CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ANCKER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
"The use of 'Castoria' is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."
"For several years I have recommended your 'Castoria,' and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

ONE WORD.

I come to you with a small affair that you may need. In England, the Continent and many foreign countries, myself and wares are well known. Many American families in their return from abroad bring my articles with them, for they know them pretty well, but you may not be one of these. Confidence between man and man is slow of growth, and when found, its rarity makes it valuable. I ask your confidence and make a reference to this Journal to indorse that confidence. I do not think it will be misplaced.

I make the best form of a cure—an absolute one—for biliousness and headache that can be found in this year. The cure is so small in itself, and yet its comfort to you is so great—20 minutes being its limit when relief comes—that it has become the marvel of its time. One and a half grains of medicine, coated with sugar, is my remedy. In the shape of one small pill, known to commerce as DR. HAYDOCK'S NEW LIVER PILL. It is sold in the markets of Europe, but is new to North America. The price is as low as an honest medicine can be sold at, 25 cents. Send a postal card for a sample vial, to try them, before you purchase.

A SOUTHERN BLOSSOM.

Come and see her as she stands;
Crimson roses in her hands,
And her eyes
Are as dark as a Southern night,
And a soft alluring light
In them lies.
None defy if she beseech,
With that pretty liquid speech
Of the South.
All her consonants are sturred,
And the vowels are preferred;
There's a poem in each word
From that mouth.
Even Cupid is her slave;
Of his arrows half he gave
Her, one day—
In a merry, playful hour—
Dowered with these and beauty's flowers,
Strong, indeed, her magic power,
So they say.
Venus, not to be undone,
By her generous little son,
Shaped the mouth,
Very like to Cupid's bow,
Lack-a-day! Our North can show
No such lovely flowers as grow
In the South!

A Startling Confession.

The following dispatch to the daily papers will deeply interest those of our subscribers who have read Mrs. S. E. V. Emery's "Seven Financial Conspiracies," and will confirm all that has been said regarding the part that Ernest Seyd, the London banker, took in bribing congress to demonetize silver. Read this article, and then read the chapter on "Demonetization of Silver," in Mrs. Emery's book:
Frederick A. Luckenbach, of Denver, has made a remarkable affidavit before the supreme courts, the substance of which is as follows:
"In the year 1895 I visited London, England, for the purpose of placing there Pennsylvania oil properties in which I was interested. I took with me letters of introduction to many gentlemen, among them was one to Mr. Seyd, from Robert M. Faust, treasurer of Philadelphia. I became well acquainted with Mr. Seyd and his brother, Richard Seyd. In February, 1874, while on one of these visits, and while his guest at dinner I had a talk with him about official corruption."
"I alluded to rumors about parliamentary corruption and expressed astonishment that such corruption should exist. In reply to this he told me he could relate facts about the corruption of the American congress that would place it far ahead of the English parliament in that line. After dinner he invited me to another room and said: 'If you will pledge me your honor as a gentleman not to divulge what I am about to tell you while you live I will convince you that what I said about the corruption of the American congress is true.'"
"I gave him the promise and then he continued: 'I went to America in the winter of 1872, authorized, if I could, to secure the passage of a bill demonetizing silver. It was the interest of those represented—the governors of the Bank of England—to have it done. I took with me £100,000, with instructions if that was not sufficient to accomplish the object to draw for another £100,000, or as much more as was necessary.' He told me German bankers were also interested in having it accomplished. He said he was the bank."

"He said: 'I saw the committees of the house and senate and paid the money and stayed in American until I knew the measure was safe.' I asked him if he would give me the names of the members to whom he paid the money but this he declined to do. He said: 'Your people will not comprehend the far-reaching extent of that measure, but they will in a few years. Whatever you may think of corruption in the English I assure you I would not have dared make such an attempt here as I did in your country. I expressed my shame to him for my countrymen in our legislative bodies.'"
"Mr. Luckenbach's well known to Erasmus Wyman and is well and favorably known by many of Colorado's leading business men. He has been engaged for two years past in introducing a pneumatic pulverizer. It having come to the ears of M. S. Slater, chairman of the executive committee of the state silver league, that Mr. Luckenbach possessed the information contained in the affidavit, that gentleman waited upon him and induced him to put the whole story in explicit form and give it to the public."

Free Delivery of Rural Mails.

What are you doing towards getting a system of free delivery of mails in the rural districts? Now is the time to agitate this matter all over the country. The conventions of the great political parties are soon to meet. Which of them will incorporate into their platform a plank demanding free delivery of mails throughout the rural districts and villages as well as in large cities.
These things come not except by agitation. Some one has to work, has to move in the matter. Who is doing it in your neighborhood? Petition your Congressmen to work for this if you believe it a good thing.
Postmaster-General Wanamaker may be depended upon to do his best to carry out any plan that is desired if he can see it is business.
As the Treasury of the United States is not dependent upon the revenue received from the Postoffice Department,

LETTER FROM JAKE WARNER

He has been dreaming ever since the War—The Reform Movement.
Correspondence of the Watchman.

