, N. C., March 31.—The county jail at Wentworth, this county, was totally destroyed by fire this morning. The fifteen prisoners were all safely rescued after considerable difficulty just in the nick of time. But for the Herculean efforts of several citizens, there would have been a horrible holocaust. The court house building was saved only by the favorable direction the wind was blowing at the time. The prisoners will be taken to Greensboro to-night for safe keeping until a new jail can be erected. —News Observer.

A Tribute to the Memory of J. J. Bruner.

BY DR. J. G. RAMSAY.

In tendering this tribute, with that of so many others, to the memory of J. J. Bruner, I write not because I knew him better, but rather because I knew him longer, and viewed him from a different standpoint, perhaps, from that of others who have so feelingly and eloquently portrayed his many virtues. I knew him for nearly half a century, and always regarded him as a personal and, in ante-bellum days, a political friend. His greetings to me, and to all others, were always pleasant, kind, and cordial. Socially he was affable, genial, and entertaining, but modest and unobtrusive; he often gave others the preference when he could have been more agreeable and instructive. I think I know him well in all the relations of life, except in the more private and domestic, and I believe he was universally regarded as intelligent, honest, upright, and good, much beyond the average of his fellow men. His nature was sensitive and impetuous, for he had self-respect and a high sense of honor, but he had so disciplined it in the school of philosophy and religion that he dominated his imperious nature and walked the even tenor of his way, usually in peace and always in charity. A true and humble Christian in the church of which he was a member and elder, he was active and useful, and in its ecclesiastical courts his opinions were often sought and always received with deference and respect.

But having been a constant subscriber to the WATCHMAN for more than forty years, it was as its editor that Mr. Bruner was best known to me. I regarded the WATCHMAN, under his management, in many respects, as a model newspaper. It was rarely bitter, never vindictive, and as far as possible impersonal. If sometimes it was regarded as unjust to those of opposite politics, it was never believed that it was so intentionally. Mr. Bruner did not edit a sensational paper. It was more pleasing to hide the faults he saw than to publish them, and he never faulted the scandalous and indecent before the public—he did not seek to popularize his paper by demoralizing its readers.

It is to me a melancholy reflection that with Mr. Bruner passed away, as well as I can now recollect, the last of those who were active business men in Salisbury when I first made my home in Rowan county, forty-seven years ago; but it is consoling to feel assured that the path of the deceased was that of the just, that "shineth more and more unto the perfect day"; that his memory will not fade from the minds of those who knew him best, and that his virtues and example are so worthy of imitation by all.

A Tribute to a Good Man. BY PROF. A. W. MANGUM, D. D., OF CHAPEL HILL.

I desire to place in the columns of the WATCHMAN a sincere and grateful tribute to its late editor, whose friendship I enjoyed for so many years and whose memory I so tenderly cherish now that he is gone.

A peculiar fondness for an editor's office, especially amid the excitement of those eventful days, doubtless led to my familiar acquaintance with Mr. Bruner in the early part of 1861. My first recollection of his office dates as early as the 13th of April in that year, I called in to get the latest news from Charleston. Well do I remember Hon. Nathaniel Boyden's exclamation when he read in the morning paper the telegram announcing the firing on Fort Sumter. With great emphasis and feeling he exclaimed: "We are ruined! We are ruined! We are ruined!"

The same eagerness for the news during the stormy times of my residence in Salisbury, made me a frequent visitor to the little table on which lay the WATCHMAN'S exchanges. How kind and indulgent he was! How uniform his quiet welcome and undemonstrative courtesy!

In the latter part of the war, I began to edit, and he to publish, a little paper called "Children's Banner." This brought me into very close relations with him. Soon after the war he assisted me patiently in editing a little book which was published under his supervision. In my occasional visits to Salisbury since the war, it has been almost a rule with me to call upon the WATCHMAN the first day after my arrival. It was a great privilege to enter his sanctum, look again into his honest genial face, and receive his brotherly greeting, as that welcoming smile, that it is so pleasant to remember, played upon his lip and sparkled in his eye. I think I knew him, and I frankly say he was one of the soundest and truest characters I have met in life.

He was a generous friend. He was a man of unvarying integrity. In speech he was singularly and charmingly plain. As a citizen, he was ever loyal to what he believed to be the public good. As a member of the church, he impressed me as a man whose constant watchword was duty.

I am glad that we exchanged messages of Christian friendship but a short time before his death. God bless his memory that it may be an inspiration to faithfulness with all his friends and relatives who survive him.

The death of Mr. J. J. Bruner, editor of the Salisbury WATCHMAN—"Father Bruner" of the State press—casts a shadow of sadness and sorrow over the editorial profession. This good man, who was for so many years in harness, was the Nestor of the State press and the younger members of the profession had learned to regard him with affection and veneration. Sincerely grieved by the death of our old friend, we extend to his son, Mr. T. K. Bruner, and the rest of the family, the assurance of our profound sympathy.—Lenoir Topic.

