THURSDAY, MAY 4, 1893.

From the Hand Book of North Carolina we gather that the following operation in this State : Cotton mills, 140, and many others going up; woolen mills, 9; tobacco factories, 120, and the number constantly increasing; carriage and buggy, 57; wagon, 32; furniture, 25; hub, spoke, and handle, 6; sash, door, and blinds, 24; paper (for fruits and vegetables) 28, and for oysters, 14; fertilizer, 17; iron, about 25; cotton-seed oil, 14, &c.

North Carolina has been called the Rip van Winkle of the Union, and perhaps she has been slow to awake to the magnificient prospect her unequalied resources offer to the skid, energy, and capital of her people. We have not the data at hand to show the percentage of increase over previous mannfacturing ventures, but there can be no doubt that our people are now thor- planting are very scarce and high, it is oughly awake and in carnest. representatives of the President, who rep resented nearly every civilized nation on the globe. It was an inspiring scene that met the vision of the chief executive of the nation as he was escorted to his seat. Before him was such a throng as he had never faced before, pre-empting every foot of space between the platform and the edge of the basin beyond, covering the waiks and lawns to the east and west is far as eye could sweep. All was now in readiness for the inauguration of the exercises proper.

It was now the turn of the President of the United States to present himself, and as he slowly arose from his seat he swept his eyes, first over the occupants of the platform and then over one of the greatest audiences that man ever faced, there went up a cheer that seemed to shake the massive dome of the building behind him and which reverberated through the grounds like the ratting of musketry.
