

EDUCATIONAL RALLY AT GREENSBORO.

Salisbury to be Represented at this Meeting of Primary Teachers.

At Greensboro next week will be held a State teachers' convention, to begin on the 26th and end on the 28th.

All the primary schools in the State, it is supposed, will be represented, and this body will be composed almost entirely of lady teachers.

The Salisbury delegation is four in number, and is composed of Mrs. Johnston and Misses Tillman, Edna McCubbins, Sadie Davis and Annie Kizer.

Mrs. Johnston has selected for discussion "First Steps in Reading," and Miss Tillman will read a paper on "School Gardens."

It should be productive of much gratification and real pleasure to every inhabitant of North Carolina to witness the efforts being made by our educators to improve our public schools and advance the cause of education all along the line. And we hope also to see an increase in the number of public high schools in the State in the near future; and while in some of the Western States certain people are advocating their abolition, on the ground that they interfere with the colleges, and that all who ought to enjoy higher education than is afforded by the common graded schools can get it in the colleges, let our educators continue to move on the up-grade toward the highest attainable education for all.

Items From Faith.

FAITH, Oct. 24.

Charles Peeler, manager of the Globe department store, has bought John Barger's house and lot, and Mr. Barger has bought a farm from Alex. Frick, near Crescent, and will move on it.

W. S. Earnhardt is building a large schoolhouse at Enochville. The academy building committee gave him the contract.

Some of the young men of Faith went to Granite Quarry Saturday night and joined the I. O. O. F., and report a fine time. They say much credit is due the ladies of that town for the nice supper furnished for the occasion.

Last Thursday night, while driving home in his buggy, two men attempted to hold up L. A. Raney near the town creek. Had it not been for his spirited horse, which dashed away the instant they took hold of his bridle, no doubt he would have been robbed.

It was Benjamin Lovenstein, of Salisbury, who lectured on the ninth commandment in the Reformed church here recently.

Wm. H. Stewart, of the CAROLINA WATCHMAN, was a visitor to our little town Saturday, and added a good list of subscribers to his already long list for this place.

J. T. Wyatt is shipping several pairs of millstones this fall. A good sign of good corn crops all over the country.

Ivey Hoffner has gone to Mount Pleasant College. VENUS.
