Correspondence of the Watchman. Mr. Editor: - You never saw such a mess as the people's party fellowhave got into down here in the declaration of independence county. Now to show you the condition of the people's party let us illustrate. When I was a boy we played a game that was known as "bull pen." We divided the force, say 10 on a side, we selected our ground something like a baseball diamond only not so large; we cast lots for the corner, the circual had five corners, we put five boys on the corners make if hot, then the next thing was game. THIS CAROLINA HOME OF MINE.

(Tune, Beulah Land.) In Carolina's hills and plains, . . Where freeman's will is never slain, There lives the noble and the free, Who ne'er submits to slavery.

Cho: Oh! countrymen, brave countrymen, Stand by reform and sacred plans; And look into a future state To view your children's dismal fate, For men and money's so combined? To spoil this sacred home of mine.

This Carolina home of mine There's lumber, tar and turpentine, And golden robes of rice do shine, All's sacrificed to some combine.

This Carolina home of mine, There's peanuts plenty and good wine, The rustling corn and cotton fine, All's sacrificed to some combine.

This Carolina home of mine Has berries, fruits of every kind, Tomatoes, pumpkins on the vine, All that is left us by combine.

This Carolina home of mine, Where wheat and peas are no decline, Our gold, the metal from the mine, All sacrificed to some combine.

Then cheer up comrades, be not still, Submit to no plutocratic will Who shape the destines of state To seal our children's dismal fate.

The sacred ballots are our arms To defend our children and our farms: We'll vote the ticket for reform Amidst the thunder of the storm.

How He Did Him.

John L. Sallivan is said to have a terrible glare in his eyes when he gets ready to knock his opponent out of the ring. An amateur boxer named Marks, from Texas, gives, the following graphic description of a box he had with Sullivan;

"After we had shaken hands I let him have a good one right in the jaw. Sullivan-looked at me in a surprised sort of way and Lsaw that I had his heart broken. Said I to myself, This man has his match at last and he knows it. He is afraid of me.' So I gave him some more bard knocks. John L. looked at me almost appealingly. He tried to stop my blows, but ne was slow and clumsy. Said I to nyself, Marks you are a made man. You'll whip this fellow easy. He is so slow with his paws that you can, batter him all to pieces.' But I made up my mind that I wouldn't knock him out till near the end of the round. I didn't want to rob the people of their port. At the end of the round I asked Sullivan how he was getting having claims against said estate are hereby .long, and he looked kind of scared and said only tolerable. I said to myself it was ridiculous for this man to be posing as the circupion of the world, and determined that in the next round I'd put an end to his absurd pretentions. About the midlle of the third round, just as I was getting ready to do Sallivan up, I saw another sort of look come in his eyes. He looked like some wild animal.