Well, sir, I've been dreaming. I have dreamed until there is no fun in it. Thirty years is a long time to dream, but my wife tells me it is so, and you may bet your last dollar that I will not dispute the statement.
When the war was over we old fellows came home with long faces and short rations in sight. Providence was kind to us, though, and we went to work and made good crops which brought good prices. We soon began to be hopeful. But the trouble began unexpectedly. We worked half the time and slept the other half. While we were doing this the cunning "shylocks" were whittling their instruments to skin us, and they have done it. I feel like a skinned horse now since I have waked up and see the awful financial system that we have, a system by which the government is controlled by bankers, manufacturers and railroad kings.

While we ploughed and slept, John Sherman, Jay Gould, the Vanderbilts, the Standard Oil folks and all of them were fixing us for slavery. Some of the great men that ever lived predicted it, but we slept on and ploughed while the ground was in good order. We didn't read nothing but a few political papers. They told us every week that the great day was nigh, just as soon as the republican party could be ousted we could live on the fat of the land. Instead of that the republican party has got the democratic party down and gogged. Thank the Lord all the people are getting wide awake. Their pockets are so empty that it makes them dizzy to look down in them. Wake up! go sleepers and see us whip the stuffing out of the plutocrats.
I tell you, Mr. Editor, I am sorter scared. This reform movement is going to be tough on the millionaires before it is through with. The insurance companies have been doing a big business. They pay some of their officers more than the president of the United States gets. Some of the agents are getting dreadfully rich and stuck up. Out west the old companies began to insure the growing wheat against hail. They only charged 40 cents per acre and the agents bought up all of the diamonds except one or two in the crowns of a few measley campers. So the fool farmers waked up and actually formed a company of their own. They are now insuring 17 cents per hundred acre. Of course that is wrong (for the insurance men who buy diamonds), but the good book says, "provide for your household," and they might have added, "you ought to be shot with ten penny nails if you don't. I reckon I should not say much more on this subject, for some of them insurance fellows may belong to 'diddle's hand,' and they would, no doubt, seize the opportunity to defeat me for Congress in my district, which, I think, would be a public calamity to me, if not to the whole country.
In the midst of life we are in debt. In the midst of life we have a little fun. I joined a fishing party not long ago. We went and fished in the briny waters of the grand old Yadkin river. There was seven girls and eight men—all young enough except myself. We had a basket of fun and caught a pint of fish. One of the girls caught a snucker right in the nose. It was one of the boys. A man is never safe when a woman is around.
A funny thing happened at prayer-meeting Sunday evening. Deacon Grace (that is not his real name) gave us an exhortation and made us all feel sorter serious like. He was getting way up in G and the tears began to roll down his cheeks. The Deacon reached for his handkerchief and pulled out a stocking from his pocket. He tried to explain, said Satan put the stocking in his pocket, but we all think he did it himself in a fit of absent-mindedness. I think an exhorter ought to make his audience do the crying act, but great minds differ on these matters.
When a man gets his name in the paper it is remarkable how quick he becomes prominent. I get all sorts of letters. They seem to think that I am a walking encyclopedia, but I am not and don't expect to be soon. One writer, a farmer, wanted to know how to kill cutworms, said they was about to eat up his corn crop. I advised him to try hot water on them, and if that didn't do, buy his corn in Chicago.
A young girl (or maybe an old maid) wants to know if you can try fortunes with salt and eggs as well in the light of the moon as in the dark. If the eggs are sound the most time is to use them for breakfast just any time in the moon. But don't boil them hard unless you want to be an angel prematurely. If the young lady wants to marry and is not willing to die until she does marry, the proper thing is to learn how to cook eggs and other veg-tables. That is the advice of one who has been there.
Yours in the faith,
JAKE WARNER.

"Signs" of Prosperity.

- "For Rent."
- "For Sale."
- "Goods for less than cost."
- "Must be sold regardless of cost."
- "Stock and fixtures for sale. Going out of business."
- "Money to loan."
- "Bankrupt Sale."
- "The public will note our advertisement. The bank's surplus has been increased 20 per cent."
- "Goods sold on installments."
- "Assignee's sale. Great sacrifice on goods."
- "No trespassing on this lot."
- "Taxes must be paid July 1st, or the penalty will be added."
- "Invoicing." [a new way of saying "attached by the sheriff."]
- And so it may be seen on every street in every city in the land. There is something radically wrong. He must be a fool who cannot see the disappointed hopes, heartaches and misery in every one of these signs. Unless some change comes in the near future this country will reap the whirlwind that France enjoyed one hundred years ago. It cannot go on long at this rate, and it should not be permitted to when there is a way that will bring peace, plenty and happiness to all. Its only capitalistic anarchists who want to retain this hellish system.

