The Farm and Garden.

MAKE A TEST OF THE SILO.

The farmer who has not yet tried a silo and is feeding corn stalks cured in the field would do well to find out the nearest silo and go and interview the owner of it and see for himself the results. If he can get his hay for $1.50 per ton, all costs counted, he may go on making and feeding hay and leave the silo to others, but if his hay costs him more than that he will find the silo an economy, even to store his green clover in.—New York Times.

THE IDEAL DAIRY FOOD.

Fresh grass, succulent and rich, is the ideal food for the dairyman, and it produces more milk of a good quality than any of the highly prepared foods invented by man. This is the standard summer food, and the dairyman needs to imitate it for the ideal winter food as near as possible. When the question is analyzed, it will be found that rich grass produces plenty of fine milk because the cows like it, and because it contains the very best milk-producing elements. The ideal winter food must then bear two stamps upon it. It must be relished by the cows, and it must contain certain constituents which can readily be turned into milk. —Courier Journal.

FEED THE PIGS IN WINTER.

The well-known fact that animals do not grow as rapidly or take on flesh as readily in cold weather as in warm leads many farmers to delay feeding grain to their pigs until spring. Thus there is a long period in which very little growth is made. Not only is time lost by this method, but the animals get in a condition less favorable to fattening than they were at an earlier period. If warm pens are provided and suitable care is given, feeding can be profitably conducted even in the coldest weather. If these points are neglected the animals will return no profit and make very little growth even though a moderate quantity of grain is furnished.—American Dairyman.

GRINDING CORN AND COB TOGETHER.

For a long time corn-cob meal was divided, because analyses did not show that it had much nutritive value. Yet the story of the woman who kept her cow mainly on corn cobs and refuse from the table and kitchen showed that cobs had some value. The experience of farmers also confirmed the value of corn cobs when ground with the grain. Corn meal alone is too condensed for food. It packs in the stomach, and even mixed with cut hay is too heavy feed for horses. Grinding the cob with it enables the saliva to mix through the mass, and more of the nutritive value of the grain is extracted. But it is important that the cob be ground as finely as possible. If the cob is moist, as it is apt to be early in the winter, it will pay to mix equal parts of oats or barley with it before grinding. This enables the miller to grind even damp corn and cob much finer than would otherwise be possible. Unground pieces of cob are indigestible, and instead of making the meal more nutritive they detract from it.—Boston Cultivator.

CURING SHEEP-KILLING DOGS.

A live stock paper gives the following way to cure dogs of the sheep-killing propensity: Young dogs can be made so thoroughly afraid of sheep that they will not attack them in their mature years. Tie the dog to the head of a ram and let about eight feet of rope intervene, then place them in a clear field. The repeated charges of the ram will so disgust the dog with the sheep business that he will ever after avoid the ovine race. An old dog who was caught in the act of killing sheep was cured of the propensity in this manner in my presence many years ago. As the ram continued to charge upon the dog the latter worked closer and closer to the fence and when he had reached it the ram drew back, and as he made the final charge the dog went over the fence with a "ki yi" that made the onlookers laugh uproariously. The canine could only touch his hind feet to the ground, and as the ram would back up to make another charge this would draw the dog up a little. His struggles to get released and the ram trying to get a fair clip at him caused a see-sawing across the fence that was good as a circus to witness. This was heroic treatment, but all said, "Good enough for him." He lived several years, but was not know to molest sheep after that.—St. Louis Republic.

A UNIQUE HOT BED.

The following suggestion we find in the American garden:

Take a hogshead and bore two or three holes in the bottom. Set it down its full depth in the ground, on a slant, so that the southern side is six inches lower than the northern. Take some good fresh stable manure and thoroughly mix with it an equal quantity of leaf mold or good rich soil. Let this lie in a heap until fermentation has taken place, which will be in two or three days, when it should be turned and allowed to heat and ferment two or three days longer. Then put it in the hogshead and tread well down until the latter is about half full, allowing it to stand till heating takes place again. Fill in with six inches of equal parts of well rotted manure and garden mold well mixed. Cover with a sash. If sash is not convenient, a large piece of course muslin may be laid over the head of the hogshead and fastened by means of a tightly fitting hoop.

When the heat of soil is about eighty-five degrees sow the seed. Water with tepid water, and give air every pleasant day by lifting the cover. On very cold frosty nights, or in snowy weather, cover with boards or matting. The seeds may be sown in drills, and the plants thinned out as required.—New York World.

Walter Bridges, Athens, Tenn., writes: "For six years I had been afflicted with running sores and an enlargement of the bones in my leg. I tried everything I heard of without any permanent benefit until Botanic Blood Balm was recommended to me. After using six bottles the sores healed, and I am now in better health than I have ever been. I send this testimonial unsolicited because I want others to be benefitted.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this prescription, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. PRESERVE YOUR EYES

As you value good eye sight, so must you value perfectly fitted Spectacles. Don't hang on to the absurd reasoning of some people that you should never put on glasses until you can hardly read or see ordinarily distinct objects. It is all wrong. It is just as absurd to say, don't oil your sewing machine until it almost ceases to run, or let your mowing machine or wagon run until the bearings get so hot and dry that it stops. The result of neglected oiling is too plain to be spoken of. The oil is run dry, they wear and finally stop. Why? You were unreasonable in thinking it could give good service without attention. Then why ask the eye to perform a duty which is an impossibility. A member more complicated than any piece of mechanism ever invented. This is an age of progress, learning and much reading. You read to learn. The eye is the great intelligence conveyor. Without it what would you do? Life would be miserable without it. The eye is your only criterion for the use of glasses; they will tell you, often long before your unwilling self will acknowledge, that they need attention.

We have made this important branch of our business a specialty, and willingly guarantee a fit in every case.

Very Truly Yours,
