While talking a few days ago with a man in Salisbury who voted for McKinley and who would would have voted for Hughes if he had been nominated by the Republican party in this campaign, he said: "I haven't any confidence in Taft. He pretends to favor some things that his platform refuses to consider, and if he was strong enough with his party to get the nomination he ought to have had firmness enough to have those things put in his platform. It shows insincerity for him to pretend to favor publicity in campaign expenditures, and I haven't any faith in him. And Roosevelt plainly lied when he denied Judge Parker's charge that the Republican party was receiving large contributions from corporations. There's something wrong about a man who will do that. "If Roosevelt would come out now and confess, I would think more of him. But everybody now knows he lied
