In some manner his clothes caught in the belting which carried him up to the overhead shafting where he was carried round and round until his clothes were torn from his body. He fell to the floor, a distance of fifteen feet, unconscious and thought to be dead, but as he was found to be breathing he was carried to the Whitehead-Stokes sanitarium, in Salisbury, where the best of attention was given him. An arm and a leg were broken and other injuries inflicted, but he has regained consciousness and seems to be on a fair road to recovery.

The Grubb Building Getting in the Air.

The workmen on the Grubb building ran up and put into position, yesterday afternoon at 8:10 o'clock, the first one of the uprights of the last set, or seventh story upright. In honor of the event an American flag was tied to the upper end of the iron post and it now waves in the breeze aloft and can be seen in high places for a distance of 25 miles around. This building, which is progressing rapidly will be one of the finest and largest in the State and will probably be known as Salisbury's sky scraper until one more lofty is built.

Suicide Near Organ Church.

Citizens living in the Organ Church neighborhood were greatly shocked Sunday to learn of the tragic death of Clarence Klutz. Sunday morning a brother of the deceased was married at the Lutheran church at Organ Church. When the family returned home the body of the brother was found lying upon a bed, with a rifle of small calibre near him. He was dead, a bullet hole in the body, which penetrated the left lung and parted an artery, telling the story of the manner of his death. It seemed that the wound was self-inflicted and it is supposed that the young man sat upon the bed, placed the muzzle of the gun to his breast and pulled the trigger with his toe. The deceased was a son of Henry Klutz of the Organ Church neighborhood and a brother of John W. C. Klutz, of this city. In the morning the young man had acted rather strangely, declining to attend his brother's wedding. No cause has been assigned for the rash act.

The Electric Chair Ready for Business.

The electric chair has been prepared in a special room in the penitentiary and the current furnished by the dynamo of that institution will be able to do the deadly work. It seems that Robeson county furnishes the first victim. It is to be observed that the states which have this form of capital punishment find it far superior to the gallows or the firing, killing with guns having been a long time the official mode of death in Indian territory. An electric chair is a radical strong affair, of oak and iron. Persons sentenced to death are not to be brought to the penitentiary until the day of doom, and then in the quiet room and in the presence of a few officials meet their fate at the hands of the warder, now Thomas P. Sale, who only has to move a switch, cuts the current on.—Raleigh dispatch.

ON TO RICHMOND.

Salisburyans Great on Buying Suit Cases. Richmond's Prodigy.

The Richmond News-Leader of the 30th says: For, rising Thirsty when the Morn is dim. He boards a train for Richmond or the Jim; Full many a Drink he quaffs at Red Eye Spring, And takes a bursting Suit-case home with him. —Rubaiyat of Howdriam.

Out of the arid wastes of North Carolina, eke from the neighborhood of Salisbury, where the famishing ploddedly through the sand, a solid train of excursionists left this morning for Virginia; an excursion for the benefit of those who have never seen the historic capital of this state; for the benefit of those who may have matters of business importance to attend to here; for the benefit of those who since the Old North State became even a parching wilderness, have come to look upon Richmond as a verdant oasis where the suffering find succor from thirsting, and the weary are at rest.

From North Carolina, on a through train, the run is a little over two hours long, and the Tar Heel brothers are now scattered all over the city, though it was learned that a godly number of them had run around below Twelfth street in the section of large mail order houses and have not yet had even a glimpse of the Capital Square.

That these excursions are becoming more and more popular was shown this morning at one of these liquor houses, the owner pointing out that since North Carolina had gone dry more people from that state had visited Virginia than in the previous five or six years. These visits mean the exodus of large sums in Richmond annually, amounting to many thousand dollars.

And this large expenditure of far from cash is not confined to the liquor trade. Thousands of North Carolinians, members of the "prohibition party," come to town to see the sights and do some "shopping," and they leave a barrel of money in this beautiful, breezy summer resort.

It was learned in this ramble that prohibition laws have exerted a strange effect on the suit-case trade here. Dozens of those who come up from the South invest immediately in suit-cases. These are delivered at the large liquor houses, where they are stocked with bottles and set aside for their owners, who call just before train time in the evening.

Some of these "excursionists" one of the dealers pointed out, would frequently bring in two suit cases, and would require assistance in carrying them down to the station. Others, however, he said, who want more modorate, are content with one case, holding not over ten or twelve one quart bottles.

A Stay on the Farm Call.

Eggs from 15 to 20 cents per dozen here in mid-summer, size-of-year-first chickens bringing 25 cents, flour over four cents a pound, corn over a dollar a bushel and other farm products away up in the air in price, to say nothing of cotton which has now reached 13 cents a pound. We arise to submit the assertion that the foregoing facts make a louder "stay-on-the-farm, boys," call than does pages of written advice by the fellow who left the farm some years ago.—McNroe Enquirer.