Silk Culture in the United States.

Representative Long, of Texas, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported to the House last Wednesday with a favorable recommendation, the bill appropriating $30,000 for the encouragement of silk culture in the United States under supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture. The experiments are to be made at five agricultural colleges. The report says that the people of the United States annually obtain from abroad $200,000,000 in silk goods of all kinds, while those who would be producers are deprived of a corresponding amount, less than the cost of production. In the course of a debate on the bill relating to silk culture in the United States, Senator George, of Mississippi, gave some very interesting historical facts on the subject. He showed that in the early Colonial days silk was produced in this country, and that silk produced in Virginia was exported to England and there wove and made into the coronation gown for Queen Anne.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Klutz & Co.'s drug store, regular size 50c. and $1.00.

The Outlook For Rice This Year.

We have reports of a great enlargement of the rice acreage this year; and it is now estimated, from the extent of the planting, that the crop of the year will be about one-half larger than that of last year or any other recent year. Messrs. Dan. Talmage's Sons in Bulletin No. 1, Rice Crop, 1892, state: "The rice crop of the United States this year under any favorable growing conditions can hardly fall short of 8,000,000 bushels. The basis of estimate is an acreage planted, prepared and promised. The enlargement is mainly due to planters who have had previous experience, but further augmented by those who planting less cotton adopt rice as a substitute crop, it being equally safe and abundant as any other grain and of much higher value. About half the crop was seeded during March and April; operation suspended during May, but will be resumed early in June, continuing in the extreme South and Southwest until the middle of July."
A larger acreage than ever before has been planted in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Louisiana; fair progress in experimental rice raising is noticed in Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas.

We venture to suggest to those unacquainted with the culture, the propriety of giving it a trial on a small scale—say five acres or so, perhaps, less the first year. Rice will make a crop on any cotton lands and quite as profitable, considering prevailing low prices in cotton. Many have an erroneous idea that it is an aquatic plant thriving only under moist conditions. The yield of lowland rice is heavier than upland, but the latter equals wheat, will grow as readily and is worth twenty-five to fifty per cent. more than it or any other grain.
Calecasian district, Louisiana, gives an idea of what may be done without tide or river water, its main crop being irrigated "from the heavens above." Less than a decade ago the culture of rice was undertaken and it now produces as much as the balance of that State, and more than all other States, outside of Louisiana. The Nova Orleans Picayune, in a recent editorial on the rice crop of the coming season, states:
"There have been most satisfactory results realized of recent years from the rice industry in Calcasian, and as a consequence a very decided impetus has been given to rice planting there, the more particularly as the incentive to increase the sugar acreage along the river and in the Teche section, furnished by the bounty law, has moved the centre of the rice industry to Calcasian and the other western parishes.
"The depression in the cotton industry has also helped increase the acreage devoted to rice in this section, as some of the acreage usually devoted to cotton has this year been diverted to rice. While this tendency has been more marked in other States, it has also been very noticeable in Louisiana and will undoubtedly have much to do with the increased size of the next rice crop."
Even the hand-dome amount above suggested will still be far short of our annual requirements, so that the high average range of values of past few years is fully assured. It is to be hoped that the culture of home rice may continue at an enlarging ratio until it shall drive and keep foreign out of the United States. There is another stimulating thought, i. e., producing as we do "the best rice in the world," the markets abroad are ready for all surplus which we can ever hope to make.

From every section of the country comes the doleful news of mines shutting down, mills and factories closing and the price of all necessities rising. This is capitalism. This is anarchy. The workers of this country will be starved to death as they were in Ireland, while the landlords and rich robbers revel in extravagance. What a brilliant, enchanting future! And yet this is what the old parties want continued.

At the great May day meeting in New York there were eighteen platforms from which men were speaking. The demand and pleading from everyone was that the workers should quit voting the old party tickets and form an independent party. There may be some fun in the east yet. We remember the working people came near electing Henry George mayor a few years ago. That spirit of revolt is stronger to day than ever before.

Blaine's movements are chronicled with all the assiduity of the royal worshippers of Europe. Just as though Blaine were anything else than a man, and a not very reputable one at that. Fools worship men. Wisdom looks for principle. The people want redress from wrongs. Blaine, like a royal blade, does not want any change. He is not hungry. He is not ragged. He has no sympathy for the poor devils struggling for a living.
