A whole month passes in this state of semi-starvation: the funeral ceremonies, which drag on till the end of that period, are all performed, and the rigid observances of the widow are a little relaxed, if it may be so termed, since the only relaxation allowed to her is that she need not prepare the food with her own hands, and that she using only plain cotton saris. The real misery of the widow, however, begins after the first month. It is not enough that she is quite heart-broken for her deceased husband, and that she undergoes all the above mentioned bodily privations; she must also continually bear the most galling indignities and the most humiliating self-sucrifices. She cannot take an active part in any religious or social ceremony. If there be a wedding in the house the widow must not touch or in any way interfere with the articles that are used to keep the carious marriage customs. During the poojuhs, or religious festivals, she is but grudgingly allowed to approach near the object of veneration, and in some bigoted families the contact of a widow is supposed to pollute the materials requisite for the performance of marriage ceremonics. The widow is, in fact, looked upon as the "evil one" of the house. If she has no son or daughter to comfort her, or if she has to pass her whole life, as is often the case, with her husband's family, her During any ceremony or grand occasion she has silently to look on, others around her enjoying and disporting does not come to relieve her tedium she has hardly any thing to do but to ruminate on her present sad, wretched condition. Every female member of a prices. family, whether married, can go to parties, but a widow cannot, and if she expresses any wich to join the family on such occasions it is instantly repressed by the curt rebuke of her mother-inlaw or some other relation that " she is a widow, and she must not have such wishes." ------Origin of Slanting Roofs. opposite side and partly coiled against some stones that hal been used for a fireplace. With its head elevated about three feet from the floor and drawn a little backward to the stately curve of the neck, evidently to make room for the swing of the opening door, the huge monster faced his intruders. Both man carried rifles, and as the elder Lasey started back, the son brought his rifle to his shoulder and fired at the reptile's head. Mr. Lasey, quickly recovering himself, fired also, and almost at the same time. There was a terrible shuffling sound for a second and like a flash the snake s aled the walls of the cabin through an opening close to the caves and disappeared, and as he was going over a piece of his tail fell from the wall to the track of East Trade street crossing to the door. Whether both shots hall effect or not it cannot be said, but one shot certainly did, but missing the head struck the tail, which was in range on the opposite side against the rocks, and in going over the wall it was torn from its slender heat. The severed piece was six feet in length, and about the middle was the size of a man's wrist. Mr. Lasey brought the tail home as a proof of his adventure. The snake was at least sixteen feet long. The body was immense, as can be judged by the tail, and as it hy upon the floor, partially fluttened, t-appeared to be fully eight inches in breadth. It was covered with alternate black and white rings. Mr. Losey says that from the fright which the sudden and unexpected sight occasioned and the rapid disappearance of the reptile after the shooting-but after they fired they quickly retreated from the door -- it is impossible to give a minute description of the appearance of the monster, other than its color and enormous size. -----

How to Cool a Cellar.

A great mistake is sometimes made in ventilating cellars and milk houses. The object of ventilation is to keep the cellars cool and dry, but this object often fails of being accomplished by a common mistake and instead the cellar is made both warm and damp. A coel place should never be ventilated, unless the air admitted is cooler flian the air within, or is at least as cool as that or a very little warmer. The warmer the air the more moisture it holds in suspension. Necessarily, the of the tradition that the Greeks borrowed the art from the Egyptians. The Greeks, however, in adopting it added & new feature, the podiment, and the reason for this addition is easy to find. Egypt is practically rainless. All the protection from the climate required in a palace or temple in such a country is shelter from the sun by day and from the cold by night, and for this a flat roof supported by walls or pillars with architraves is quite sufficient, but when, as in all European countries, rain has to be taken into account, a slanting roof becomes a necessity. The Greeks, with their ove for symmetry, provided for this is forming the roof with a central ridge at an obtuse angle, from which it showed down equally on either side. The trangular space thus formed at the end of the building above the architrave was occupied by the pediment, and this part of the facade, which owed its birth to the edigendies of climate, was the second oth regarded as so essential to the artistic completeness of the no. a that it was said that if a temple were to be erected in the celestial regions, where rain would not be possible, the pediment could not be
