SALISBURY, N. C., August 10, 1909.

Northern People Dissatisfied with Tariff Revision.

Jas. H. Hodge, of Anna, Ill., and Rev. W. W. Hodge, of Cobden, Ill., brothers and sons of Rev. J. F. Hodge, of Morgan township, have been spending several days in the county visiting relatives. These gentlemen went to Illinois about 16 years ago and have made their home in that state ever since. Jas. H. Hodge, visited his sister, Mrs. J. R. Wallace at China Grove, last Thursday and, accompanied by his wife, returned to Illinois Friday night. Rev. W. W. Hodge will remain in the county for a week or more before returning. The Messrs Hodge have found their Illinois home very agreeable and are well satisfied with their adopted state.

Jas. H. Hodge made us a pleasant visit while here and in talking on various subjects he stated that there were a great many North Carolinians in southern Illinois. This probably accounts for that state being one of the best and leading states in the Union. Mr. Hodge said that the panic is worse there now than ever before and the people are greatly displeased with the failure of Congress to reduce the tariff. He says that if there was a presidential election this fall the country would go Democratic by a big majority.

An Interesting and Complex Question in Court.

Something out of the ordinary was that of a case before Judge Miller this morning in which a negro was charged with soliciting baggage on at the Southern depot yesterday. The negro claims he was only there for the purpose of collecting 25 cents due him and was not soliciting.

Sometime ago the Southern officials as we understand it, were instrumental in having the city aldermen pass an ordinance and establishing rules and regulations in and about the new station. Among these rules was one forbidding any one soliciting on the premises. Recently the Railway Company rented an office and gave to W. T. Klutz the right to solicit under the shed and about the building, just where the city ordinance says such shall not be done. In the course of the trial this came up and it was argued that if the negro was guilty so was Mr. Klutz, as both had violated the city ordinance. Counsel for the Southern claimed that it had the right to permit any one to solicit baggage there, even though contrary to the very ordinance it was instrumental in having enacted.

As the case was somewhat complex and far reaching Judge Miller reserved judgment until tomorrow morning.

Fewer Arrests and Less Drunkenness.

A little figuring recently done by Alderman Summersett and Captain Shaver gives the following results. During June and July, 1908, with two more officers and a chief, there was a total of 247 arrests made, of this number 128 were charged with drunkenness. During the past June and July, with the reduced force, a total of 85 arrests were made, 24 of which were for drunkenness. This means under prohibition a smaller police force is required, that crime has decreased about 50 per cent. And drunkenness has decreased about 70 per cent., and the town is rid of the drunken, cursing and insulting gangs hanging about the streets. Though not yet fully rid of the blind tigers and whiskey.

Almost Miraculous.

A more extraordinary and terrifying experience comes to few people than that which befell the family of C. Cook, an industrious farmer living five miles east of here. While playing on the curb, his little 7-year-old daughter fell into their well which was walled with 12-inch terra cotta piping which is barely wide enough to let the little body down end wise and smooth as glass on the inside, affording apparently no means whatever of recovery. What is even more remarkable that how the child managed to fall into such a small opening in the manner of her escape. When she arose to the surface of the water instinct prompted her to throw out her hands and knees and in this manner pressed her weight against the sides of the piping with a death clasp that nothing but brute force could move and this was applied in the shape of a pair of steel yards and the little body forcibly recovered after more than two hours of fearful effort.

During this time no amount of persuasion or threats could compel the girl to loosen her grasp sufficiently to grasp the ropedaugling around. Whether it was fear, not being able to understand from 30 feet above, or a wise Providence that justified is not known, at any rate for more than two hours the little girl remained in the cold water in a dark well, with nothing but the glassy sides of the piping to press against for support. She is now safe and not much the worse for her horrible experience. The feelings of the parents and neighbors in this trying experience cannot be imagined.—Fort Mill, S. C., dispatch.

A Disgusted Republican.

In his speech in the Senate announcing that he could not conscientiously vote for the conference report on the tariff bill, Mr. Clapp [of Minnesota] said:

"After we undertook revision of the tariff as a result of a demand by the consumers, a force for the first time began to arise, not for protection, but for profit—to intensify profit."

"The issue now is whether what was once a benign factor in American legislation shall be used merely for the purpose of increasing profits."

Paying special attention to the corporation tax provision, Mr. Clapp inquired what publicity could be expected as an accompaniment of that tax. He could see none that could be of service in placing the affairs of corporations before the country. He criticized the exemption of "holding" companies from the payment of the tax and said that their taxation would not involve double taxation, because it would not be paid by the same persons.

Finally referring to his course in antagonizing the tariff bill, Mr. Clapp declared that the Republicanism of himself and of those who agreed with him had been called into question. "I am willing to submit my Republicanism," he said, "to the only tribunal capable of determining it—to the people of my State who sent me here."

He declared that if a choice were given him of approving what had been done by Congress in the matter of tariff legislation or being retired to private life, he would readily accept retirement.

Aerial Navigation.

The achievement of Mr. Bleriot cannot be measured in terms of words. He has proved conclusively that the English channel is no barrier at all and that this hitherto troublesome wet ditch will in time be as easy to cross as the Thames. Incidentally Bleriot has been awarded nearly $25,000 for his feat and has been adorned with numerous medals. He is the hero to-day of Europe. It is worthy of note that the men who have accomplished the most with balloons and aeroplanes belong to the United States, France and Germany. The Wrights are every day making trials with their ship; Bleriot has crossed the English channel, and Reppelin has demonstrated his ability to manage a balloon. In a few years these pioneers will have perfected a ship that will sail through the air with a degree of agility that will make it useful for transportation purposes.—Winton Journal.

Hot after the Lockers.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug 6.—The Carmichael prohibition bill, far more drastic than the present statutory State-wide prohibition law, which passed the Senate this afternoon by a vote of 28 to 2, and which now awaits only the signature of Alabama's prohibition executive before becoming the law, has already scored a far-reaching effect so far as the operation of locker clubs and near-beer saloons are concerned. From all parts of the State come reports that the news of the passage of the Carmichael bill, near-beer saloons, and clubs wherein liquors have been dispensed to members under the locker system, were dismantled and to-night the State is almost as dry as it will ever be.

In Montgomery even social clubs of the high-st class have been closed and early in the afternoon the near-beer men began the removal of all drinkables from their places. With considerable weariness, a few of the saloons are disposing of occasional bottles of the amber fluid of the "near" kind, but even these of the cautious less than three extremely cautious in attempting to secure drinkables.

Governor Comer will probably not sign the Carmichael bill until Saturday afternoon. Both houses adjourned to-day until Monday.