A Word to the Wise is Sufficient.

An exchange says: "An expert in advertising matters declares that the day for painting advertising signs on rocks and fences has passed. Whereupon the New York Tribune observes: 'We are glad to hear it.' A good deal of fine scenery has been ruined by hideous 'ads' painted in the most conspicuous places. Such attempts to puff patent medicines and the like ought to do their authors more harm than good. Sensible men with wares for sale advertise in the newspapers, and no where else, and are sure of a good return for the money they spend."

This is common sense, and the writers might have gone further, and included the hand bill and dodger in the list. True, they have their uses in calling attention to an auction sale, a public meeting, or theatrical performance, but are practically worthless as advertisements of regular and legitimate business enterprises. The dodger is glanced at, thrown down and forgotten. It makes no impression on the mind, while an advertisement in the newspaper carries with it a species of dignity and authority which attracts attention and invites investigation.

It is the experience of the most successful business men that newspaper advertising is the cheapest and best method of reaching the public. It is the most substantial and enduring form of impressing one's name and business upon the minds of a community, and in this progressive age the merchant or tradesman who hopes to compete with his neighbors by ignoring printers' ink will be left out of sight by his more wide awake competitors. The newspaper advertisement is always at work; it is pressing the claims of the advertiser while he sleeps, and making customers of strangers who otherwise would never know of his existence.

As Others See Us. We copy the following from a letter in a Kentucky paper, dated at Salisbury, March 14th, 1890:

Salisbury might properly be termed Forest City. So many large old elms lining either side of the streets. The principal streets are double the width of those in Paris. Gas and water-works and nice fountains would give you an idea that this is a modern city, but the streets are had and business houses are ugly-looking. No walks except sand, which are well enough except in times of much rain. I am told the streets have been worked. It is necessary to tell one. There are many beautiful frame dwellings of modern style and lovely grounds. A poor black man, who are beautifully shaded and will make fine drives as soon as spring starts the dead limbs into newness of life.

Beautiful box plants line the front walks and flower gardens in many places. There are a great many manufacturing interests here—tobacco, corn, &c., &c., and then a very fine brick cotton factory. They run day and night nearly the year round. It is lighted with electricity and they have a contrivance to sprinkle the floors to cool the atmosphere. Speaking of electricity, that wizard, Edison, was in town this month he had been out to Gold Hill in this (Rowan) county (pronounced Rowan). He said it was the best prospect he had seen; that North Carolina was the richest field in the United States. He is here to unloose the troublesome mystery of separating the gold from some alloy that has baffled the seekers after wealth in mining.

He has rented rooms for one year in Charlotte, 45 miles away. He is quite deaf and also very profane.

The most beautifully kept cemetery I have ever seen is near the railroad in the suburbs. Eleven thousand and seven hundred Federal soldiers are buried there in a large shaft and also flag-pole with the stars and stripes. It is a resort for young people and aged, too. A one-armed soldier cares for the dead and lives in a beautiful brick, vine-clad house within the gates. I may get this too lengthy, but I must tell you of our school-boys should come this way and have their eyes opened. But as the sorcerer in scripture, "When the Apostle cast the devils out of the young girls, by whom the sorcerer and Reeds would not bank on any one for opening their eyes, and thereby ruin their stock in trade. Two large and elegant four-story brick colleges and handsome two-story frame residences meet your eyes at the edge of town, and at another a normal school and a graded school. For what? Why, the republicans will say for the whites, of course. Verily all these good things are for the poor black man. The whites are seemingly contented with a graded school, and I hear there is a small select school.

FAITH P. O., Rowan county, N. C., March 29th, 1890.

Ed. Watchman.—Frick's Farmer's Alliance No. 1381 had a picnic and public speaking to-day. A large crowd was in attendance. The table was 125 feet long and filled with the best of the country's food, and there prevailed throughout Music by Prof. Bishop, Mr. Drake, and Mr. Gant—String Band. Prayer by Rev. Mr. Coburn. Speeches by J. D. A. Fisher, president, Rev. Mr. Coburn, Mr. S. A. Earhardt, and J. A. Fisher, of Trinity College, and Rev. R. F. Crooks.

We had a fine day, a large crowd, and a good time, and some good speaking, which we think will cause a great deal of good to the Alliance cause.

Heavy Snow in New York State.

AMPERSSAND, Safford Lake, N. Y., March 30.—Snow has fallen here steadily since Friday. There is now more than 15 inches on the level. It is snowing hard to-night. This the heaviest snow storm in many years.

NYACK, N. Y., March 30.—A terrific snow-storm, the worst in many years, prevailed along the lower Hudson today. A tornado was feared. There was also a blinding fall of snow.
