GEN. YOUNG'S AD. RESS.

Great as was the American revolution in its effects on the destiny of mankind in establishing this continent a republic; important as was the wars of 1812 and the Mexican war, on the perpetuity and expansion of this nation they have never elicited from the American people the same reverence, love and devotion which the civil war aroused in the hearts of the South.

A COMMON INHERITANCE.

This monument, my friends, is local in one sense, but in another it is as broad as the Confederacy. It represents a great, deep, wide sentiment that pervades all our Southern people and embraces in its witness all the soldiers who fought and the women who suffered for the independence of the South.

So when in years to come, the passerby shall enquire what means those letters C. S. A., those who explain their significance and will not speak alone of the sons of Rowan county, but will declare they represent the men who made history at Shiloh; who charged up Malvern Hill; who swept along the valley of the Chickamauga; who defended Atlanta in the matchless contest of eighty days, and who at Franklin—that terrible and awful holocaust—rushed upon the ramparts of the enemy, which could only be reached by climbing over platforms made by dead and wounded comrades.

They tell of men who quailed not at the destruction of Sharpsburg; who held the Angle at Cold Harbor, who marched with Jackson around Chancellorsville; who charged up the rocky side of Gettysburg, and imprinted, on its cold and pitiless stones, its letters of blood, the story of Southern chivalry and courage.

A COMMON CAUSE.

They came too, from Louisiana, with the fire and dash of the French quickened by the dogged determination and unflinching patience of the Anglo-Saxon and won renown and glory upon every field on which they fought; from Missouri, whose men, expatriated and exiled, never ceased to love that holy cause to which they had consecrated their splendid manhood and whose sufferings on a hundred battle fields showed costliest sacrifice men could make for liberty and right.

MAGNIFICENT MEMORIES.

My friends what magnificent memories I invoke and what marvelous records I recall, what superb pages of human history I read over again in these magic words, which uplift Southern courage and magnify Southern manhood.

Women Who Are Envyed.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation, or Kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion.

these four years contain the grandest and sublimest pages of our republic's history. Blot out these and all they mean, and they blank the proudest memories of a great nation.

Without fear of contradiction in the presence of this vast audience I affirm that from defeat we won imperishable renown. Losing, we have crowned our dead nation, its heroes and its living people with a glorious immortality. Wonderfully illustrious record! There are no stains on the Southern shield. Confederate men and women did all they could do.

If the enquiry shall be made, whence these Confederate dead; the answer will be from homes in Florida where the roses never fade and flowers never cease to bloom and where men are valiant and intrepid; from the mountains and hills of the Empire State, Georgia, always pathetic, always true; from the valleys and plantations of South Carolina, where mingle in such the blood of the Huguenot and anglo-Saxon, creating a knightly manhood worthy of every call which duty makes.

STANDS FOR THE HEROIC. This memorial as I interpret its purpose, stands for all that was heroic and grand in the history of the Confederacy and magnifies alike the costly offerings of the women and the men who suffered the untold sacrifices, both made, at the call of duty and country.

They came too, from Louisiana, with the fire and dash of the French quickened by the dogged determination and unflinching patience of the Anglo-Saxon and won renown and glory upon every field on which they fought.

They recall the men here who stood at the Petersburg Crater and yielded at Appomattox because they were starved into a feebleness which emaciated their bodies, but could not destroy their unconquerable will.

They tell of men here who won renown at Red river, Baton Rouge, Corinth, Springfield and Elkhorn.

Any lady reader of this paper will receive, on request, a clever "No-Drip" Coffee Strainer Coupon privilege, from Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. It is silver-plated, very pretty, and positively prevents all dripping of tea or coffee.

Women Who Are Envyed. Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation, or Kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion.

future can pale and no consecration surpass.

And from Kentucky whose sons feared no foe, who delight in danger and who never shrink before the face of any enemy, but ever meet conflict in the discharge of duty with courageous joy.

"Gather the sacred dust Of the warriors tried and true, Who bore the flag of a Nation's trust, And fell for a cause though lost still just, And died for me and you."

"The foeman need not dread This gathering of our brave, Without sword or flag and with soundless tread We muster once more our deathless dead Out of their silent grave."

STANDS FOR THE HEROIC.

This memorial as I interpret its purpose, stands for all that was heroic and grand in the history of the Confederacy and magnifies alike the costly offerings of the women and the men who suffered the untold sacrifices, both made, at the call of duty and country.

Who scorned the renegade? Who, silencing their trembling fears, Watched, cheered, then wept and prayed? "Who nursed our wounds with tender care, And then, when all was lost, Who lifted us from our despair, And counted not the cost? The women of the South."
