WASHINGTON LETTER. rom our regular correspondent.

President Cleveland has this week been able to devote more of his time to important public matters than in any single week since his inauguration, owing to his having stopped the practice of granting personal interviews to applicants for Presidential positions: but it has been just the reverse with members of his cabinet; they have had so many callers that they have had to devote almost their entire time to them, and unless there is a "let up' they will be compelled to follow the President's example and decline seeing applicants for office. Those who pretend to be shocked at what they are pleased to call the President's innovation have short memories, as he did precisely the same thing in October, 1885. It would be advantageous to applicants for places if members of the cabinet would also refuse to see applicants, for then they would have a chance to look over the papers on file and make recommendation to the possible we are placing too much stress President, thus hastening appoint- upon the thought of entertainment ments. Influence of A Christian Life.

It is the silent forces in nature that accomplish the greatest results. It is silent rain and sunshine falling upon the little seed lodged in the crevice of the rock, that cause it to grow and burst the great rock asunder. It is the gentle forces of nature that make the tiny sprig a gigantic oak. It is the quiet falling of the snow flakes that wraps the world in its winding sheet and impedes the mighty iron horse.

So, also, it is often the silent influences of a Christian life that accomplish most for the Master.

Whether we are conscious of it or not, the life of each of us, whether rich or poor, high or low, young or old, educated or uneducated, is wielding an influence over another.

The Office-Seeker's Experience.

An office-seeker in Washington has had the usual experience as to before and after an election. He tells the Evening News his doleful experience.

Let us Work Toget

There should be in every courty a The News and Observer says : We county pride which will make every man feel an interest in his county and in everything which concerns the welfare of his county. Between the citizens of the county town and citizens of the country, there should not only be the kindest of feeling, but harmony of action, because there is a community of interest. There is an interdependence in the very nature of things which can be neither avoided nor evaded. The business and professional men and all the other dwellers in the town, in an an agricultural section, are largely dependent upon the farmer, so that if the farming population are unsuccessful and poor, they suffer in their profession and trade.

It is equally true that the growth and prosperity of the town is of vital importance to the farmer. As the population of the town increases and its people become prosperous, ag enlarged demand is created for farm products, especially the smaller articles, and the very articles in which there is the greatest profit. The town should do all it can to advance the interest of the farmer, and the farmer should take a pride in his county town and do all he can to promote its pres-

We want to see the people of the country mutually interested in each other's welfare. So far as the town is concerned, we know that there is not a man in it who is not anxious for the farmers to be prosperous. Admit that the people of the town are pecuniarily interested in the matter, yet the desire exists all the same, but they are also influenced by a noble motive. We want to see the people of the county outside of the town, in sympathy with the town, taking a pride in its growth and prosperity.
